Grand old lady of the North Channel Island's swing bridge set for centennial celebrations

SWINGING INTO THE SUNSET—Expositor nature photographer John Savage was once again in the right place at precisely the right time to capture this powerful image that nicely contrasts the beauty of a fully-functional industrial apparatus with the glory of a North Channel sunset.

In 1944, when cars and trucks were allowed CPR swing bridge passage, Andy Watson piloted first truck across

by Nancy McDermid with files from Alicia McCutcheon

Sandfield's Andy Watson has the claim to fame of driving the first truck and the first commercial vehicle across the Manitoulin Swing Bridge once the bridge's transition from exclusively a railway bridge to one that was shared by both train traffic and vehicular traffic. That was in 1944.

Mr. Watson was employed by his father, the late R.O. Watson, at Watson's General Store, but preferred to work outdoors driving the company truck to Little Current or Manitowaning to pick up the winter supplies along with his trips to Sudbury hauling logs. The logs were harvested on Manitoulin Island by farmers who were looking to make extra money in the winter.

"The farmers took out the logs and piled them in the spring and we did the shipping," Mr. Watson explained.

The day the bridge was scheduled to open, Mr. Watson took a load of timbers destined for INCO's Creighton Mine to Little Current. Renovations required to make the bridge a dual-purpose structure weren't completed on the promised day, so Mr. Watson spent the night in Little Current to await his Sudbury trip.

"We usually shipped the timber by train (from Little Current) but LITTLE CURRENT—This year marks the 100th anniversary of the iconic Manitoulin swing bridge, gateway to the largest freshwater island in the world, and in celebration of this momentous occasion, Little Current will be hosting Bridgefest this weekend featuring a variety of family events centered around this engineering marvel.

The weekend will kick off with opening ceremonies at the east end town docks (east of the OPP boathouse) at 6:30 pm on Friday, July 12.

Following the opening ceremonies there will be a Classic Cruiser parade throughout Little Current, ending with a cruise-in at 7:30 pm from Water Street to Sims Street.

At 7:30 pm Bridgefesters can enjoy historical story stops and vignettes performed by the Ticklebone Theatre along the waterfront. Here you can learn about Little Current's rich history.

Events will get underway again Saturday morning with a 5 km fun run through Little Current at 8 am. For more information, or to register, contact Heather Thijssmeijer at manitoulinstargazer@gmail.com or call 705-282-8467.

From 9 am until noon there will be a special Northeast Town Farmers' Market downtown by the Little Current Bank of Montreal.

Throughout the weekend there will be a Celebrate Summer art show at the Little Current Public

Keith Hopkin has had 35-year fascination with Island's railroad
The Algoma Eastern and its swing bridge

by Robin Burridge

LITTLE CURRENT—Keith Hopkin's love of trains didn't stem from an early childhood romance with locomotives like many other railway enthusiasts, but they did peak his curiosity and by his late 20s he was captivated, joining railway associations and photographing railways and their machinery, which eventually led the Spring Bay native to begin researching Manitoulin's rich railway history.

"I used to try and spot trains

LITTLE CURRENT—Whenever a question of Island history arises in The Expositor office there is one name that springs unbidden to everyone's lips, Alexander (Sandy) McGillivray. Little Current's resident historian chronicled the Island's past within The Expositor's pages in his column The Little Current Story and has proven to be a wellspring of information about the region's past. Now, his collected columns have been edited, updated and revised into a 800-page volume, appropriately also entitled The Little Current Story.

Mr. McGillivray's column

Alexander "Sandy" McGillivray

began on January 1, 1990 and ran to December 1998.

"I thought it would only be for one year," said Mr. McGillivray.

OPP dedicates marine vessel to former commissioner

by Robin Burridge

LITTLE CURRENT—This weekend the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) will be holding a special dedication ceremony of one of the Island's marine patrol vessels to honour former OPP Commissioner Gwen M. Boniface during this weekend's Bridgefest Celebrations.

The public is invited to the boat dedication this Saturday, July 14 at 11 am at the Northeast Town east end dock (along Water Street East).

The marine patrol vessel to be dedicated, the Gwen M. Boniface, is Manitoulin's 32-foot launch. It is one of the Island's three marine units that service the Manitoulin area and is among 126 vessels the OPP maintains in its fleet patrolling over 84,610 square kilometers of lakes and waterways in Ontario.

BILLINGS—In September of last year the Art of Being Billings project was launched. The concept was created by 4elements Living Arts along with the Ontario Arts Council, LAMBAC (La Cloche Manitoulin Business Assistance Corporation) and the Township of Billings.

Billings was chosen as a community pilot project following a strategic planning workshop in the summer of 2011. Several focus groups were chosen to provide their input on what some of the priorities were in the township. One of them was to promote arts and culture.

Funding support has been received for a Manitoulin Island Cultural Mapping project that will span the next three years.

The working group for the Art of Being Billings (ABB) project consists of a collaborative effort of contributors who come from many walks of life.

4elements duo Sophie Edwards and Heather Thoma along with representatives from Billings council and interested members of the community come together to discuss and identify key projects, strategies and workshops such as star gazing (held last fall at sandy beach), story telling/community mapping (held during last year's Christmas in Kaganwong) and Land Art Days held in February and May of this year.

Family Free Fishing this week in Ontario

ONTARIO—Ontario Family Fishing events are a province-wide opportunity for Canadian residents to fish Ontario waters without the otherwise mandatory fishing version outdoors card.

The Ontario Government designates two periods throughout the year as licence-free, February 16-18 and July 6-14 (12:01 am Saturday, July 6 to 11:59 pm Sunday, July 14). During all other time periods, Canadian residents between the ages of 18 and 64 years must purchase a valid fishing license to legally fish in Ontario.

There has never been a better time to introduce a friend to fishing!

Participants fishing without a licence must fish under the conservation fishing licence limits which are set out in the current Ontario Recreational Fishing Regulations Summary. With the exception of the licencing requirement, Ontario fishing regulations, fees and limits continue to apply during licence-free days. Copies of the regulations are posted on the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources (www.mnr.gov.on.ca) website, and are available in print at Service Ontario centres and other fishing license issuers, as well as a variety of other outlets.

Rainbow Board approves 2013-2014 budget of $172 million

SUDBURY—Rainbow District School Board approved a balanced budget of $172 million for the 2013-2014 school year at the board meeting held on Tuesday, July 2.

"The board significantly reduced its ongoing expenditures in recent years," said Board Chair Doreen Dewar. "These savings, coupled with the declining enrolment grant that we received this year, enabled us to align our expenditures to meet our revenue."

"We achieved a balanced budget while continuing to invest in programs for students, such as full day, every day Junior Kindergarten," the chair added. "We also remain committed to the revitalization of Rainbow Schools, including construction of the new MacLeod Public School which is currently underway."

Rainbow District School Board continues to experience declining enrolment, resulting in less revenue for programs and services. While the board has received $1.6 million to mitigate the loss, total provincial grants have decreased by $3.6 million or two percent overall.

Projected enrolment for September is expected to total 13,453 students, an overall reduction of 558 (full-time equivalent). According to projections, there will be 260 fewer students in the elementary panel, 278 fewer students in the secondary panel, and 20 fewer students in adult education.

Seventy-six percent of the budget or $130 million has been allocated to salaries and benefits.

The total staffing complement for 2013-2014 will be a full-time equivalent of 1,526 employees, a net reduction of 38.5.

The budget reflects a decrease of 12 elementary teachers, 20 secondary teachers, two school administrators, 9.5 educational assistants and two other positions due to attrition. The budget reflects an increase of six designated early childhood educators for the ongoing implementation of the Early Learning Kindergarten Program and one leader

Swing Bridge past and present

The third and final in a series of interviews with a veteran bridge tender: Danny Larouche

EDITOR'S NOTE: The official celebration of the Manitoulin Swing Bridge's centennial is this weekend, July 12 to 14, and Little Current historian Alexander (Sandy) McGillivray completed an extensive interview with Dan Larouche, a long-time CPR employee who started to work on the Swing Bridge in 1952. This is the third and final installment of an interview conducted on December 4, 2012.

Q: In all your years on the bridge, was it ever painted or sandblasted like it has been recently?

A: No, no it was never sandblasted. Any rust or paint scales were chipped off and those spots were primed with red lead and then the paint was put on. I think they referred to it as 'graphite' paint.

Q: So that was just "touch ups"?

A: Oh no. They would paint the whole bridge at places. They used spraying to speed up their work.

Q: And how often would they do it? Every 10 years? Twenty years?

A: Maybe more than that, depending on the deterioration.

Q: I suppose it wasn't like the present time when they put canvas or some kind of fabric over the areas that were sandblasted or painted because of concerns for the environment now so the old paint won't fall into the channel?

A: Oh no, no, no. It was because of the lead in the old paint. I worked for a short period of time on one of those paint gangs. You just scraped.

Q: And that contained lead?

A: Yes, red lead used to prime.

Q: Environmentalists would have a fit these days.

A: Well, yeah.

Q: I suppose at that time they painted with brushes?

A: Paint brushes. Some places they'd spray paint. The bridge paint came in barrels and the paint crews...anywhere from 8 to 10 people on a crew. It was all part of the bridge building department. They had paint gangs, construction gangs. Depending on your seniority, if you were laid off construction, you'd get a place on the paint gang.

Q: Were there many repairs or replacements as in recent years, for example the main bearing?

A: Well, of course when they converted it (for road traffic in 1945) they stripped the whole deck and replaced it with all new bridge ties. Then, I think on top of that, they put 5"x6" timbers for decking for cars with the rails just slightly above the decking. That was probably the first new ties since it was built in 1913. I think the ties had a 50-year lifetime-creosoted. In 1947, I was working on the repair crew and they decided to jack the bridge up and remove all the roller bearings in the centre as well as the bronze disc—the main bearing. It was about 2' in diameter. It was about 1" on the extreme edge and about 3" in the centre. At the end there were roller bearings all around the disc in a bath of oil. The maintenance man would make sure of that, that the roller bearings were well oiled.

Q: It wasn't used much when it was swung just for trains?

A: No, no. By that time (1947) it was a few years after the 1944 conversion from exclusive use as a train bridge.

Q: At that time, were they swinging the bridge on demand?

A: Even for yachts with high antennae...if he could get to see the bridge swing...and we had to respect (the yachts' request).

Q: That's a lot of wear and tear on the machinery?

A: And all the antennae were designed to be lowered. I remember the most ridiculous situation. It was a speedboat but he had two long antennae...outriggers...many used it just for "photo ops".

Bridgefest party encourages us all to dream large

For people of our time, the previous one hundred years, a century, represents an imaginable period; a time span that we can deal with.

Anything longer, except for professional historians, is, well, a really long time ago and looks further back in time than most people are interested in or capable of imagining.

But a century? Most of us know, or know of, people who have lived for 100 years (often even longer) so the notion of "a century" fits easily into human comprehension while, by contrast, the two-hundredth anniversary of the War of 1812, while interesting to Canada's development celebrates an event that happened long enough ago that for almost all Canadians, this represents only an historical fact of which they've heard or read but about which they do not know a great deal.

(In the War of 1812 example, the distinct exception would be many First Nations citizens of Ontario who can trace their direct lineage from ancestors who migrated into British North America-present-day Canada-from what is now the midwestern US following their support of the British cause.)

But for most Canadians, the previous 100 years is about the longest epoch they are capable of holding in their minds.

How important, then, is the celebration this weekend of 100 years of Manitoulin Island's physical connection with the rest of Northern Ontario as we recognize the centenary of continuous operation of the swing bridge. This venerable structure is comparable to the great-grandmother or family friend who we may have helped to celebrate a similar milestone.

There she is, in all her refurbished glory and with her designation as an "Ontario Heritage Bridge," still carrying traffic to and from Manitoulin and still swinging open to allow important marine traffic to pass through the narrows at Little Current.

This is what 100 years looks like and one can only imagine the excitement felt in Manitoulin Island's small towns, farm communities and First Nations a century ago when, for the first time, the world's largest freshwater Island had direct traffic and transportation, other than by water, with the outside world.

At that time, in 1913, a year before Canada became embroiled in the First World War as a Dominion of Great Britain, for the people of that era this direct railway connection with the rest of Canada and the world-symbolized then as now by the swing bridge-must have been to them as big an event as the arrival of the internet, television and the telephone were to our own generation and the two preceding ones, but a single event that for pioneer citizens of Manitoulin would have rivaled or even surpassed all of these other aspects of modernity taken together.

That is why this weekend's Bridgefest festivities are so symbolically important: we're considering a period of the past that most of us are able to comprehend, we're celebrating a tangible example of this period, the bridge itself, and we're also celebrating the first time that the people who had been taking up lands here since the 1862 Treaty and the First Nations people living on lands reserved for them in that treaty could look beyond the boundaries of this large Island and imagine themselves part of Ontario's and Canada's economy as commerce could easily flow back and forth.

One hundred years is a lot to take in, but not too much.

This weekend, this summer and, indeed, this year let us think of those people, second generation Islanders by then for most of the people of European descent, who at that time must have had such high hopes for the prosperity and general success of this place at the time the railroad came.

We should put ourselves in the shoes of these believers 100 years ago and re-imagine a beautiful Island of prosperity 100 years hence and, as they did then, do whatever is necessary to achieve new goals, large and small alike, that will keep Manitoulin Island still viable 100 years from now.

Party on!

Larry Killens links western flooding and government scandal

A penny saved is a government oversight

To the Expositor:

On everyone's mind this week is the horrible, disastrous flooding out in western Canada which also has claimed human life. The true costs still to be close to an realistic amount have started at over 400 million dollars. This has insurance companies running for the doors to find ways in which to deny claims and or avoid obligations to their clients. This, despite record profits of banks (one report by Globe and Mail has the Royal Bank alone, in a quarterly period, not yearly, with profits of $1.9 billion) and insurance companies (2012 one report has them in one year at $4.4 billion).

Over $400 million early damage estimate? That is a familiar figure. Wasn't that very close to the cost of scrapping the power plant in Oakville, just recently thrown away and flushed down the toilet? This scandal still completely unanswered as to accountability and full disclosure to the public.

The ORNGE scandal had funneled over 730 million tax dollars over five years (Ontario Auditor General figure) and those costs had risen 20 percent above that in costs to taxpayers. That scandal went un-answered as to accountability and disclosure to tax payers.

Meanwhile those politicians who are charged with overseeing and watching the public purse were prorogued "with pay" and the federal government this year broke early for summer vacation "with pay."

One could become very angry when you realize that with all the financial abuse our wallets have suffered under the McGuinty\Harper Government, flood victims out west could be set back on their feet without hesitation. Not to mention having money left over, tax monies to provide for our aging population health care issues, unnecessary and damaging belt tightening in education.

Then if you factor in federal waste of monies that came from the same taxpayer pocket for the enjoyment of people like Mike Duffy, Pamela Wallin. Fishing trips of the defence minister and others, the gun registry and glasses of orange juice. John Baird using government accommodations abroad for personal use and enjoyment of his friends. Again at a cost to taxpayers to name just a few.

Medical care and access to it, always a battle for Canadians. Schools constantly having to justify their existence. A large part of budgets of helping, necessary, life sustaining entities to the people, paid with government (tax payer funding) spend a huge amount of their budget monies hiring people to audit their books, several times a year, finding ways to cut the bottom line while politicians go unchallenged. Meanwhile, no checks and balances to ministers of government free rollers.

Remember the mission statement of the government, a penny saved, is a government oversight!

Don't blame the ferry service for the drop in the tourist trade

We need thousands of fish stocked in our lakes and rivers, not just a few hundred

To the Expositor:

A short time ago, we all cried about no ferry service and no tourists. Well, don't blame the ferry service.

The people to blame are ourselves first, including our local politicians and our Liberal government and the MNR.

If any of you remember the '90s and early 2000s when we had a fishery on the Island, Lake Manitou was being stocked on a yearly basis. Now we get a few thousand every two years. This while the MNR continues to take eggs for off-Island lakes. Stocking in Lake Manitou is stock for two years, a few thousand, and no stock for two years. This cannot sustain a fishery.

During the '90s there was from 180,000 to 240,000 fish stocked in South Bay per year, now almost nil.

Our hatchery on the Blue Jay is only running at about half capacity.

There is no reason why we taxpayers should have to kiss the MNR's feet to get fish plants.

The MNR could not manage a bake sale for three Girl Guides. Lake Huron stocking from the MNR for salmon, rainbow, and steelhead is nil. They don't even help the local fish and game clubs. All the MNR does is put restrictions. The MNR is solely responsible for the collapse of our salmon fishery and our lake trout fishery.

In the year 2011, the state of Michigan planted over 16,000,000 fish into the streams going into Lake Huron. Our MNR has planted next to zero.

It's time that our local politicians, chambers of commerce, and tourist associations demand that we get adequate stocking in and around Manitoulin and don't listen to the BS that comes from these so called biologists.

Look what the MNR has done to Lake Nipissing. That lake, in one more year, is going to be nothing but a big swimming hole!

In the early 2000s there was an escape loss from a cage culture business of 240,000 rainbow trout in the North Channel. The MNR said that is would devastate the eco-system. Wrong! All it did was to create one of the best fisheries anywhere in Ontario and produce the Canadian record of 44 lbs.

Last fall, we had approximately 160,000 rainbow released into Lake Wolsley. What did it do? Only created a terrific fishery.

It's time that we demand that the MNR put 1,000,000 fish back into our waters. If you want tourist to get fishing our lakes, I'm talking 1,000,000 plants.

I'm going to tell you folks the MNR and the Liberal government do not care about the North. Everything that the MNR does for the North is dictated by politics out of the city of Toronto.

I think it's time to separate this province into 3 regions:

1. One province - the GTA
2. Another province - Rural Southern Ontario
3. Still another province - Northern Ontario (north of the French River).

Rob Ford could be our premier and bring back the 12th of July holiday. Wouldn't Rob Ford look good on King Billie's horse in the parade?

In closing, if we do not do anything, we will lose all of our fisheries and the MNR doesn't care. Maybe it's time to throw the MNR off of our Island and just keep enforcement officers. If all of the municipalities get together and take over all of the hatcheries, we could have good fishing again. I am saying that we need millions of fish to be stocked in our waters, not a few thousand.

This is our Island and we have to take a stand on this issue. Flower smellers and tree huggers and bicyclists don't bring anything to the economy of this Island. The people who come with trailers and boats and rent motel rooms and cottages for weeks at a time and buy $50 worth of gas a day and tackle and charters: this is what the Island was about before and could be again.

Manitoulin's original mystery

Part II: The 150th anniversary of the death of William Gibbard and 'The Manitoulin Incident'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This week Shelley Pearen concludes her account of fishery inspector William Gibbard whose death was attributed to the 1862 treaty of Manitoulin. Ms. Pearen examined the murder while writing her new book 'Four Voices, The Great Manitoulin Island Treaty of 1862.' Ms. Pearen is also the author of 'Exploring Manitoulin,' and co-transcriber/translator of a number of Jesuit letters and reports about Manitoulin, including 'Letters from Manitoulin' and 'Letters from Wikwemikong.'

by Shelley Pearen

William Gibbard was a son, husband, infantryman, surveyor, civic-minded citizen and the inspector of fisheries for Lakes Huron and Superior. By 1863 he was in charge of a six man, 28 foot keel boat. He earned $400 a year plus $1.50 per day when on the water and was on the lakes from May to the end of November.

But on Manitoulin, Mr. Gibbard was known as Eshkamejwanoke (The Gatherer of Fish Guts) by the Anishinaabeg. His notoriety had grown exponentially since 1859 when he had simultaneously announced and enforced the new fishing regulations. The government's Fishery Act of 1857 was neither understood nor accepted by the Anishinaabeg for whom fishing was the main source of food and income. They could obtain free domestic fishing licences in the name of their superintendent, but commercial fishing required tendering for specific locations.

In October 1862 William Gibbard had not only acted as a witness at the treaty negotiations, but patrolled for liquor traders and whisked the Commissioner of Crown Lands, William McDougall, off to the mainland as soon as the treaty was signed.

In June 1863 Mr. Gibbard acted on his belief that the fisheries were underutilized by the "American Indians." He visited Lonely Island (Akiwesi Minis) and leased the south side of it to two non-Native residents of Wikwemikong, despite knowing it was a traditional fishing station of the Wikwemikong Anishinaabeg.

Then he wrote a very inflammatory note to the Jesuit superior at Wikwemikong, instructing him to inform the Indians that: "I have leased the south half of Lonely Island - also, four miles into the Lake, all round the east, south and west sides thereof - to Philemon Proulx and Charles De La Ronde; that no Indian, or other person, will be allowed to fish on that ground, or to use the beach included in their lease, or cut wood on the same, unless driven in by bad weather, without the written permission of the lessees. By notifying your Indians, you may save them from being punished and sent to gaol, as I shall strictly enforce the law. Any complaint made will be followed up by me."

When Mr. Gibbard delivered his notice to Wikwemikong on June 28, 1863, he was met by disgruntled residents. The fisheries, treaty, ownership of the islands and governance were hotly debated in French, English and Ojibwe. Mr. Gibbard eventually retreated.

The signing of the lease by two non-Native Wikwemikong residents showed that they supported the government and not the band. Chief Ozawanimiki was deputed by the chiefs to order the lessees to leave the territory.

Mr. Gibbard, hearing of the intended eviction, returned to Lonely Island with his men. On June 30, 1863, Chief Ozawanimiki and about 20 men went to Lonely Island. The chief read the removal warrant to the lessees.

Mr. Gibbard and the chief argued passionately through an interpreter. Eventually the Anishinaabeg departed to discuss the matter in council. The following day the lessees were peacefully expelled by a large deputation of chiefs and men.

The Anishinaabeg complained to the governor general and the lessees complained to Mr. Gibbard. Mr. Gibbard informed his superior, William McDougall, the commissioner of Crown Lands and the man responsible for the 1862 treaty of Manitoulin. Mr. McDougall responded that Mr. Gibbard, as a magistrate, could uphold the law.

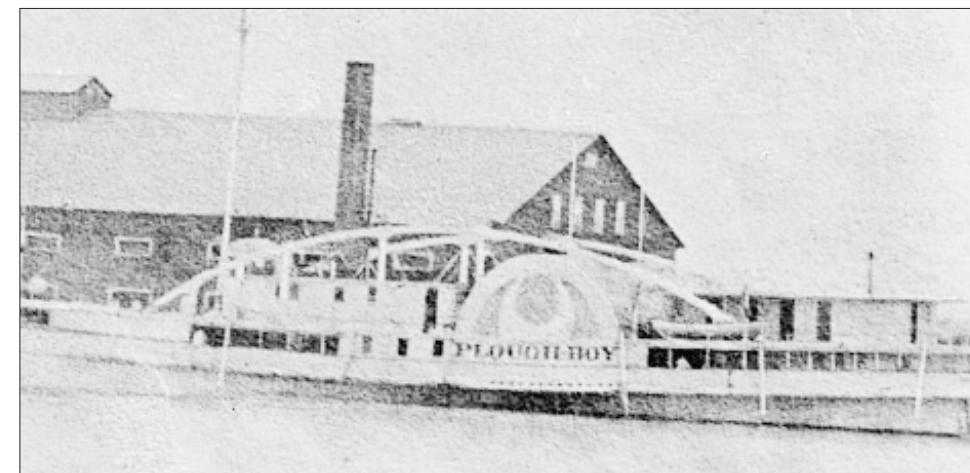

William Gibbard hired 21 "special constables" including current and former policemen and an assortment of tradesmen and fishermen to accompany him back to Wikwemikong to deliver warrants and summons for the Lonely Island expulsion. He intended to take the charged men to Sault Ste. Marie to face the charges. The special force landed at Wikwemikong on July 24, 1863 where they were met by an agitated band.

A heated three-language argument and scuffle ensued when Mr. Gibbard ordered his men to carry out the arrests. William Whitcher, who investigated the incident, reported that "the spectacle of 22 armed men laying hands upon and hand cuffing first one and then another of the Indians, some as defendants, others as rescuers, others for inciting &c., whilst the constables were palpably dissenting and indecisive among themselves - was not such a display barked. Mr. Gibbard's nonappearance at breakfast prompted a search. Barrister David Blain and Captain Smith conducted an immediate enquiry. Mr. Gibbard's disappearance was reported at Collingwood and a small search party went to search for him. His body was found in the water between Strawberry, Cloche and Heywood Islands. The memorandum book and leather money purse that he always carried in his pockets were missing, though his watch, eye-glass, pocket knife, compass, pencil, tooth-pick, handkerchief and coins were still on him.

A surgeon who examined the body "saw nothing to lead me to suppose violence had been committed" but found an injury on the

The well-equipped Ploughboy was state-of-the-art for the late 1800s, but it was to prove to be the undoing of the man known to the local Natives as Eshkamejwanoke (the gatherer of fish guts). Mr. Gibbard was found floating in the water with blunt force trauma to the head.

either of prudence or of force as could command respect." Mr. Whitcher noted that though he did not understand the "necessity or object of enforcing the service of summons by such an exhibition of force," Mr. Gibbard was "a dutiful and industrious officer," whose "bearing and language were, on the one hand, very aggravating and on the other were not such as to dissuade the Indians from their purpose and calm the excitement."

Mr. Gibbard and his men eventually withdrew with the promise from the priests and chiefs that they would state their case before a justice in Quebec. Reports and petitions were addressed again to Mr. McDougall and the governor.

Mr. Gibbard continued west with his men. He arrested Chief Ozawanimiki for the Lonely Island expulsion at Bruce Mines and took him to the Sault to be tried. Father Kohler and barrister David Blain managed to have the chief released on bail.

Meanwhile on July 27 the Toronto Globe broke the story of the fishery dispute, relaunching Manitoulin back into the headlines of the nation's newspapers. Manitoulin and its resident Anishinaabeg had only recently disappeared as public interest in the controversial 1862 treaty waned.

"THE MANITOULIN ISLANDS. OUTRAGES BY THE WAKUIMAKONG INDIANS. ARMED FORCE SENT TO ARREST FATHER KOHLER AND OTHER RING-LEADERS" led a three-column story. Mr. Gibbard must have supplied the details himself, anticipating recognition.

As Globe readers learned of the "outrage," that same day, July 27, 1863, William Gibbard, his 22 special constables, David Blain, Father Kohler and Chief Ozawanimiki and other travellers boarded the steamboat Ploughboy returning eastward.

The Ploughboy was well-equipped for the time. It had two decks, private and shared staterooms, and a dining saloon. William Gibbard occupied the captain's room but seems to have spent most of the night walking the upper deck. The "special constables" were housed about 10 to a room, though few of them spent much time in their bunks. More than a dozen men including some of the "specials" spent the evening playing cards and drinking in the saloon. Many of the passengers stepped ashore at the ports. At Bruce Mines Mr. Gibbard and several others went ashore.

The Ploughboy docked briefly at Little Current about 2:30 am Tuesday morning on July 28. As usual some of the passengers stepped ashore. The steamer left Little Current about 3 am. Mr. Gibbard was last seen walking on the upper deck 20 minutes later.

When the Ploughboy reached Killarney (Shebowahnaing) just past 5 am Father Kohler and Chief Ozawanimiki disem-

Le Journal de Québec also covered the Manitoulin problems from an anti-treaty perspective. It carried excerpts from the Globe articles, but concluded: This is the clear product of the excursion of Mr. McDougall, on Grand Manitoulin," and "the result of politics without depth promulgated by the Globe and practised by one of the radical leaders of Upper Canada."

The Globe's coverage prompted barrister David Blain to write a letter to the editor of the Globe. Mr. Blain, who had defended Chief Ozawanimiki at the Sault, was on board the Ploughboy when Mr. Gibbard disappeared, and helped to conduct the onboard enquiry. Mr. Blain explained that the Indians maintained that the fishery had never been ceded or surrendered by them to the government. He questioned the wisdom of a $4 lease of a fishery on which 700 Indians depended, as well as the legality of Gibbard's warrants, summons, and arrests.

Manitoulin Island coverage vanished from most newspapers in mid-September after the verdict of "wilful murder by person or persons unknown" was rendered. If William Gibbard was murdered, and I am not sure that he was, his assassin was never found.

His death was a result of the Department of Crown Lands expecting one lone officer to enforce the Fishery Regulations in a vast "wild-west" sort of territory where unscrupulous traders, speculators and adventurers outnumbered the Anishinaabe residents, honest settlers, and traders.

Two weeks before his death Gibbard had reported that he had been threatened by "a notorious vagabond" or "outlaw" and his men who had taken control of a lease on Horse Island.

Several of Mr. Gibbard's specials were unhappy with their assignment and the treatment of the Catholic priests. His own interpreter stated that "everybody in the boat knew Gibbard had the money with him to pay the Indians on Superior. I was afraid of the white people on the boat, not of the Indian, on Mr. Gibbard's account." Compounding Mr. Gibbard's problems, rumours that he had been disgraced in India circulated at the Sault just prior to the Ploughboy's sailing.

William Gibbard's death was mourned in Collingwood and the province. It was a tragic loss of life. Though he was unpopular with Anishinaabe fishermen, he had also brought some control to unscrupulous non-Native fishermen and traders who dealt in liquor as well as fish. His views on land surrenders, westward expansion and settlement were widely held and even endorsed by his superiors.

William Gibbard was buried in Collingwood. His widow and his sister erected a plaque in his memory in the Anglican Church in Collingwood, noting he had killed by an assassin while on duty when he was 45 years and six months of age.

In September 2011, William Gibbard's death was recognized with other historic deaths of officers at the 34th National Police and Peace Officers' memorial service. "Inspector of Fisheries William Gibbard - 28 July, 1863 (Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources) is the earliest of 822 names etched on glass panels at the Memorial Pavilion in Ottawa."

right temple probably from a blow that could have come from a fall from the upper deck. An inquest was immediately launched.

The Globe's provocative July 27 story was followed three days later with an editorial: "THE TROUBLES ON THE MANITOULIN" and a report: THE MANITOULIN ISLANDS. The Outrages by the Indians. MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. GIBBARD. The editorial blamed the priests for inciting the Manitoulin residents and claimed that "the officers of the law, bearing regular warrants for the arrest of offenders, have been resisted in the execution of their duty, and compelled to leave the Island without executing their mission. The tragic end of poor Mr. Gibbard, the chief of the officers of the law, casts a lurid shade over the whole transaction, but is not actually connected with it." The companion article provided a lengthy description of Mr. Gibbard's trip to Wikwemikong, the confrontation, arrest and Mr. Gibbard's disappearance.

Just as the 1862 treaty had provoked a national storm of newspaper stories, comments and counter-comments, Mr. Gibbard and the Lonely Island fishery caused a flood of pro and anti fishery, Indian, and Catholic sentiments. And once again some writer's positions and attitudes were based on political affiliation rather than sympathy with the parties involved.

The Quebec Chronicle, recognized as a pro-Conservative-party newspaper, asserted that the commissioner of Crown Lands on behalf of the government was guilty of a "double act of injustice and inhumanity" in negotiations with the Indians of Manitoulin, and that if "Gibbard has met his death at the hands of Sawamackoo, the blame lies solely with the Government, whose very acts courted murder, or intend to inflict it."

Civil servants are getting rich on taxes

Harper government bonus is heading in wrong direction

To the Expositor:

Well civil servants in Ottawa are getting a 50 thousand dollar bonus for their efficiency, but what efficiency? So far I have not seen any improvements within the government services except a downfall but it's probably for the rich only where efficiencies have improved but not for the poor—it just got more expensive for them because one of the MPs spoke on what is going on in Ottawa behind citizens' backs. The MP told how the Harper government is wasting taxpayers money again and felt that the citizens have the right to know how their tax dollars are being spent but it's the civil servants who are getting rich on your taxes. And the corporations, if they have this kind of money to spend they should restore all the social programs they have taken away and the health care but instead the Harper government is turning in the wrong direction because the civil servants do not deserve this kind of bonus because they are getting very well paid but the government is so blindsided when it comes to fairness.

Northwatch meeting held in Mindemoya on nuclear waste repository

by Betty Bardswich

MINDEMOYA—Ontario Power Generation (OPG) has recommended the construction of a deep geological repository (DGR) for the permanent containment of low and intermediate level radioactive waste products from the operation of nuclear power plants at Bruce, Pickering and Darlington nuclear generating stations.

This waste, a by-product of the operation of the nuclear power plants, would be buried at the Bruce site, the largest nuclear facility in the world at a depth of about 680 metres and about 650 metres from the eastern shore of Lake Huron. The underground components for the burial site would be about 15 hectares. This would be the first geological repository in Canada. Nuclear waste is currently being stored at OPG's Western Waste Management Facility (WWMF) which is located at the Bruce site. Waste from Pickering and Darlington nuclear facilities is transported by truck to the WWMF. However, the Nuclear Waste Management Organization (NWMO) is also looking into the feasibility of 12 other communities in Northern Ontario being suitable locales for burying high level nuclear waste as well as five communities in central Ontario and three in northern Saskatchewan. The communities in Northern Ontario include Hornepayne, Wawa, Blind River, Elliot Lake, the North Shore and Spanish. The project is being reviewed by a joint review panel under the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act with this DGR slated for the Municipality of Kincardine.

On June 18, the joint review panel announced that a public hearing would be held regarding the proposed DGR and allowed a time period of 17 days for people who wish to take part in the hearing to register. With a very short timeline for registration, tion, Northwatch, a non-profit coalition of environmental and social justice groups interested in supplying information to communities regarding the safe management of nuclear waste, set up workshops in Mindemoya, Kincardine and Toronto. The purpose of these meetings is to provide information regarding the DGR and to encourage citizens to participate in the public hearing, to be held in Kincardine with a start date of September 16.

Workshop organizer Brennain Lloyd led the forum in Mindemoya and provided information about the waste burial plan and the review process and offered assistance to those who might want to take part in the public hearings.

rock falls within the underground caverns holding the containers, that the limestone and shale rock formations may not act as an effective barrier to the migration of radioactive wastes and also that the computer model used for safety predictions may not be reliable.

As far as information about the public hearing is concerned, Ms. Lloyd emphasized the need for members of the public to be there to ask questions to ensure that the end result is as good as it can be. The deadline for registration was July 5.

OPP report on holiday weekend statistics

Statistics

This year's Canada Day holiday weekend kept officers busy from June 28 to July 1. During the weekend Manitoulin OPP was out in full force on our highways and waterways making sure everyone had a safe weekend. The following statistics were gathered and collected from the efforts of the officers over the weekend.

Eighty-three calls for service were responded to by Manitoulin OPP over the three day event. RIDE initiatives were conducted on our highways, waterways and trails across Manitoulin with a total of 558 vehicles, vessels and ATVs checked. As a result of these contacts the following charges were laid.

- 22 speeding charges
 - 2 other moving violations charges
 - 5 Liquor Licence Act charges (including water-way)
 - 2 impaired driving charges
 - 5 Small Vessel Act charges (no lifejacket)

charges (no lifejacket)

Staff Sgt. Kevin Webb, Detachment Commander for the Manitoulin OPP, stated that "Manitoulin OPP are gearing up for a long and busy summer, I wanted to make sure that the first holiday weekend on the island went as safe as possible. I am happy to report that the weekend was uneventful. Officers were out being visible and making contact with the public. This in turn acts as a deterrent for those that may choose to break the law, plus it makes law abiding citizens feel safe."

"I am extremely happy to report that the weekend went well with no tragic loss of life," he continued. "Now that summer is just starting we won't let up we will continue to be out there making our communities safe. I also want to thank all our officers that were out working this past weekend and making the effort they did as it paid off."

Maxwell off to Nationals, again!

Joseph Maxwell, who set a provincial record at last year's Ontario Legion Track and Field Championships, doubled that result by setting two new provincial records, one in the shot put and one in the discus. In his signature event, the shot put, Joseph bested his own record from 2012 by half a metre with a humongous 19.7 metres! Hopefully the silver medalist is able to see the big picture, that he lost to an elite athlete and his own shot-put of some 5m less is still a great result. In the discus at the National's Joseph had a stretch of bad luck and fouled out and wasn't able to record a throw. However, in Sudbury over this past weekend, Maxwell whipped the overweight Frisbee 59.29 metres! The toss was enough to beat the 12 year old national record set by Kyle Heff. Joseph now waits for the official invitation to Langley, BC for the Royal Canadian Legion Nationals in early August. Good luck and keep up the hard work, Joseph!

Stanley Cup hoisted by Islander

In all of the excitement during last month's NHL playoffs there was one local lad who has been integral to the success of the Chicago Blackhawks who may have been missed in all of the on-ice celebrations. With teams under more and more pressure to ice the best team possible yet remain under the salary cap, much behind the scenes' pressure is put on the shoulders of the salary cap manager. The manager and co-ordinator of hockey operations for Chicago is Kyle Davidson. The son of Gary Davidson of South Baymouth, Kyle was a large part of the rebuilding effort the Blackhawks when the cap was responsible for them having to trade a number of key players soon after their last Cup win in 2010. Kyle, who could be seen on TV in most games of this year's playoffs sitting to the left of 13 Stanley Cup winner, Scotty Bowman. In fact after the Cup was awarded, Kyle got to have a nice picture taken with Mr. Bowman as well as a sit-down discussion with the legendary hockey mind.

FedNor announces funding for Georgian Bay Cycling Route

GORE BAY—The Honourable Tony Clement, Minister for FedNor, announced last week that the federal government is helping to enhance tourism and strengthen the economy of the Manitoulin region.

"Tourism is a key economic driver in the Manitoulin Island area and the federal government is proud to support local efforts to increase the region's marketability," said Minister Clement in a press release. "The funding announced today will help local communities and businesses capitalize on emerging opportunities offered by cycle tourism, a popular and fast-growing vacationing trend."

FedNor funding of $22,500 will enable the Manitoulin Island Cycling Advocates (MICA), in partnership with the LaCloche-Manitoulin Business Assistance Corporation (LAMBAC, a Community Futures Development Corporation), to develop a strategic plan for proposed upgrades to the Georgian Bay Cycling Route. Once complete, the strategy will help determine the feasibility of connecting existing cycling trails to maximize the tourism and economic potential of the region.

The Georgian Bay Cycling Route seeks to connect Manitoulin with LaCloche-Espanola, Sudbury, Killarney, Parry Sound, Orillia, Collingwood, Owen Sound, Wiarton, Tobermory and back to Manitoulin.

"It's fantastic news," said Maja Mielonen, MICA chair.

Ms. Mielonen noted that she had been advocating the project for some time, pitching the cycling route to municipalities, economic development agencies, health units and MPPs around the route to much success. She has also pitched the idea to the Bike Means Business summit, Georgian Bay Destination Development partners and, most recently, the Ontario Bike Summit in Toronto.

This $22,500 is the second such amount, the first of which came from the province from the Ministry of Tourism Culture and Sport Tourism Development Fund. The Spark Advocacy Grant from the Heart and Stroke Foundation also gave $5,000 toward the project, rounding out the total funds at $30,000.

Ms. Mielonen reminds Islanders that the future is bright for cycling tourism, pointing to the ever-growing statistics from the Chi-Cheemaun ferry that sees cyclist passengers on the rise. Cycling tours also give affordable holiday options for both families and individuals and keeps spending local.

The MICA chair noted that over the last two weeks, five local residents have approached her, telling her that thanks to her work in seeing paved shoulders created and raising awareness about the sport, they had purchased bikes of their own. She has also noted, from her vantage point at the farmers' markets in Mindemoya and Little Current, an increase in both local riders and heavily lycra-clad bikers too. She also spoke to two Ottawa cyclists who went out of their way to seek her out to share their pleasure with Manitoulin's courteous drivers.

"LAMBAC has a proud history of investing in projects that create jobs and generate positive economic results for the Manitoulin region," said Dave Ham, chair of LAMBAC. "On behalf of the people, businesses and communities we serve, I would like to thank the Government of Canada and FedNor for supporting the continued growth of our economy."

The funding announced today is provided through FedNor's Northern Ontario Development Program, which supports projects that strengthen community economic development, enhance business development and growth, and facilitate innovation throughout the region.

"Our government remains focused on four priorities, as outlined by the prime minister, that Canadians care most about: their families, the safety of our streets and communities, their pride in being a citizen of this country, and of course, their personal financial security," concluded Minister Clement.

A small crowd gathered for a dedication ceremony of the railway jigger, which is now permanently installed at Bridge Park, located next to the Manitoulin Welcome Centre, just before the swing bridge. Jigger commemorates Island swing bridge railway history

by Robin Burridge

LITTLE CURRENT—An M-19 jigger, the last vehicle to travel on the ‘Little Current Spur’ from Espanola to Manitoulin Island, has made its way home, now parked at Bridge Park by the Manitoulin Welcome Centre, serving as a reminder of the community’s railroad history and commemorating the swing bridge’s centennial.

“I am just so thrilled,” Bill Caesar, local historian and man responsible for finding the equipment, told The Expositor last Sunday at the unveiling of the new jigger. “We are hoping that it will help draw attention to and maintain the bridge’s and Manitoulin’s railway history. The swing bridge and train really did change the Island’s history forever.”

As this year marks the centennial of the Little Current Swing Bridge, Mr. Caesar and other residents discussed the idea of placing a monument or piece of railway machinery near the bridge as a nod to its rich railway history.

“Through conversations with Rick McCutcheon (Expositor publisher) we discussed the idea of acquiring something to place in the park by the bridge to commemorate the bridge’s railway connection,” Mr. Caesar explained, noting that Mr. McCutcheon’s original idea was for a train engine or caboose, but this proved too costly.

Still with the idea fresh in his mind, an opportunity arose while on a trip to the Northern Ontario Railroad Museum and Heritage Centre in Capreol—Mr. Caesar came across a jigger that the facility was restoring and was connected to an individual who was selling another jigger through the museum’s curator, Cody Caccotti.

The gentlemen selling the jigger was Rod Wilson of Tottenham, and through several phone discussions, Mr. Caesar discovered that not only did Mr. Wilson have a jigger for sale, but one that had ties to Manitoulin.

In 2002, Rod and his friend Jim Brown used the M-19 jigger to travel the ‘Little Current Spur’ from Espanola to Manitoulin Island,” said Mr. Caesar. “Travelling though some of the prettiest country in Northern Ontario, they managed to get halfway across the Great LaCloche Island before running out of track as Huron Central Railway was pulling rails. Within a week, the entire line had disappeared and the Algoma Eastern Railway was no more.”

Due to its history and connection to Manitoulin, Mr. Caesar felt the jigger would be perfect to commemorate the bridge’s railway history, and with the help of fellow historian Dave Draper, began seeking financial support to purchase the machine.

“We were so grateful to the community for all their help,” Mr. Caesar said. “The Little Current Lions Club, Chris Loosemore, owner of the Edgewater Restaurant, and Linda Case of Hair Trends donated the funds to purchase the machine and Rick McCutcheon, on behalf of The Expositor, Chris Bousquet of Bousquet Insurance, Councillor Michael Erskine and myself put forward the funds for the transportation of the jigger from Tottenham to Little Current. In addition, Dave Organ and Mike Burnett offered to donate rails and fasteners for the jigger’s display.”

Once the associated costs with the jigger were in place, the concept was presented to the Bridgefest committee, and then to the Northeast Town council, with the committee lending its full support behind the donation and council accepting the jigger on behalf of the town.

“The town is very grateful for this wonderful donation, linking the swing bridge to the former railroad and history,” Northeast Town Mayor Al MacNevin told The Expositor. “It will hopefully stimulate conversation about the bridge’s history and serve as a reminder, commemorating both the Little Current Swing Bridge centennial and the railway history.”

Mr. Caesar also shared some history about jiggers with The Expositor, referencing Buster Keaton’s film ‘The Railroader’ where he operates a jigger.

“Once every week, all sections of the rail had to be inspected for all manner of problems such as loose rails, obstructions across the line and roadbed slippage or erosion,” explained Mr. Caesar. “From the earliest days of steam engines, these inspections were carried out by men riding along the rails on quaint little patrol cars. The first were three or four-wheeled ‘velocipedes’ which were hand powered. By cranking up and down on a lever, the men were able to scoot along the track looking for trouble. Of course, it wasn’t long before someone figured out how to mount a small motor to take over the workload. These motorized vehicles became great favourites of the general public and were commonly known as jiggers, speeders, putt-putts and draisines.”

“Doug Orr shared a story with me recently about jiggers as well,” added Mr. Caesar. “He said that a jigger would normally follow the trains leaving Little Current, about 20 or 30 minutes behind and put out any little fire along the railway that would start from the funnel sparks. Apparently, this one time in the 1920s the jigger left five minutes behind the train because one of the men operating the jigger had a girlfriend on the train and wanted to arrive in Espanola shortly after her. Because they were so close behind, they missed a fire and it ended up causing a large forest fire in La Cloche.”

The Northeast Town’s new jigger is now on permanent display at Bridge Park, overlooking the Little Current Swing Bridge, next to the Manitoulin Welcome Centre.

Hockey with heart

A ball hockey tournament was held last weekend in Kagawong, with funds raised going toward the Balfe family who recently lost their home to a fire. The winners were Craig’s List, consisting of team members, back row, Joshua Foster, Zach Whalen, front row, Patrick Shaw, Colin Lloyd and Craig Jackson.

...Keith Hopkin's 35-year fascination with railroad

on trips to Toronto growing up, but it wasn't like there were model trains under the Christmas tree or anything like that," joked Mr. Hopkin when he sat down with The Expositor last week, following the unveiling of the Northeast Town's new jigger, commemorating Little Current's railway history. "Living in Spring Bay, we didn't make it to Little Current very often, but I remember one time travelling to pick up a family friend at the Little Current station and seeing the train. It was a big deal and we took photos in front of the train and station."

"Another time, my family and I had travelled to Willoughby to pick blueberries," continued Mr. Hopkin. "I was coming around the side of a rock cut and a steamer came blasting through and scared the hell out of me." It was this same rock cut where Mr. Hopkin would later capture an image of a train in the 1970s rounding a horseshoe curve, a photograph which appeared on the cover of Branchline magazine, the Bytown Railway Society's monthly magazine.

In the early 1970s, Mr. Hopkin said he was having lunch with family at the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto when he saw an old steam engine and three passenger cars across the road.

"It was travelling on CPR's mainline and I was amazed to see that there were still steam engines running in Canada," said Mr. Hopkin. "I found out it was run by the Ontario Rail Association and soon after became involved. From there I began getting more involved with railway history and eventually photographing trains after buying a camera when my son was born."

His interest in Manitoulin's railway history was sparked by an image found in Turners of Little Current of the first train crossing the swing bridge. From there Mr. Hopkin began his research, speaking with individuals who had been connected to the railway, seeking photos and information from local historians and looking through microfilm of past Expositors.

"Georgian Bay was an important location for wealthy American tourists, who with the introduction of the railway to Manitoulin, were able to come up in their own private cars for fishing and vacations," said Mr. Hopkin, noting the first train crossed the Little Current Swing Bridge in 1913. "It really changed the Island. Prior to the railway, everything came to the Island via steamships, which meant that people would have to last the winter, waiting for the spring for supplies. Once the railway was introduced, people had year-round access to food, supplies—everything.

It would come to Little Current and then be carted off to the different communities."

A favourite story of the area's railway history for Mr. Hopkin is President Roosevelt's visit to Birch Island via the Algoma Eastern Railway, a story that Mr. Hopkin has heavily researched and even written an article on for Branchline.

"In 1943, President Roosevelt came to Birch Island for fishing and relaxation amidst WWII," explained Mr. Hopkin. "He came on his own train, arriving in late July and staying a week. It was a nine car train. His train was so important that they had it parked on the mainline and other trains would have to go around it. They even had the steam engine ready at all times to go back at a moment's notice."

"A special car was specifically built for the trip which had portholes on top in case the train became derailed and went into the water so that he could escape, two inch bullet proof windows and a reinforced floor in the event explosives were placed under the tracks," continued Mr. Hopkin.

In the early '90s, after Canadian Pacific Railway (CPR) terminated rail service to the coal docks on Goat Island, Mr. Hopkin, along with other railway enthusiasts, mounted campaigns to save the line and run sightseeing tours.

"Unfortunately, I wasn't able to generate enough interest and they are all gone now," said Mr. Hopkin of the rail. "When Bill Caesar launched an effort to find a piece of railway machinery to commemorate the Island's railway history I told him of a CPR Mikado, the model of steam engine that CPR began using in the 1930s on the line after taking over Eastern Algoma Railway, but is was over $100,000."

Though it's not a steam engine, Mr. Hopkin said he was thrilled that Mr. Caesar was able to obtain the jigger, which was unveiled last Sunday at the Bridge Park in Little Current.

"I think a lot of people are going to be surprised by the jigger and the fact that the swing bridge was built to bring trains across," concluded Mr. Hopkin, adding that he was happy there would be something to help commemorate the Island's railway history.

we had this one load left over and that's what I was doing that day," the 96-year-old shared with The Expositor. Loads would have typically crossed the channel aboard the car/truck ferry the 'Jacqueline.' (The Jacqueline had a carrying capacity of six cars and its service ended when the bridge opened to vehicular traffic.)

"I was the first truck to cross on that first day," Mr. Watson added. "I think it was a two-and-a-half ton truck, a Maple Leaf—a General Motors product." He recalled that southbound traffic crossed the one-lane bridge first on its way to Manitoulin.

"It was almost a day's trip over there to Sudbury and the roads were pretty crooked and narrow," Mr. Watson recalled. "They were just gravel roads and the hills were higher then. When I got to the hills I changed gears at the bottom to a lower gear because it was hard to change halfway up with such a big load."

...Collected writings of Island historian Sandy McGillivray

"If I had thought it would be as many years as it turned out, I might have been reluctant to start." Had that happened, Little Current and the Island would have been much the poorer.

Mr. McGillivray was chair of Little Current's centennial celebration committee. "At one point I suggested that someone should write a history of the town," he said. "Well, when someone makes a suggestion like that, you can guess what happened next." The columns began and continued long beyond the original estimate, but Mr. McGillivray had no problem finding things to write about.

In fact, there was so much material that he found he needed to organize them into categories and heading in order to bring them into a comprehensive theme beyond simply the history of the town.

"I thought it would be easier when I got into it," he said. "I decided to divide it up into topics of five-year periods." Business changes, health care developments, how welfare changed down through the years provided fodder for the writing mill. "You take welfare for instance," said Ms. McGillivray. "Around the 1890s you could put the whole thing in a peanut shell. People who fell on hard times had to depend on their friends and relatives to look after them."

Mr. McGillivray recalled a significant government grant that assisted with the centennial heritage project and the people who made things happen. Jennifer Billsborough was the first director and then Honorine Wright took over from her," he said. "The heritage project began in 1989 and the columns in 1990."

Flashing forward to little more than three years ago, Little Current's Norma Hughson was talking to her Genealogical Society friend Marilyn Irish of Burlington about the columns and the wealth of information contained within. Ms. Irish's Island connection is through the storied Manitoulin names of Lindsley and Dinsmore. "My friend said it is really sad that these are not all in one issue," said Ms. Hughson. "I asked her 'are you offering to type them?'" Three years later, the compiled, typed, edited, revised, retyped, re-edited, proofed, reproofed and re-edited copy was laid out, reproofed, re-edited and corrected into the final product, due to arrive this week.

Mr. McGillivray spent countless hours hovered over binders of typed copy, checking references and revising the copy to a form more appropriate to a reference book. "Sandy would have put a reference to 'Joe Blow's house' in his column and everyone in town would know who Joe Blow was and where he lived, but in the meantime Joe Blow would have died and only a few people would remember where he lived," said Ms. Hughson. "So Sandy would go through and change the reference to a house and street number."

The immense amount of work was one very significant part of the project, but Mr. McGillivray places the bulk of the credit onto Ms. Hughson and Ms. Irish. "It would never have happened without their work," he said. Ms. Hughson was quick to dispel that sentiment. "This was not a solo project," she said. "I would type and scan and shoot pictures," she admitted, but adding that "Sandy did all the writing, the editing and revising."

There was also a significant amount of research that needed to be done. "We had a lot of the columns at the museum and a lot of the pictures, but there were also a lot we didn't have," she said. But each copy of the column was

"It was pretty scary but I was young and didn't think much of it," he laughed.

His father had a contract through an agent called W.B. Plaunt to supply the mines with the eight-foot long logs that had to be graded and then creosoted.

"We had to pile them to have the inspector look at them. It was heavy work as there were no machines to lift them then," he said.

Mr. Watson had a special "public carrier" licence for hauling goods including wool, cattle and feed once the family got out of the timber business.

In 1944 he married Dot Watson and the two eventually owned and ran the family general store.

In honour of Mr. Watson's special crossing, he will again cross the bridge as a special guest in the classic car parade scheduled as part of the Friday evening opening ceremonies of Bridgefest this Friday, July 12 at 6:30 pm and he will also be present for the opening ceremonies at 7:30 pm on the east docks in downtown Little Current.

tracked down and each can be found at the Northeast Town public library on microfilm.

As to the column text so to the photographs. Each gem uncovered in the archives needed to be scanned and often they required some assistance to be ready for prime time. "Some were in such poor shape," said Ms. Hughson. "We already had some experience working with photographs with Photoshop, but there is only so much you can do." By all accounts, Ms. Hughson and company did manage to whip most of the photos into outstanding shape, but the carpenter sees the slightest flaw in a joint.

Mr. McGillivray said that he decided that the book would be a great resource for people newly arrived to the town. "The longer I thought about it, I realized that there is a lot of stuff in these columns," he said. "Recent arrivals might benefit from learning about the history."

The large concrete supports down at Low Island, the ruins over at Picnic Island, the coal docks and the railway, all these things and more have largely lost their historical and community context. 'The Little Current Story' is now there to fill in those blanks.

"So I said 'If you are willing to do all that work' I can take it on," said Mr. McGillivray. "If I had to pay for all of the work they wound up doing on this it would have bankrupted me. How could I say no?"

Years of back and forth discussions and emailing ensued. Mr. McGillivray is not much of one for computers, so it fell to Ms. Hughson to act as intermediary along with her other roles. "Marilyn would type it, email it to Norma, then Norma would print it out for me and I would mark the copy up by hand, then Norma would take a digital picture and email it back to Marilyn."

"It took a lot of time to get it 'perfect'" said Mr. McGillivray. "I put quotations around perfect because even with all of that work, there are still likely to be a few typos in there yet."

Mr. McGillivray said the project has given him a great admiration for novelists and writers. "When you struggle to paint a picture that conveys the meaning in a minimum number of words, well, it is quite a struggle," he said. "We had too many run-on sentences of which I am probably guilty."

Mr. McGillivray struggled over the price of the book, hoping to provide a bit of profit for the benefit of local museums, Mr. McGillivray plans to take no reward for himself donating his considerable amount of sweat equity along with that of Ms. Hughson and Ms. Irish. His reward is in seeing the job done and Little Current's history securely gathered together in one place for posterity.

The Little Current Story will soon be available at the Centennial Museum of Sheguandah and The Manitoulin Expositor office in Little Current with all proceeds going to the museum. An official book launch will be held at the museum once the book arrives (the first volumes of which are anticipated this week) and the book is set to be sold for $95. Manitoulin Publishing is providing the printing of the book at cost.

"We published the original columns in our paper," said Publisher Rick McCutcheon. "It seems only right that we assist in this project."

Mr. McGillivray has dedicated a good portion of his life's work in documenting the town's history and said that he truly appreciates all of the work of those who helped make the publishing of The Little Current Story a reality. "It was a labour of love," he said.

Manitoulin Health Centre holds annual general meeting, elects new board chair

by Rob Burridge

LITTLE CURRENT—The Manitoulin Health Centre held its annual general meeting (AGM) late last month, reflecting on a positive year of new relationships and fundraising successes.

Board chair Georgie Hari announced her resignation from the board, with Suzanne Norris elected as the new board chair.

"(MHC) is an organization that I am proud to be associated with and have lived a more enriched life due to the associations I have made since joining the board," said Ms. Hari, recognizing some of the initiatives that the board has achieved throughout the last year. "We have reviewed and updated bylaws, ensuring corporate and legal compliance. We also ran a very successful fundraising campaign with an objective of $650,000 to purchase new diagnostic equipment for both sites, but surpassed that goal, raising over $1,000,000—a truly outstanding feat that enabled us to purchase additional equipment and services."

Ms. Hari discussed how the board established quality improvement initiatives, which resulted in measures that enabled both staff and the board to monitor the level and quality of patient care as well as the board's performance.

She also reminded the board of their great work updating the strategic plan, "That includes input from many sources such as our patients, community, healthcare partners, government, staff and board. It is an exciting plan that is patient-centered and ensures we partner with all resources to ensure our patients' needs are met."

"It was not an easy decision (to leave the board) but it was helped by the knowledge that I leave behind a wonderful team of professionals and volunteers who will dedicate their efforts and many hours to 'putting our patients first.'

MHC CEO Derek Graham was the next to speak at the AGM, noting it was an "exciting and dynamic year, with many key milestones."

Mr. Graham noted that due to base hospital budgets being frozen across Ontario, an opportunity was created with the MHC working through the Ontario Hospital Association's (OHA) Small Rural Northern Advisory Council and how the dialogue resulted in the adoption of $20 million innovation fund for small hospitals.

"MHC benefited directly from allocation flowed by the North East Local Health Integration Network (NE LHIN) from this source, including the following examples: $85,000 for information technology improvements; increase access to patient transfer capacity though a funded joint pilot project initiative; funding to assist with the implementation of standardized patient order sets with other NE LHIN hospital partners; and the creation of an interface with local physicians for patient information transfer to their electronic medical record software and funding to enable a LHIN-wide project for an outpatient laboratory service improvement study," explained Mr. Graham.

Mr. Graham also commended the board on the creation of the new five-year strategic plan. "It was one of our major achievements," said Mr. Graham. "Working in alignment with many partners, the board's strategic planning committee, under the leadership of Suzanne Norris, has created an inspiring and intelligent roadmap to help guide the organization in the years to come."

He noted the significant progress of MHC in the pursuit of an addition at the Mindemoya site to house the operation of the Family Health Team.

"The Ministry of Health's capital planning branch approved the construction plan," Mr. Graham said. "The funding decision is now before the ministry and we are hopeful that our solid planning efforts will lead to a favourable outcome. We are all anxious to create the architectural drawings, go to tender and move things to the stage of an actual shovel in the ground. I am confident that this can be achieved within the year if funding is forthcoming."

"In closing, let me say that I am very proud to lead this organization," concluded Mr. Graham. "The board, physicians, senior leaders, managers and especially the front-line staff of our hospital should be immensely proud of our accomplishments and our range of services."

Mr. Graham also thanked long time board members Ken Ferguson and Ms. Hari "for all their contributions" and welcomed new board members Lorraine Autley and Chris Bousquet.

Both Ms. Hari and Mr. Ferguson were presented with certificates of appreciation from the board.

Chief of Staff Dr. Stephen Cooper began his portion of the meeting, thanking the board for their continued support of him in his role as chief of staff.

Dr. Cooper explained how this year marked the arrival of Dr. Tiffany Keenan and Dr. Kulczycki joining Dr. Al-Hadi to share the practice.

"Unfortunately, Dr. Keenan has decided to move on for personal reasons, which leaves the Little Current group short one physician. The Manitoulin medical staff will go into next year short two physicians, but I am optimistic that the oversupply of physicians in larger centres, the generous incentives for moving to rural communities and the success of the Northern Ontario School of Medicine will mean that the rural medical groups will be able to fill vacancies."

The Mindemoya Hospital Auxiliary reported that in addition to helping raise funds for the x-ray and ultrasound equipment for the hospitals, they also donated $15,000 toward the purchase of a class two biological safety cabinet, which is used to mix chemotherapy drugs without unnecessarily exposing anyone to the drugs.

"The MHC Little Current site has a gastro scope that is used by everyone on Manitoulin Island," the report from auxiliary president Mary Alice Lewis continued. "When it broke and needed to be replaced last fall at a cost of $41,400, we donated $15,000 towards the purchase of the new one. We also donated $15,000 toward the purchase of the new portable x-ray machine at the Mindemoya MHC site." Ted Musgrove reported that the Little Current Auxiliary had also had a great year, with book sales continuing to go well at the farmers' market.

"Our auxiliary continues to do established fundraising events such as bake sales, a casserole dinner, breakfast on the dock for the MacMan yacht race, book sales and running our tuck shop and selling Nevada tickets and partnering with other groups to sell raffle tickets and providing patient services such as a free television for in-patients, goodie bags and books and magazines," added Dianne Musgrove, auxiliary president, in her report.

The meeting concluded with the board saying fond farewells to Ms. Hari and Mr. Ferguson and sentiments of looking forward to another great year.

Community Services Advisory Committee initiative to give venerable Turner Park a facelift

by Rob Burridge

LITTLE CURRENT—Having tackled and improved Little Current's flower beds, among other initiatives, the Northeast Town Community Services Advisory Committee (CSAC) has now turned its sights toward improving Turner Park.

Last month CSAC chair and Councillor Melissa Peters presented the Community Services and Public Works committee with a CSAC plan and recommendation to update Turner Park.

"The Turner Park sign has already been moved, but we also hope to add rail fencing, garbage cans, stepping stones and to place the BIA (Business Improvement Area) art boards at the park," Councillor Peters explained of CSAC's initial plans.

Councillor Peters also outlined that CSAC would like to add a gravel path, picnic tables, information sign and viewing area/telescope in the future.

The committee accepted CSAC's recommendations for the park, and directed town staff to move forward with the plan as time and resources permit.

"Thank you for your input and great ideas to help improve the park," commented Mayor Al MacNevin.

Following the meeting, The Expositor spoke with town CAO Dave Williamson about the park plans.

"We have cedar rails left over from another project that we will be utilizing to build a fence along the western side of the park, separating it from the neighbouring property," said Mr. Williamson. "We will also be adding picnic tables and some barriers to detour individuals from parking in the park area. Signage will be placed at the bottom of the stairway leading to downtown to indicate to boaters and visitors the park above."

"CSAC has really done a great job developing this idea and council is very supportive of the initiative," concluded Mr. Williamson.

questions from those in attendance. He invited everyone to join him at the Legion afterwards for refreshments.

Mr. Anderson began by saying "it takes a lot of community interest, dollars, volunteers and commitment to run a fish hatchery. Tonight we honour this assembled group for your help with the new Gore Bay Community Fish Hatchery."

"The Gore Bay Fish and Game Club, the Town of Gore Bay and the Ministry of Natural Resources all have a very long history of co-operative fishery management," he explained.

It started in 1985 when the Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR) invited representatives from a number of communities to a meeting on the North Shore to discuss a new program called the Community Fisheries Involvement Program or CFIP. A small financial incentive was offered to allow communities through their local fish and game clubs to get into fish rearing. Two prominent citizens attended from Gore Bay, the late mayor Larry Lane and Jim Sloss, stated Mr. Anderson.

"Several communities started hatcheries, but only this facility remains today," Mr. Anderson explained. "Since 1986 we have collectively raised and stocked 2,987,836 fingerling salmon and trout (give or take one or two). Species include chinook salmon (2,083,123), rainbow trout (587,352), lake, brown and speckled trout rounding out the balance. This has made a significant contribution to the recreational fishery of the North Channel and south shore of Manitoulin Island."

Mr. Anderson stated, "A lot of folks have volunteered thousands of hours to achieve these results and to name them all would be next to impossible. I will highlight a few: the late Ed Third, Max Graham, Alex Witty and Larry Lane in the early years and more recently Bruce Third and George Calback."

Mr. Anderson also spoke about the role of the hatchery. "There is no doubt that over the past 27 years the Gore Bay hatchery has been instrumental in improving local angling and contributing to a world class fishery." He spoke about chinook salmon stocking and also rainbow trout, which are not native to the Great Lakes but have been present since before 1900.

The Gore Bay hatchery is capable of raising other species, however MNR permission and permits are rightfully required to raise and release any species of fish in Ontario public waters.

The Lake Huron Strategic Stocking Plan for species other than lake trout is currently being worked on with input from a cross section of stakeholders including several members from Manitoulin Island's fish and game clubs.

"We are hopeful," stated Mr. Anderson, "that at the conclusion of this plan opportunities will exist which will allow the Gore Bay hatchery to contribute to species diversity within our local Lake Huron waters."

Mr. Anderson introduced Ches Witty and Bill Oldenburg to describe the construction of the new hatchery and the operations involved in the fish rearing business from egg collection to fingerling release.

Inside the hatchery were four large round tanks which will hold fingerlings once they have reached a certain size. From there they are released. Several stacks of trays hold the eggs until they are ready to go into the tanks.

Following questions from the invited guests, Mr. Mantha presented the club with an award commemorating the grand opening of the Gore Bay Fish Hatchery.

Guests were encouraged to enjoy refreshments at the Legion where a special presentation was also made to Mr. Sloss, president of the United Fish and Game Clubs of Manitoulin (UFGCM), for his hard work and dedication to this project and many others. It was a genuine surprise when he was given the Queen's Diamond Jubilee Medal. Following the presentation Mr. Sloss commented, "I don't need an award, I just enjoy doing it."

"Sometimes you know a person who is deserving of this type of recognition right away, and often you will see individuals that receive recognition, and always want to step aside to recognize others," said Mr. Mantha. "Five years ago when I first came to Gore Bay I met Jim who told me about the importance of the Gore Bay Fish Hatchery and what this and sportfishing means to the Island community. Everyone on the Island knows the importance of the hatchery and sportfishing, and the North Shore knows how important it is to the entire area."

Those in attendance included Paul Methner of the Blue Jay Creek Fish Culture Station, Gore Bay Mayor Ron Lane, along with Clerk Annette Clarke, Councillors Betsy Clark, Jack Clark and Harry Van Der Weerden, and Mr.

Sloss' wife Sharon.

Mike Meeker, who Mr. Anderson refers to as "Mr. Fish," was unable to attend due to a previous commitment but was mentioned as being a "tremendous asset to our hatchery operations practically since day one."

Some of the other agencies and groups who have made a contribution include the Ministry of Natural Resources, Manitoulin and Area Stewardship Council, Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, Little Current Fish and Game Club and the UCFCM (including Jim Sloss, Ron Snell, Allen Clark, Rob Seifried and many more).

...Art of Being Billings to host open house

During the star gazing at sandy beach, approximately 30 people enjoyed a bonfire and sharing stories of "how did you end up in Kagawong?" Astrophysicist Heather Theijssmeijer was on hand to point out stars, although it was a bit cloudy.

In November approximately 20 people attended a 'community mapping' session at the Park Centre, identifying significant locations around the township, and sharing stories from these locations past and present.

During Christmas in Kagawong, Ms. Thoma displayed a map of the township and asked members of the community to mark their house or property on the map and give one word to describe it. One person simply wrote "home."

In February approximately 10 participants met at the library in the Leila Gordon family room for the Exploring our Creative Nature workshop: a fun exploration of patterns in nature and landscape experienced through drawing, creative writing, and imaginative art-making.

Following a walk in the beautiful sunny afternoon, they came back to work on their projects. Each person was asked to share their favourite colour and why. Many chose pink or blue. Some of the art reflected their chosen hue.

May's Land Art Day took place at the Kagawong River. Participants were encouraged to "create simple ecological sculptures that will stay in place, with found objects along the river. Inspired by the movement and sounds of the river." Some of the items are still intact two months later; however others are hidden by greenery along the hiking path.

A digital storybook is one of the projects ABB is working on. They will interlink in many different ways, some of which include: geographical and demographic information and land areas, parks, green spaces and harbour; arts, crafts and culture (including music and theatre), cultural and social activities and programs (formal and informal), economic activity, core values and qualities and profiles of community members (who they are, what they do, how they participate in the community).

Over several gatherings lists were compiled including the arts, human heritage, natural history and agricultural heritage.

Two other ongoing projects include listing all businesses and community events, Summer Fest is just one of many.

The next Art of Being Billings meeting will be held Wednesday, July 10 in preparation of the Open House which is scheduled to take place on Saturday, July 20 (in partnership with Kagawong Summer Fest at the Park Centre from 12 noon until 3 pm).

Invitation for submissions for the community open house (community mapping and digital storybook) are encouraged and can be dropped off at Edwards Studios 15 Old Mill Road (located at the Old Mill Heritage Museum on the second floor). The last day to contribute is July 14.

Items for contribution can include: stories, images, songs, special locations, past present and future visions and stories about a building or location in the township (last of present). Some other items welcome are artwork, songs or video that reflects the township. It could be an item from your home that tells a story about life in Billings, or you can submit historical documents including photos, letters or maps.

Archival, personal or other similar items will be photographed and/or displayed at the July 20 open house and returned to the owner.

For more information or with questions contact Jenna Carter at 705-282-0087 or Heather Thoma at 705-368-1855 or info@4elementslivingarts.org.

...third and final in a series of interviews with a veteran bridge tender: Danny Larouche

Q: Do you remember when it was changed to just swing on the hour for small craft?

A: That was after my time.

Q: Did you ever see spars of pleasure craft hit the bridge?

A: Just a sailboat as I recall. It got tangled in the bridge. He got caught in the current...didn't wait far enough from the approach.

Q: What do you think of the future? Will the bridge last another 100 years?

A: As far as the construction goes, I think it would and could. Some day, I suppose, they might replace it because of increased traffic.

Q: It's designated a heritage bridge now?

A: Yes it is.

Q: What do you think of the possibilities of a new bridge?

A: A bridge like the Burlington Bridge would take a lot of land on both sides of the channel—a lot of real estate on both sides—a tunnel would be the same.

Q: You'd have to go up as far as the rink to make the approaches?

A: Yes, that's right.

Q: For the few freighters coming though these days it would hardly seem worth it.

A: Oh yes. Only a few cruise ships that come in now. I can't remember when the last freighter came through here and I think it only came through because of bad weather out in Lake Huron...up the "turkey trail" on the North Channel.

In 2013-2014, the province allocated an additional $5.6 million for the Early Learning Program, which will be fully implemented by 2014-2015. The province has also provided $163,000 in capital funding for equipment and minor renovations to support Early Learning.

The budget reflects significant savings in the cost of utilities. Capital projects

Q: I guess you've seen the old Normac and Norgoma go through the bridge channel?

keep it from going counter-clockwise.

Q: So in your day you could turn it both ways?

A: Oh, yes. It could swing both ways for us. If the wind blew it counter-clockwise—that's fine. We'd just keep it going but that time (with the Norgoma) it would just go off and come back and latch a couple of times. You're taking about a minute for each operation of driving and pulling—a minute each.

Q: The captain would be blasting (his horn) out in Strawberry Channel wouldn't he?

A: He would be blowing from about where Harbor Vue Marina is now. They would always blast at about that point. You couldn't see them past the point yet. They were out of sight except for the masts.

Q: You could contact them by radio?

A: Oh no, no, no. We didn't have any radio. The coal dock had a radio. They could be in touch with a short wave radio to the coal dock but not with us. They would get information from the coal dock as to current and whatever but we had to depend upon the whistle...whatever they chose.

But any information they needed they got from the coal dock...Louis Baron, Cam Spec and others. They would give them information about the current, the strength and they (captains) made their decisions based on that.

Q: The current goes both ways?

A: Oh yes. What we found is that the current changed about every six hours and it may not necessarily reverse but it will stop and may continue stronger again or it would reverse. We found later that there is something like a 3" lunar tide in Lake Huron. Do you remember when they had a hydrographic station down on the town docks?

Q: Yes.

A: That's where we got the information—a 3" lunar tide.

Q: Would the commercial ships just give one blast or would they give the signal of their company?

A: We gave them one and they gave three blasts for the bridge.

Q: It was quite a noisy town when the coal boats were regular visitors?

A: Yes, of course, when they left we saluted them and they saluted back. I think it was three long and two short.

Q: And the coal dock, it had a whistle too?

A: The coal bridge (coal hoist on Goat Island) had a whistle but if it was for contact with the boats, I doubt it.

Q: They did have a whistle?

A: For moving rail cars underneath, I guess.

Q: Yes, it was a high-pitched one?

A: That was for the engineers on the locomotives to load the cars (under the coal bridge).

morning.

Q: Not far from the bridge?

A: That's where I saw them.

Alright Dan, thank you very much for this interview.

This is the final installment in the three-part series of interviews with veteran bridge tender Dan Larouche. This weekend, July 12 to 14, is also the Bridgefest Weekend that will celebrate the centennial of Manitoulin's iconic bridge.

Former Wikwemikong nurse visits community after 40 years

by Alicia McCutcheon

WIKWEMIKONG—After exactly 40 years, Bernadette MacSweneeey returned to the community she had called home for over seven years as a young woman, raising her two small girls, nursing and being a wife to Department of Indian Affairs teacher Robert MacSweneeey.

The couple moved to Canada from their native Northern Ireland in 1966 during a time when The Troubles were raging at home, first to Toronto and then, answering a Department of Indian Affairs ad, to Wikwemikong. They arrived in January aboard the Greyhound coach to Espanola and were introduced to their new living arrangements in the teachers' quarters at the Buzwah Church (St. Ignatius).

"The superintendent picked us up and took us to Buzwah," Ms. MacSweneeey recalled from the outside porch of Helena Trudeau's apartment at the Wikwemikong elders' residence, where she was staying. "We had one bedroom, a kitchen and a living room." When asked for her first impression of Manitoulin and Wikwemikong, Ms. MacSweneeey laughed, "It was cold. Very snowy and cold."

In August of 1967 the couple moved to Kaboni to another teacher's residence located across the street from Basil Mandamin's store, as Mr. MacSweneeey was promoted to principal of the primary school in Kaboni. She noted that while she and her husband lived in Kaboni, a young woman, Susanne Erckhart, came to live with them while she also worked in the community as a teacher. Ms. Erckhart later married Dave Smith and the busy couple remains in Manitowaning.

"We arrived here when I was only 24," she reminisced. "When you're 24, you're game for an adventure, aren't you?"

A nurse by trade, Ms. MacSweneeey nursed in Manitowaning, recalling fondly Mrs. Gleason and Dr. Tripp and also worked at the Wikwemikong clinic. "I also worked for the Children's Aid Society based out of Manitowaning, and that's how I met Helena," she said of her friend with whom she has remained in contact after moving back to Northern Ireland all those years ago.

In August of 1968 the couple moved again, this time to the heart of Wikwemikong village to one of the "teacherage" motel units. The following year, on March 18, 1969, the couple gave birth to their first daughter at St. Joseph's Hospital in Sudbury. Ms. MacSweneeey continued to nurse with the Department of Indian Affairs, do social work with the CAS as well as nursing at the brand new Wikwemikong nursing home run by administrator Boniface George.

On March 10, 1971, the MacSweneeys welcomed a second daughter to the family who spent her first two years of life on Manitoulin with her mom, dad and older sister. In June of 1973, the family relocated back to Northern Ireland.

"When we first came to Canada we meant to stay for two years—we ended up here for seven-and-a-half years," she said.

"I greatly admire the Native people," Ms. MacSweneeey continued, noting that she's seen a great deal of progress in the community in the intervening years, keeping in touch with many of her old friends. "I always said I would come back for a visit."

Both daughters, in fact, have come back to see the place they were born and raised for a short period of time and had encouraged their mother to do the same.

Ms. MacSweneeey said she continued to nurse upon her move home, both in Armagh and Belfast. Since retiring, Ms. MacSweneeey runs a bed and breakfast in the coastal town of Newcastle in County Down. "We have the forest, sea and mountains—it's very beautiful," she said. Those wishing to stay at this B and B better hurry, though, as Ms. MacSweneeey has her mind on selling the place and moving to Armagh to be closer to her daughter, grandchildren and her four brothers and four sisters.

"I am so glad I made the trip back to Wiky," she said, "It's now such a progressive, thriving community. I see a proud go-ahead people who are very socially aware."

"This island is so beautiful, especially at this time of year," Ms. MacSweneeey continued. "It's been so nice to spend time with old friends and to be back here at age 72."

The retired nurse said she worried over the obvious drop in lake levels, noting that this issue "needs to be addressed as soon as possible with an emphasis on correction—it's one of our most precious natural resources."

"Don't ignore it before it's too late," she urged.

In her two weeks she had attended a powwow, went to the RCMP Musical Ride, visited Sudbury, took in a barbecue and visited with friends. Watching the Burns Wharf production of 'Ruddigore,' celebrating National Aboriginal Day and catching a ride on the Chi-Cheemaun was still on her list of things to do as of this interview.

"The people here are so self-determined, which is lovely to see," Ms. MacSweneeey added. "My late husband would be pleased to see this too, seeing his former students as leaders—something he tried to instill in them."

Bernadette MacSweneeey, right, poses with long-time Wikwemikong friend Helena Trudeau at her residence. Ms. MacSweneeey returned to Wikwemikong after a 40 year absence.

Central Manitoulin sends electoral question to committee

by Michael Erskine

CENTRAL MANITOULIN—Although there were about 10 people in attendance at a public meeting to examine the electoral system in Central Manitoulin that was set, in part, to follow up a previous presentation made to council by Steve Orford, a former Central Manitoulin councillor, where he suggested the time had come to eliminate the municipality's ward system in favour of a system where all councillors would be elected at large, council in the end decided to send the question to committee for further study.

"There did not seem to be a lot of interest," said Councillor Ted Taylor.

"I certainly did not get a sense that there was any interest in changing the number of elected councillors," said Reeve Gerry Strong.

"I think there was a lot of confusion on the part of the public as to what the meeting was all about," said Councillor Derek Stephens. "The date was bad. There was the Grade 8 graduation and a lot of other stuff going on. I myself would like to see this go to committee, finance and administration."

Councillor Gloria Haner said she believed about three or four out of the 10 people present at the public meeting were in favour of reducing the council to six members elected at large.

"It seemed to me to be quite evident that people saw their representation in local context," said Councillor Stephens. "What came out to me when we were looking for a representative for Sandfield was that people wanted someone appointed from Sandfield to fill that vacancy."

"There definitely did not seem to be any interest in cutting the number of councillors to four," said Councillor Taylor.

A motion was put forward by Councillor Taylor and Councillor Stephens to send the question to be debated and studied further at the Finance and Administration committee. If council representation is to be changed, those changes would have to be in place fairly soon, as such changes must take place in the context of the Ontario Municipal Act. Before voting on any restructuring proposal, council must give notice, hold at least one public meeting, and consult with persons and bodies as the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing may prescribe. Realistically speaking, it would require at least a year of lead time before an election in order for those changes to be in place for the next municipal election.

Why Work with a Buyer's Agent?

1. IT'S FREE - That's right, hiring a buyer's agent won't cost you a thing. It's the seller who pays the commission, not the buyer.

2. IT'S CONVENIENT - Targeting the right neighborhoods, finding homes that fit your criteria and scheduling showings can be a full time job. If you already work 9-5 it can become daunting and overwhelming very quickly.

3. MARKET KNOWLEDGE - The most important service a buyer's agent brings to the table is market knowledge. Understanding the local market is key to finding the best home at the best price possible.

4. PROFESSIONAL NEGOTIATION - Making an offer and negotiating with a seller is by far one of the most specialized parts of the home buying process.

5. ACCESS TO COMPS/SALES INFO - A real estate buyers agent researches and conducts a Comparable Market Analysis for the property type, market and neighborhood to ensure that you do not pay more for the property.

Sheguiandah holds traditional community powwow

by Robin Burridge

SHEGUIANDAH—Sheguiandah First Nation held its traditional community powwow last weekend, boasting seven drum groups and over 90 dancers.

The weather was sunny for the three-day powwow, which featured several new updates to the powwow grounds including a new arbour in the centre of the grounds (used to host the drummers), an update to the registration area and a new sacred fire arbour.

In addition to over 20 vendors, dancers from across Manitoulin and the province were present, utilizing the newly extended campground area.

A highlight of the weekend was host drum group Eyabay, a world championship drum group from Red Lake, Minnesota.

Other drum groups included Black River, Abtaa-Dibikgeens, High Eagle, Blackbull Singers, Big Thunder and Young Guns.

"Grand entry is the most beautiful thing," began powwow MC Roger Daybutch prior to grand entry at 1 pm on Saturday. "It is our connection to the spirit and to the creator. The entry is always at the east, as this is where the sun rises and the day begins. The powwow is a celebration of who we are as Anishinaabe people and this community has been proud of who we are and holding powwows for a long time."

The first individuals to enter were the eagle staff holders, including Sheguiandah Chief

Orville Aguonie carrying the community's newly commissioned eagle staff.

Visiting eagle staffs included Henry Eshkibok from the Wikwemikong Unceded Indian Reserve, Floyd Bais from Brunswick House First Nation and Bruce Sandy from the Georgian Bay Native Friendship Centre.

The flags included Matthew Waindubance with the warriors flag, David Recollet with the Union Jack, Albert Nahwegzhic with the missing in action/prisoner of war flag, Cody Towers with the United States flag, May Wehejiki caring the Sheguiandah flag and Lincoln Jackson with Canadian flag.

Following grand entry, powwow head elder Jake Ago Neh spoke to the large crowd of community members, visiting First Nations, Islanders and tourists.

"Welcome visitors from other places and other lands," said Mr. Ago Neh. "Life is to be enjoyed and shared and I wish everyone a good day."

The next to speak was Chief Aguonie, who also welcomed everyone to the community.

"Welcome everyone to our community," Chief Aguonie said, noting the impressive drum groups, dancers, and volunteers that made the powwow come to fruition. "Have a fun weekend and enjoy everything our community has to offer."

The dances began with an intertribal led by head dancers Paskwa Lightening and Casson-

Top Northern artists showcased at 36th annual La Cloche Art Show

by Michael Erskine

WHITEFISH FALLS—The enthusiastic crowd at the opening/awards ceremony of the 36th Annual La Cloche Art Show spilled out the Whitefish Falls fire hall into the parking lot, as large or larger than that of any previous edition of the popular art exhibit.

"It's going very well," beamed Carmela Ciccarelli, this year's La Cloche Art Show committee chair. "This is really exciting because it is my first year and there are so many people and it is just such a beautiful day. Hopefully it will be a profitable experience for the community."

The art show runs between July 6 and July 14 from 11 am to 5 pm daily. This year's Distinguished Artist is Brigitte Bere, an artist with a strong grasp of a wide range of media and many years of practicing her talent. Ms. Bere's The Chinese Teapot is the 2013 raffle draw prize, to be drawn at 5 pm July 14.

As is tradition, Ms. Bere held a workshop prior to the opening reception. Her subject was diffused acrylics. "Acrylic can be so very flexible," noted Ms. Bere, her eyes alight with animation over her topic, despite having spent hours on the subject just a few moments prior. Most observers are familiar with acrylic paintings similar to oils, with thick opaque and bright colours. The new acrylic paints contain a significant amount of pigment with an emulsion that allows the paint to be diluted to the point it can mimic watercolour paints, she explained.

"I was deeply honoured and excited (to be named distinguished artist) because I realize that it is a once-in-a-lifetime experience," she said. "This is something you only get to experience once in your lifetime, if at all."

Although the audience was quite boisterous at the beginning of the awards ceremony, the room quieted to pin-drop silence as show founder Ivan Wheale delivered a passionate address recalling his fellow founders. Mr. Wheale dispelled the transitory melancholy air before it could settle in with his trademark twinkle of the eye.

"This has grown so very far beyond our wildest expectations," he said. "It gets better each and every year."

This year's Best of Show award went to Alfredo Marin-Carle, appropriately named A Conversation with Ivan Wheale.

Among the awards presented at the July 5 ceremony were first place in watercolour to Doug Balford for Washed Up, second place going to Linda Finn for On the Edge and two honourable mentions, one for Doug Bradford's Kate and another for Richard Edwards Clear Water.

First place in oil went to Karin Fediw for Winter Glow, while second place went to Sharon Preen for Lily Creek. Honourable mentions went to Karin Fediw for Northern Rapids and Sharon Preen for Last Ice, Morning Light.

First place in acrylic went to Vivian Ripley for Sunlit Flow, while second place went to Carene Little Deep Inside. Honourable mentions went to Martin Foley for Red Canoe and Peter Bering for Waiting Pelican.

First place in Mixed Media went to Lionel Venne for Impressions of a Northern Landscape while second place went to Angela Polowin for Resilience III. Honourable mention went to Linda Finn for The Goodness of the Day.

First place in Pastel went to Kathy Dolan for Tomorrow Beckons, while second place went to

First place in Sculpture went to Don McKenzie for Wild Turkey

Feather (tail feather), while honourable mention went to Don MacKenzie for Eastern Baby Bluebirds.

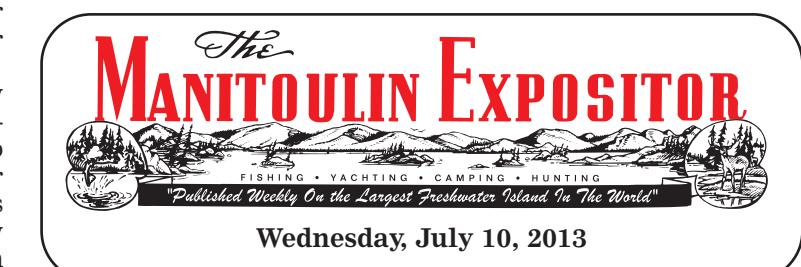

The winner of the art committee's choice was Monique Legault Porkola for Sunset on the Dunes. This was Ms. Porkola's first entry into the La Cloche Art Show and her smile was almost as wide as her winning canvas.

The winner of the Peg Forbes Memorial Award, in honour of one of the founders of the La Cloche Art Show was presented to Beth Bouffard by co-founder Ivan Wheale for her La Cloche Welcome (the summit).

In the elementary school art category, first place went to Georgia Roy of Little Current for Sun Flower and second place went to Madison Kotyluk for Doritos. Honourable mentions went to Monikka McGregor for Keeping Watch, Zoe Smith for Purple Birches, Taylor Semeniuk for Long Winter Night and Athena Jackie Migwanbe for Finding Your Voice.

This year's art show committee were Jon Butler, Kerry Butler, Trudy Bolduc, Mary Sue Bourget, Carmela Ciccarelli, David Cole, Sheila Cole, Nicole Medynski, Nancy Perfetto, Ginny Soderman and Margo Thomas.

THE MANITOULIN EXPOSITOR—1A

Manitoulin welcomes invasive species community liaison

by Alicia McCutcheon
MANITOULIN—Manitoulin has another weapon in its arsenal against invasive species, both on land and water, through invasive species community liaison Calvin Crispo.

Mr. Crispo, a recent graduate of the Sir Sanford Fleming College's environmental technician program, has plans to head to Trent University in the fall to study environmental science.

Employed through the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters (OFAH), Mr. Crispo is partnered with the Manitoulin Area Stewardship Council and Manitoulin Streams, working out of the latter's office in Manitowaning.

Mr. Crispo is no stranger to Manitoulin and its geography, hailing from Blind River and having family on Manitoulin too. He explains that he is the go-to person for all things invasive species, for identification and questions, with the goal of increasing public awareness across the board for Islanders, visitors to Manitoulin, anglers and hunters. He noted the giant hogweed and its particularly nasty side effects when humans come into contact with its sap. Mr. Crispo can also help landowners determine the difference between this invasive plant and its harmless look-alike, cow parsnip.

Of particular concern to Mr. Crispo is the spread of invasive species through practices such as transferring a boat from one body of water to another without properly cleaning the hull and emptying the bilge first, transferring bait fish from one lake to another, bringing firewood from off-Island to Manitoulin, as well as invasive plants.

"It's definitely important to decontaminate equipment—anglers and hunters should always properly clean their equipment—this can eliminate, or potentially eliminate, the spread of invasive species," the liaison explained, noting that bait fish should be disposed of at an on-land waste disposal site.

"Right now I'm introducing myself to Manitoulin and I'm available to come for (invasive species) identification," he said. "I can also do presentations for the public."

Mr. Crispo noted that the OFAH is currently undertaking the creation of an online tracking database for invasive species, which the public will also be able to use by uploading photos taken from their mobile devices of a potential invasive critter which can then be mapped by the OFAH as to its exact location.

Mr. Crispo will be a regular at the Island festival scene, as well as aboard the Chi-Cheemaun, reminding visitors how to keep invasive species to Manitoulin at bay, or at least how to help stop the spread of those that have already made their home on Manitoulin, such as the invasive reed phragmites, giant hogweed, round goby, spiny water flea, rusty crayfish and zebra mussels. Keep an eye out for his bright blue shirt denoting him as part of the invasive species awareness program and be sure to invite him to your event. Mr. Crispo can be reached at calvin_crispo@ofah.org or by calling the Manitoulin Streams office at 705-859-1653.

Visiting Manitoulin?

The 20-kilometre journey: Wikwemikong Unceded Indian

by Michael Erskine

WIKWEMIKONG—When the earliest European travellers arrived at the fishing community of Wikwemikong, variously translated as 'at the gravel bottom' or 'bay of the beaver' according to historian Shelley Pearen, they found a small Catholic Odawa settlement clustered about the bay. By 1842 the village boasted 78 buildings for 94 families with many of the accoutrements of civilization, including teachers and school houses, churches and priests and more than 500 residents.

Wikwemikong is the oldest continuously inhabited community on Manitoulin and it remains to this day the title of largest community to be found within the Island's shores. Wikwemikong holds the distinction of never having been ceded by treaty to the federal government, hence its full official name, Wikwemikong Unceded Indian Reserve which is worn with pride by its inhabitants.

But Wikwemikong's wonders begin even before crossing its borders as you travel up Meredith Street to Cardwell Street at the far eastern end of the Town of Manitowaning the road turns into Wikwemikong Way. While still on Cardwell Street, the 18-hole Rainbow Ridge Golf Course can be found on the right-hand side of the road. The golf course was purchased a number of years ago by the Wikwemikong Band and continues to be a source of economic prosperity and employment for band members, who also can be found in considerable numbers upon its links dur-

The entrance to Wikwemikong is marked by a log sign announcing the boundary and a sign proclaiming the community's status as the 2006 Cultural Capital of Canada, as well as a number of signs celebrating some local celebrities including country music star Crystal Shawanda, Canada's Got Talent finalist and world champion hoop dancer Lisa Odjig.

Continuing up Wikwemikong Way, the turnoff to the satellite communities of Kaboni and South Bay arrives on the right and travelling a little further up the road brings you to Buzwah Park on the left.

A small community church can be found on the right and just up the road on the left is Zaawmikbbng Native Arts and Crafts, its entrance easily marked by a pair of totem poles.

Continuing a couple of kilometres up the road past Buzwah is the community's cemetery on the right. A cobblestone base supports a cross, a war memorial constructed by local stonemason Dominic Odjig. Nearby, a large sign celebrating many of the community's more accomplished members such as founder of the Eastern Woodland style of art Daphne Odjig and Federal Court Justice

...Visiting Manitoulin? Wikwemikong is Manitoulin's oldest continuous settlement

Leonard S. Mandamin.

A number of art galleries of internationally recognized artists such as Leland Bell and James Simon (Mishibinijima) can be found on the left hand side of the road heading down the hill and into the Village of Wikwemikong. Tours of the artist's galleries can be arranged through the Wikwemikong Tourism office in the village.

Entering the village, a group of new buildings located on the right hand side of the road proclaim the ongoing development of the community, including a new fire hall and headquarters of the Wikwemikong Tribal Police. A small plaza on the right houses the Wikwemikong Tourism infor-

Further down the road into the village is Andy's. Begun as a humble gas station by war veteran Andy Manitowabi, the business grew to include a grocery and a department store that now supplies most of the surrounding community's needs. As an economic success story, Mr. Manitowabi's entrepreneurial spirit evokes that of the region's first Native settlers, whose fishery supplied many of the burgeoning cities of the American and Canadian Great Lakes.

Turning right on Kaboni Road will bring you to Thunderbird Park, home of the famous Wiky Powwow, grandmother of all powwows in the North. Now labelled a traditional festival with expanded offer-

Rabbit Island, Buzwah, Kaboni and South Bay.

Continuing on past a nursing home and two elementary level schools on the left hand side of the road, a rise in the road leads to the Holy Cross Mission ruins and a Jesuit mission church whose cornerstone was laid on the feast of St. Ignatius, July 31, 1849. The church was built entirely by the local Native population, excercising skills and trades taught in the Jesuit schools and apprenticeships and local materials. Holy Cross Mission served as the headquarters for the Jesuit orders missionary efforts across the North.

The church was gutted by a 1954 fire that also destroyed an adjacent school creating the Holy

Holy Cross Mission Roman Catholic Church and its accompanying ruins provide a window into the region's missionary past and connection to the Jesuit Order. Many of the carvings and paintings in the historic church, nicknamed the Mother of Missions which served as the headquarters for missions in Canada's North, are outstanding.

The hall served as the community's church while Holy Cross mission was being built.

Beside the church is a small cemetery containing the community's cenotaph and stones memorializing many of the modern Wikwemikong's early residents.

Smith Bay nestled on the shores beneath the ruins is believed by many to be the site of the original 1648 Jesuit mission to the region. A large log building houses the Wikwemikong Heritage Organization, a group dedicated to preserving the community's cultural and historical heritage. Low water levels have hampered the new marina somewhat, but launching a boat into the bay should present few problems. Doubling back to up towards the church you will find Beach Road on the right, follow Beach Road to its conclusion, you will arrive at Bebamikawe Memorial Trail Outdoor Fitness Park, a 1.5km double tract trail with five outdoor fitness stations and a lakefront picnic pavilion. The park is the Island's only professionally designed and built hiking trail with a 12 kilometre run of easy to moderate single tract hiking trails following the Niagara Escarpment. There are three lookouts with educational signage describing the historic and ecological significance of the area and a picnic pavilion and eco-friendly restroom facility at the trailhead. Guided tours can be booked at the Wikwemikong Tourism office upon request.

A further park located at Pointe Grondin is being developed by the community.

There are plenty of resort options in the community, including both Wasse-Giizhik Tours and Gordie's Beach, whose offerings include interpretive and historic boat tours of the region capable of taking on groups in excess of 20 guests.

A host of small takeout food venders can be found on the road into the village and Wikwemikong boasts a number of small restaurants providing good solid rural fare and some opportunities to indulge in a bit of culinary tourism.

Continuing on Wikwemikong Way up the hill, the wooden pillars of Wasse Abin, a modern high school can be seen to the left.

Follow the road until you arrive at Rabbit Island and you will find the new sandy beach at King's Bay to be a delight.

Wikwemikong offers a peaceful wilderness experience enhanced by the culture, heritage and hospitality of Canada's first peoples.

mation centre in a quaint small stack wall log building. The office is a great place to begin a tour of the area, as maps and brochures abound. The tourism office can provide resources for self-guided tours of the community, provide information on local places to stay overnight and can arrange for historical and environmental interpretive guided tours as well.

The Wikwemikong Health Centre on the right provides medical services to the community and houses a spectacular traditional healing lodge. The lodge is one of the first of its kind in Canada and came about through the partnership efforts of pioneering Doctor Jack Bailey and a traditional Anishinabe healer and former Wikwemikong Chief Ron Wakegijig. "I have always had a strong compulsion to help the people of this reserve, both from a traditional medicine perspective and politically, as chief," Chief Wakegijig declared in a 2008 edition of The Expositor feature column Now and Then, authored by Petra Wall. "My father was chief for 19 years. His commitment to the people and to their welfare was passed on to me."

Dr. Bailey counts the building of the healing lodge here and the one built on its model at the Health Sciences North in Sudbury as one of the crowning achievements of his very storied career, commemorating an historic collaboration and rapprochement between the two medical traditions.

ings, the Wiky Powwow is held during the August long weekend and attracts some of the finest dancers and singers on the powwow circuit. If you are lucky enough to arrive for your visit during the powwow, you will also find one of the largest collections of Native crafts and artisans to rival anything be found anywhere else in North America.

If you continue on down Kaboni Road you will come to Gordie's Beach, one of the many fine local outfitters and guides along with great beachside accommodations.

In addition to the larger competitive powwow, Wikwemikong also hosts a more intimate traditional powwow in June. That powwow changes location each year among Wikwemikong's satellite communities of Cross Mission ruins. According to Shelley Pearen's seminal Manitoulin tour book, 'Exploring Manitoulin,' the doors to the new church were built by local artisans, with a large stylized cross surrounded by the circle of life and the four colours representing the colours of the world's four races.

The school ruins often serve as an amphitheater for the world renowned Debajehmujig Storytellers, a First Nation acting troupe whose mainstage offerings have included works by some of Canada's foremost indigenous playwrights.

Across the street you will find Jennesseaux Hall, a deceptively more modern structure. Scratching beneath the hall's modern siding, however, would reveal a log building structure hailing back to 1860.

Evan Pitawanakwat of Wikwemikong caught this 17-pound 8-ounce pike right off the shores in South Bay. Fishing in the area has been a pastime, a hobby and a way of life for literally centuries.

Kenjgewin Teg celebrates successes of graduating class of 2013

by Robin Burridge

M'CHIGEENG—Kenjgewin Teg Educational Institute (KTEI) held its 2013 convocation on Thursday, June 27, celebrating the success of its graduating students.

The day began with a sunrise ceremony, including a pipe ceremony led by KTEI Elder in Residence Josh Eskkawkogan. Mr. Eskkawkogan also led the opening dedication and thanksgiving, following the processional song by the drum group Mkwa Odeh.

The master of ceremonies for the graduation was Beverly Roy-Carter, who read a message from M'Chigeeng First Nation Chief Joe Hare who sent his regrets.

The first guest speaker was Grand Council Chief of the Anishinabek Nation Patrick Madahbee who, Ms. Roy-Carter noted, KTEI was honoured to have present at the ceremony.

"This is an exciting time to be a part of our communities," said Ms. Roy-Carter. "It is a time of change and Chief Madahbee is a strong advocate for possible change in First Nation communities. Welcome."

"We are so proud of you," began Chief Madahbee. "We, the Anishinabek Nation leadership, view you as the leaders of tomorrow. Whatever field you choose, you are our people's modern day warriors, leading our communities into the future."

KTEI Board of Directors Chair Grace Fox was the next to take the podium, extending her congratulations to the graduates.

"I would like to honour the graduates and parents here today," said Ms. Fox. "I have 51 years in education, but this role I am in now, as the chairperson of an educational institute for First Nations people, is the one I am most proud of."

"When I see all our First Nation people learning language, culture and celebrating our heritage, it makes me so proud," continued Ms. Fox. "I know you have all overcome tremendous obstacles to achieve your dreams. Your task moving forward is to take the flame and walk with it, ensuring that you pass the gift of education to your children and your children's children."

Stephanie Roy, KTEI executive director, welcomed the graduates, guest speakers and family to the convocation.

"This year we have the most graduates ever in KTEI history," said Ms. Roy, congratulating the 66 graduates. "Your journey and program has ended at KTEI. We were one small part in your learning path and we know that your life will continue to move forward, but it is how you handle the obstacles that will determine your future."

The keynote address was delivered by KTEI student council president and culinary skills graduate Winniefred Paibomsai.

"I am very proud to have known and worked with all of you," said Ms. Paibomsai. "We have all had struggles, but we made it—we survived. We've all stayed afloat together."

"As a student and graduate I would also like to congratulate all the family and staff for supporting us and to the board," Ms. Paibomsai added.

The various KTEI educators spoke next, presenting their students with their certificates and diplomas.

Echo Nahwegahbo receives her Pre-Health Sciences certificate from instructor Debra Tate.

The KTEI secondary school graduates, receiving their Ontario Secondary School diplomas, were Holly Anderson, Juanita Migwans, Nathan Madahbee, Che Nahwegahbow, David Recollet and Erica Sampson.

MANITOULIN WIND NEWS

CONSTRUCTION UPDATE - BY PAUL KAMINSKI, PROJECT MANAGER

As Rick Martin shared with you last week, the McLean's Mountain Wind Farm is now in full construction mode, and Rick is transitioning to his new role as Manager, McLean's Mountain Wind Farm (Operations). In line with these changes, we are adjusting the timing and focus of these updates to provide you with a monthly construction forecast. Please note that you can still reach Rick – as well as other members of the Northland team – any time you have questions about the project.

While it's exciting to see the project move from concept to reality, we also recognize that construction activity can be disruptive. We're working hard along with our construction team at H. B. White to keep you informed on current and upcoming construction activity, to minimize possible disruptions, to ensure that all work is completed safely, and to get through this phase as quickly and cleanly as possible.

July

Over the coming weeks, you'll see lots of activity in the area. As we continue to pour the foundations for the turbines, you can expect increased traffic travelling from the batch plant located at the intersection of Highway 540 and Bidwell Road back to the site. We're making good progress - by the time you read this, the foundations for three turbine locations - T15, T10 and T9 - will already have been poured.

As we continue to put the foundations in place, there will be additional localized blasting on the north and south sides of Greenbush Road. We'll also begin trenching the collector lines located north of Greenbush Road; this work will move towards Burnett's Sideroad as we progress. You can expect some noise and dust along with these activities; we are doing our best to contain both as much as possible.

Starting this week, we'll be performing in-water trenching activities in the Little Current channel. This work will take place approximately 700 meters east of the swing bridge, to prepare for installation of the submarine cables, which will transport electricity produced by our Wind Farm to the Hydro One transmission network connection point, located on Goat Island. This work will require us to install a temporary rock berm (the berm provides a level space to hold our backhoe), along with a barge holding another backhoe. We will be delivering approximately 50 truckloads of rock from the Corbiere quarry to Goat Island to form this temporary berm. Although the in-water trenching work will be clear of the navigation channel, we ask that boaters take note of these construction activities.

Plotting and Planning

Little Current artist and volunteer Marc-Andre Brzustowski carefully colours a stencilled sailboat, part of a repeating series of Island icons that also include a lighthouse, fish, loon, the swing bridge and eagle feathers onto the Gore Bay Highway wall across from ACME Motors. The painstaking work is nearing completion. Duncan Pheasant, another Little Current artist, looks on appreciatively.

Huron Island Time open for business in Providence Bay

by Betty Bardswich

PROVIDENCE BAY—Islanders will be happy to know that the charismatic couple of Nathalie Gara-Boivin and Alain Harvey, owners of the Auberge Inn international hostel in Providence Bay, have signed a three-year contract with the Municipality of Central Manitoulin to manage the concession at the beach site interpretive centre.

The pair moved to Manitoulin in 2010 from Sudbury and opened the hostel, the only one on Manitoulin. Ms. Gara-Boivin, with a degree in Environmental Studies from the University of Ottawa and a degree in eco-tourism from the Sir Sanford Fleming University campus in Halliburton, had been employed at Science North while Mr. Harvey had worked at the French site of CBC Radio for several years.

"When we came to Providence Bay in 2007 on a bicycle trip," Ms. Gara-Boivin explained, "we fell in love with the beach here and we eventually bought a place here and then made the leap to move here permanently. We get people from all over the world coming to stay at our hostel, which has a bunk room with six bunk beds and private rooms as well. You get to meet a lot of people and we are seeing a lot of women's retreats now. The hostel connection is great. We had two customers this weekend who met over breakfast and then they decided to go hiking together. We get singles on bikes and motorcycles and this is very much a family destination also. It is a really nice way for the European travellers to meet Canadians and vice versa. This was the perfect eco-tourism opportunity."

Indeed, the year-round business has been increasing every year and the couple is seeing repeat customers. "It has been working out really well," Mr. Harvey observed. "Summers are good and the shoulder seasons are building up. When we heard that the people who had the business here before were not returning, we thought it would be a tragedy not to have ice cream at Providence Bay and we also thought it would be a good opportunity to have our kayak, bicycle and canoe rentals at the beach. Also, we thought we would have a beach shop here with towels, flip flops, band-aids and so on for sale. And we have tried to keep things as local as possible. We have sausages and hot dogs from the Burt Farms. It is always cool when you tell people that it is made on Manitoulin and they always want to try more Manitoulin things."

Alain Harvey and Nathalie Gara-Boivin pose outside of their latest business venture, Huron Island Time, at the Providence Bay Interpretive Centre.

"We also have Farquhar's ice cream," Ms. Gara-Boivin added. "And cookies from Garden's Gate restaurant as well as apple chips that are made in Sudbury, Nana's kettle corn from Eat Local Sudbury and fair trade organic coffee from Old Rock in Sudbury." As well, date squares, brownies and muffins are available at this venture named Huron Island Time. The delicious pastries are made by Charlotte Cranston, one of four employees the new owners have hired. Also available at the beach shop are made on Manitoulin Aromaki products including body butters and washes, all natural products also available at Jaguar Spirit Massage Studio in Gore Bay.

As well as running the beach shop and the hostel with her partner, Ms. Gara-Boivin will be offering yoga classes on the beach on Mondays and Wednesdays at 7 pm starting July 3. She has been practicing yoga for seven years and has now obtained her yoga teacher-trainer certificate after completing a 200-hour course on a beach in Nicaragua. Those interested in attending the yoga classes should arrive a little early to register and should bring a yoga mat or beach towel or blanket with them.

Ms. Gara-Boivin and Mr. Harvey are looking forward to a great summer. "We hope people enjoy their time here," Ms. Gara-Boivin said, "Whether it's staying at the Auberge, kayaking on the water, enjoying beach yoga or having an ice cream while walking on the boardwalk."

Huron Island Time is open from 11 am to 8 pm seven days a week for July and August and weekends in September.

Out and About in Sheguiandah

Hope you are enjoying this hot weather. My garden has just about doubled in size, I just hope that I can keep the deer out of it now. Have you noticed how many turtles are crossing the roads lately? No this is not a joke, we have seen quite a few and in some cases have assisted a little to get them across the busy roads. On our way to Espanola we watched a very big snapping turtle saunter across the highway. We have seen two box turtles on the Rockville Road and a few smaller painted turtles as well. Also when we were going across Lacloche Island there are a couple of herds of cattle grazing in the fields again. It had been a long time since there were cows over there.

Congratulations to all the graduates for this year. Our grandson Cory graduated from Grade 8 and is excited about going to high school. Remember those days? Also our little great granddaughter finished her first year of Kindergarten. That of course had to be rewarded with a special prize from her poppa. We are especially proud of our granddaughter Jessica. She placed third in her class at North Bay college and is now employed as a personal support worker at the Manor. She really enjoys her work there.

The museum here in Sheg had a good turn out for the roast beef dinner and silent auction held at the rec centre. The children's day camps are still on, be sure to call and register your kids for the next group. There are a lot of nice handmade items for sale in the lobby of the museum all made by local artists, so be sure to stop by and see them and also register for the next quilting sessions by Linda from the Needle Box. The classes are only $20 and are very interesting.

We took in the celebrations in Little Current on Canada Day, what a great job the volunteers do! A special thanks to them. Our little granddaughter sure had fun with the various kids events. She had a Canada flag painted on her face, ate cake and played hula hoops. The downtown was very busy with various vendors and musicians, as well as the bike decorating and parade.

Jason Smith and his friend Thu Ha dropped by for a visit while they were here for the long weekend. They enjoyed fishing at the government dock and on Lake Manitou. They stayed at his father's camp in Rockville returning home on Sunday. They said how beautiful Manitoulin is and hope to be back soon.

The community sends condolences to Ed and Doug Heis and families on the passing of their brother Jim Heis from Manitoba.

I had a telephone call from Thelma (Nevilles) Bousfield from Milton last week. There will be a family reunion for the families of Darius Harrison and Mary (Brown) White at the museum on Sunday, July 14. There have been many reunions of the White families over the years. Some were held in Owen Sound and others on Manitoulin. This will be the 37th reunion and there has been as many as 75 people attend in the past. Mrs. Bousfield told me she was raised on a farm in Green Bay and hopes to get out there to play some cards on Friday night. Their Son Bruce will be bring his parents up for the weekend, and their daughter Patricia and some of her family will be here from Calgary. Ken and Linda Ferguson are helping to organize this year's event and have invited all family members and friends to stop by for a visit. There will be a potluck lunch at 1 pm. Be sure to bring your food, beverages will be supplied.

If you have any special events, birthdays, anniversaries or other get-togethers planned give me a call and I will be happy to put it in this column for you, my phone number is 705-368-1826.

Our teacher asked what our favourite animal was, and I said "fried chicken." She said I was not funny but everyone else in the class laughed. My parents always told me to tell the truth and I did—fried chicken is my favourite animal. Anyway my teacher sent me to the principal's office. I told him what happened and he laughed and said not to do it again. I told my Dad what happened and he said my teacher was probably a member of PETA. He said they love animals very much. I do too, especially chicken, beef and pork. The next day in class my teacher asked us what our favourite live animal was. I said mine was chicken. She asked me why and I told her because you can make it into fried chicken. So she sent me back to the principal office. He laughed and told me not to do it again. Today my teacher asked me to tell her what famous person I admired the most. I told her "Colonel Sanders!" Guess where I am now? Keep smiling.

Pasture as feed part 2: Ways to improve utilization

Minimize the area and amount of grass that is available at any one time. There will be a higher proportion of fresh grass available to the animal. Smaller paddocks reduce walking and tramping, which means more time for grazing and resting. Provide water in the paddock. This minimizes the amount of time spent away from the pasture and not eating. If there are significant manure patties that are not breaking down, consider harrowing to spread these patties out and speed up the breakdown. Cattle eating grass that is optimum for performance will have loose manure that will not be in dried patties. If there are weeds and mature plants, clipping can improve utilization.

Livestock grazing a "new" or "fresh" paddock focus on grazing become full quicker and will spend more time resting rather than wandering looking for another bite of palatable grass. Intake of high quality forage is much better than low quality. Higher acid detergent fibre (ADF) decreases intake because of slower digestive passage.

Number of paddocks and frequency of moves: Factors that influence pasture utilization are: the number of paddocks, and the frequency of moves. From the Purdue Extension Forage Field Guide: continuously grazed pasture will result in 40 percent utilization of the forage, a four-paddock system will result in 45 percent utilization, an eight paddock system will have about 60 percent utilization, a 12 paddock system will have about 65 percent utilization and moving to a 24+ paddock system will bring the utilization rate up to about 75 percent. This is a huge increase in productivity of your pastures, almost doubling it. The number of paddocks and frequency of moves go together. More paddocks allow for more frequent moves. This results in a longer rest period for the grass to recover from the previous grazing, and more growth of fresh grass for the next grazing.

Take half and leave half: These are seasonal utilization rates. At each grazing pass, the best results are achieved when you have the livestock remove about 50% of the available forage to allow the plant to quickly recover and regrow. There is minimal impact on the root system when grazing about 50 percent of the top growth, but when more than 50 percent is removed the impact on the roots is much more significant. The more paddocks you can organize for each group of livestock and the more frequent the moves to a fresh paddock, the better the performance you will see from your pastures.

Providence Bay News and Notes

Again this year the students from the local interpretive spent a few hours at Science North on June 26. The highlight this year was the showing of the "Last Reef."

This is presented on the screen of the IMAX. It's the story of the replacement of plant and animal life in the Pacific Ocean west and south of the Hawaiian islands.

The plants and animals as seen on the screen are in huge numbers from the smallest to the largest. This area has developed during the last 71 years. It was very interesting.

Correction:

The fitness classes and pole walking exercises are on Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday. They are from 8 am to 9 am. They are held at the Providence Bay beach at the playground area.

These classes which improve your overall health, posture, decrease back pain and increase mental alertness. Contact Zeke at 705-377-5073 or at cell phone 705-348-0254.

This bumblebee mascot, right, is the symbol for the Anishnaabe Trade Fair, organized by the Birch Island Community Hall by Marie McGregor-Pitawanakwat to give First Nations artisans and craftspeople a spring opportunity to show off and sell their work. At the tables are, from left, William Bondy of Odawa Expressions, a wood and antler carver from Wikwemikong, Mary Wemigwans and, standing in the foreground (also the bee for the occasion), her sister Mary Jane. Ms. McGregor-Pitawanakwat was pleased with the two-day event (June 8 and 9) that attracted visitors to see the work of and meet 15 First Nation craftspeople and artists.

July 4—I hope everyone enjoyed the Canada Day holiday. At least it didn't rain.

Mieke Delange was here for a week with her family and visited friends as well.

On Tuesday she and I went out for lunch in Mindemoya and she left for home on Wednesday. It was so nice to see her.

Nola Haner is doing very well and is coming home on Friday.

I got home last Tuesday and Allen and Rosemarie took me to a doctor's appointment in Sudbury on Thursday.

Congratulations to Betty Lou Purvis in receiving the Citizen of the Year award.

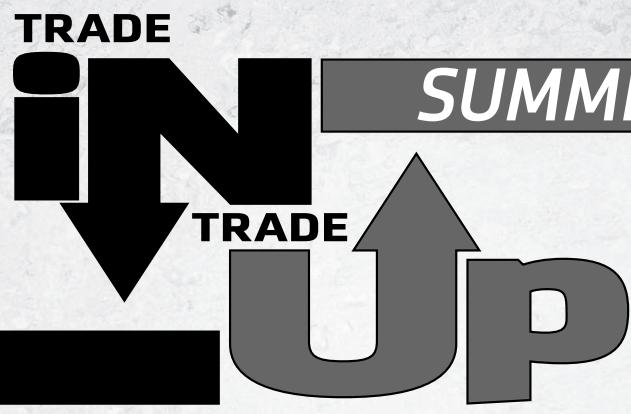

Ken and Sheila Maeck had some of their family home for the weekend.

The garden's seem to be growing well now. I'm enjoying the fresh lettuce.

Arline Finley came over to visit me on Wednesday and we shared dinner together.

Charlotte Leonard and Lori Brklacich are here at the Leonard house across from me and are enjoying their holiday. We had tea together before they left.

We extend sympathy to the Gilchrist and Tremblay family in the passing of Lorna. She spent her summer on the 12th Line.

Tehkummah Talk and Times

Nature

I watched a golden spider
As it let its silk web grow
From the eavestrough
high above me
To the plants there down below.

The web it glittered brightly
In the early morning
sun.

The humming bird zoomed right near
So damage could be done.
I often look at nature

And the miracles I've found.

Don't hurry through this life of ours

Just stop and look around,

Take time to smell the flowers

Take time to savour all
And perhaps we'll thus be ready

When we hear Gods final call.

- P. Hall July 4, 2013

Mallow

This morning the Mal-low is showing

Its colours of pink and of white

They grow just like weeds in my garden

But, "Oh", what a beautiful sight.

- P. Hall July 4, 2013

A memorial tribute was held at the Tehkummah hall for the life of Peter Houlihan on Saturday, June 29. It looked like a large crowd. Mary Johnston was one of the helpers with the lunch.

Hello Bob Eadie, glad to hear you are doing so well after all those bypasses!

This Sunday evening,
July 14, Church Service
outdoors, everyone welcome 5:30 pm to 6 pm, sing-a-long St. Andrews By the Sea, South Bay Mouth
(burgers and hotdogs).

Cal came for spaghetti
supper on Monday evening.
It's the first time I have missed South Baymouth's fireworks show in years!
Obviously quite a few like me, a good crowd at Bingo too.

Overcast this Tuesday morning, my old bones have been behaving terribly. I guess/hope it's the weather. Both Betty-Jean and Pauline have been suffering with bad colds.

I intended to mention the Water Power in the Parade.
I don't think everyone appreciated it (comments overheard).

Darned if I didn't miss SBCDC's good hamburgers
this year too.

A week ago I had a nice little visit with Sue Jeeves at the grocery store. She's one busy lady, even builds high fences!

Watch for deer! Some babies around too.

Phew? The fog in the morning air penetrated into Ginger's fur and she's in my face this morning.
Problem is, the air is redolent with farm smell, and... anyway it was a distraction from the pain in my legs. The last few days, I think it's a bug going around, I hope it's a bug, or I'm in big trouble as I already have some problems.
Harold Thirkill told me a couple of weeks ago
that he had a flu-like bone problem that bugged him, and Betty-Jean has a bad cold and also bad bones this week too. My side effects so far are nosebleeds, that's enough for now.

Two and three quarters tables at cribbage on Wednesday. Mum made buttertarts, I made sugar buns.
The high hand was me me
??, 20; first place, Cal and Lois, 950; second, Dorothy and Ted, 928; honourable mention, almost third, me and the dummy (or Dolly and me); low, Bert and Joy, 836; door prize, Audrie.

Cal and I went to Diane's
Fish 'n Chips for supper
Wednesday, just delicious.
Afterwards a drive to Mindemoya and a visit at the home of Gib and Florence where their daughter Anita, grandkids Joseph, Faith and Anna are visiting for almost a week (I think). A cute, young bunch of teens here, all graduates.

Our niece, Shelly's daughter Jennifer, is hospitalized in Prince George, after an accident. We hope she is soon on the mend.

Hey, I planted pumpkin seeds. Do you think it's too late?

Thursday euchre I was on KP duty and Dorothy worked the door. Ladies' high, Diane, 87; ladies' lone hands, Diane, 5; men's high,
Rita, 93; men's lone hands,
Mark, 4; ladies' low,
Eileen, Sheila and Barb (tied); men's low, Eva; door prize, Sheila.

Lori and Rick arrived home via the ferry on Saturday afternoon. They had spent a week down St.
Catharine's way visiting son Jase and both their families.

The little wrens are creating a racket (or their kind of music) this Monday morning. They certainly add their kind of cheer to the backyard chorus. I was hoping for a shower of rain overnight. It would do the gardens a world of good but I'm thinking it has bypassed us again. My yard is nice despite the weeds, the tall grass, etc. I just can't keep up anymore.

Darned this old age stuff!

Saturday evening we met Gib and Florence at the restaurant for supper. They came down to Cal's later and gals against the guys cribbage. They kinda trounced us, thanks to Florence twice she bailed us out by one point. Most of my hands were "fours" all evening. But I did beat

Mum on Sunday afternoon
two out of three.

St. Andrew's Church was full. Frances and Mary (Brown) home with their families. They're the nicest girls (family). The Hymns were beautiful, music, wow
we have some lovely voices in our midst. I was thinking of all the folks who would have enjoyed that sermon (on the animals).
Pets in our lives! A huge crew for lunch and the visiting #1 at Carol's and Earl's—Burt, Elaine, Martin, Lynda, Mary, Justin, Quillan, Joan, Mum, Burt

and Audrie (Case), myself.
Nice to see back to their summer place on Lakeshore Road.

Have you noticed how quickly Donnie's garden has grown. Must be that good farm fresh fertilizer.

A yard sale or two or three this weekend in Tehkummah—Mary Johnston, and the Halloways and perhaps?

I have to remind you of our Strawberry Social coming up on July 20 at 7 pm at the Tehkummah Hall. That same day at 1:30 pm, my son Kim is bringing their group "The Thursday Night Boys" to the hall (a benefit of sorts). This group from Clarksburg and area as you can figure out usually meet on a Thursday night. I'm looking forward to meeting them all too as I've only heard them on the CD Kim made for me and is great!
The charge is $8.

After our supper on Sunday evening we drove up to Mindemoya visiting Sherman and Eileen and their house full of family. Rick and Steve were having a lawn mowing competition in the huge backyard. Kate is always helping out. Nice to meet Tammy and the kiddles too—Zack, Brielle, Zander and Rilla, and dogs/pets. Eileen was preparing for half a week of tests sounded like. We went from there to Gib and Florence's where I admired the beautiful rose bushes. Their daughter Anita and family had headed back to Bracebridge on Saturday morning.

Ontario strawberries are available and they are so good.
Make the most of them now, because they will soon be gone.

Strawberries and Cream Semifreddo

Semifreddo means "half-cold" in Italian and refers to a chilled or half-frozen dessert containing whipped cream or meringue. This is not a complicated recipe, just needs a little extra time. Comparing it to baking a cake and icing the cake it's about the same time but you don't have a hot oven and instead a smooth cool dessert.

For the semifreddo:

1 1/2 cups fresh strawberries, hulled and sliced 1/4 inch thick
1/2 cup granulated sugar
3 large egg yolks plus 1 large egg
1 3/4 cups heavy cream, chilled

For serving:

4 cups fresh strawberries, hulled and quartered
2 to 3 Tbsp granulated sugar
2 to 3 tsp Grand Marnier (optional)

Make the semifreddo:

Line an 8.5 x 4.5-inch loaf pan with plastic wrap (very important—do not use anything else). In a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat, cook the sliced strawberries with 1/4 cup of the sugar, stirring occasionally, until the berries soften and begin to break apart, 5 to 7 minutes. Set aside.

Choose a medium glass bowl or stainless steel bowl that can rest just inside a medium saucepan (like the old double boiler pot system). Pour about 1 inch of water in the saucepan and bring to a boil. Reduce the temperature to maintain a gentle simmer.

Put the egg yolks, whole egg, and the remaining 1/4 cup sugar in the medium bowl and whisk until well combined and pale yellow, about 2 minutes. Add the reserved strawberry mixture and whisk to combine. Set the bowl over the saucepan without letting it touch the water and whisk constantly until the mixture is thick and leaves a trail when you lift the whisk, 3 to 4 minutes. Set the bowl in the fridge or freezer and whisk occasionally until cool, about 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a large mixing bowl with a hand mixer beat the cream to medium peaks, 2 to 4 minutes.

Gently fold the whipped cream into the cooled strawberry mixture until just combined. Pour the mixture into the loaf pan, smooth the surface, cover with plastic, and freeze for at least 6 hours and up to overnight.

Serve:

Toss the quartered strawberries with the sugar and Grand Marnier (if using) to taste. Let sit until the berries release some of their juices, 5 to 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, remove the semifreddo from the freezer and let sit at room temperature for 5 to 10 minutes to soften slightly. Invert onto a cutting board, remove the plastic, and slice. Serve topped with the quartered berries.

Serves 8 to 10.

On Friday we started driving (I was going to go shopping when I stopped, but,) continued in a circular route through Mindemoya.
Stopped at Maggie's for lunch.
Wonderful coffee and sandwiches.
Stopped at the Flee Market before heading homeward. Another nice outing.
When Cal starts driving, never know where one will end up. Fun though.
We saw Harold Thirkill at Maggie's and Rita, Jen and Kay Gordon at the Flee.
Jean were you at your Manitou River home, the gate was open?

DayStar celebrates 25 years of outreach in Wikwemikong

by Alicia McCutcheon
WIKWEMIKONG—Last week DayStar celebrated a milestone in the community of Wikwemikong, marking 25 years since the outreach group first came to Manitoulin's largest First Nations community, intent on spreading fellowship and the word of God's love.

The Expositor spoke with Shirley Hamilton, executive director of DayStar, as she readied herself for an evening full of events marking her group's 25th anniversary in Wikwemikong. She explained that DayStar first began 30 years ago in Whitefish Falls and, during her first visit to Wikwemikong, she fell in love with the people and the game and activity tables with carnival time after the barbecue.

There was fun and excitement for children at the camp and they were officially welcomed with a band council resolution.

"I had a real love for the people, and I knew that someday something would be here on a long-term basis," Ms. Hamilton explained, noting that she wrote then chief Eugene Manitowabi about DayStar having a more permanent presence than the one-week explained.

A circus theatre was built inside the Wiky arena for the theme of the day camp week "under the big top."

On Thursday, July 4, the 25th anniversary kicked off at 5 pm with a barbecue and a circus show.

Since first getting involved with First Nation ministry, Ms. Hamilton has lost two husbands and noted how the community of Wikwemikong cared for her after her latest loss. "I value what I've learned here as a culture—the many characteristics and traits. I've learned so much from coming here," she added.

"We're sort of like the Salvation Army—we care for the spiritual and emotional needs of the people," Ms. Hamilton said of DayStar.

The community centre also contains a clothing depot with gently used

18 reserves, including Wikwemikong, each summer. "We have churches from between Chicago and Kingston, with each of the volunteers receiving cultural training beforehand," she said.

Ms. Hamilton spoke of the long-lasting relationships DayStar has formed with the communities they serve, noting a recent chat with Whitefish River First Nation Chief Franklin Pabomsai. "You lift us up, encourage us, give us a vision we can believe in," the chief told Ms. Hamilton.

In Wikwemikong this summer, a DayStar team provided programming for children aged 5-15, with this year's theme 'under the big top.' Programming is also provided for teens and adults, too. The children's programming is made up of games, activities, songs and bible stories with special programming in art, music and circus acts (to go with this year's theme). Almost 100 children are enrolled in this year's summer program, Ms. Hamilton clothing and supports a staff of 11, both Native and non-Native.

"I remember standing beside a Wikwemikong Tribal Police officer and him telling me that (DayStar) is the best thing that has happened to the community," Ms. Hamilton shared, noting the difference she has seen over 25 years in the people, the community.

"And it's all God—He's the one that makes it work. He's in the driver's seat," Ms. Hamilton concluded.
