

Roles of Children's Aid Society, Kina Gbezhgomi evolve

Kina Gbezhgomi plans transition to full children's protection mandate within 12 months

WIKWEMIKONG—For more than 20 years, the Children's Aid Society of the Districts of Sudbury and Manitoulin (CASDSM) and Kina Gbezhgomi Child and Family Services (KGCFS) have worked closely together to deliver child protection services to the First Nation communities that they both serve.

"Our organizations are currently implementing a six- to 12-month plan that will transition First Nations child protection services from the CASDSM to KGCFS, with KGCFS scheduled to receive designation as a child protection agency following a final review by the Ministry of Child and Youth Services," Denise Morrow, KGCFS executive director, said in a press release. "The plan is implemented in phases and engages our respective employees, community partners and the families we work with throughout the process to ensure the successful transition of First Nations child protection services from CASDSM to KGCFS.

It is important to note that KGCFS' designation as a child protection agency will not end the long-time relationship between CASDSM and KGCFS in the region. Instead, the KGCFS and CASDSM will continue their historical partnership as sister agencies. However, designation will result in KGCFS servicing more First Nations families in the Districts of Sudbury and Manitoulin than in the past; and as such, KGCFS will grow its team to meet the needs of the new families that it will be working with, the press release continues.

Throughout the transition, colleagues at KGCFS and CASDSM will work closely together on all existing case files to ensure a seamless transition of First Nations child protection services to KGCFS.

BLANDING'S ABOUND—Three large Blanding's turtles are guarded by their small but mighty friends, two painted turtles, in a Little Current pond. It is good to see three fine specimens of Blanding's on Manitoulin, as the species is deemed 'at risk' by the Ministry of Natural Resources. It is also this species of turtle that has been dealt a serious blow at Misery Bay Provincial Park, resulting in funding for further study of the mysterious turtle deaths.

Wikwemikong initiates alternative, peacemaker-style justice program

by Alicia McCutcheon

WIKWEMIKONG—Last week, Wikwemikong Chief Duke Peltier, along with Wikwemikong Tribal Police Chief Gary Reid and Crown Attorney Stacy Haner, signed the community's first Peacemaker Justice Program—a protocol that aims to divert summary offences out of the court system with a focus on restitution.

Chief Peltier explained that a justice committee was struck at the beginning of this council's term, in September 2012, to search out the gaps in the justice system.

One of the solutions found, the chief explained, was the diversion of summary (minor) offences. In this process a discussion could occur between victim and the accused to come up with a solution.

Manitoulin deer management group recommends 30% deer tag reduction

Compensation for harsh winter's impact on Island herd

MANITOULIN—By now most Islanders will have seen this scenario at least once—a pitiful looking creature passing for a deer stumbling along Manitoulin and LaCloche roadsides, seemingly oblivious to the traffic in their search for greenery. This sad picture is what remains of Manitoulin's deer herd, warns United Fish and Game Clubs of Manitoulin secretary Ian Anderson, and is the reasoning behind a call for a 30 percent reduction in this year's antlerless deer tags.

"I'm still estimating there will be a loss of between 25-30 percent of deer, especially in terms of fawns for last year and this year," said Mr. Anderson, a retired Conservation Officer. Mr. Anderson explained that, on average, every doe has 1.2 fawns and that some will have twins and triplets.

"If you travel around Manitoulin and look in fields where deer are and see the ratio of fawns to adults, there are places where they are really scarce," said Mr. Anderson. "Several times I've seen places where we're seeing two fawns per 10 adult deer. During the bulldozing of trails through the snow this winter to SOUTH BAYMOUTH—The MS Chi-Cheemaun ferry will be starting on schedule this Friday, with reservations now available on all sailings, officially marking the start of the tourist season on Manitoulin.

There was some concern about the status of the ferry after it got off to a late start last year due to record low water levels, but the Owen Sound Transportation Company (OSTC) has confirmed that the annual regular season will be starting this Friday, May 2 with an increase in water levels over 30 centimetres from last year.

Little Current Valu-Mart Owner Andrew Orr presented Cassandra Moore, front, and her mother Darlene Moore with a cheque for $20,000 towards the purchase of a wheelchair accessible van for Cassandra.

Orr's Valu-Mart and PC Children's Charity donate $20,000 towards accessible van for Mindemoya youth

by Robin Burridge

LITTLE CURRENT—Orr's Valu-Mart in Little Current, along with the President's Choice Children's Charity, donated $20,000 to the Moore family of Mindemoya last week towards the purchase of a wheelchair accessible van for 18-year-old Cassandra Moore.

Cassandra, who has been diagnosed with spina bifida and recently epilepsy, has been in a wheelchair since she was four-years-old.

"It's wonderful to be able to help a child reach their full potential," said owner Andrew Orr. "We are very proud to partner with President's Choice Children's Charity and to help children right here in our own Island community. The entire store team helped raise money towards this gift through the generous support of our customers during in-store campaigns, local fundraising events such as our sausage cart and direct employee contributions."

Cassandra was also presented with a $100 gift card to the Valu-Mart to purchase flowers, a favourite of Cassandra's.

"One hundred percent of funds raised by President's Choice Children's Charity in Ontario go directly towards supporting Ontario families whose children have physical or developmental disabilities, as well as nutrition programs aimed at fighting childhood hunger," states a release from the charity. "In 2013, the President's Choice Children's Charity proudly granted almost $6.1 million to 984 families and 1,100 nutrition programs, which feed over 216,390 children in Ontario. Since 1989, the charity has awarded $100 million, supporting more than 1.8 million children across Canada."

Kagawong presents Green Living Expo to promote environmentally-friendly practices

by Sharon Jackson

KAGAWONG—Two years ago members of the Billings Recreation Committee coordinated Earth Day activities, which included picking trash along the roadsides. Invited speakers led discussions on composting, gardening, different types of soil on Manitoulin Island and ways to extend the life of the landfill site in the township.

This year, led by chair Barb Erskine, members are organizing a Green Living Expo to take place at the Park Centre on Saturday, May 10.

A wine and cheese reception will kick off the weekend featuring live music by Folk Roots Collective on Friday evening.

Following the reception, at 7:15 pm Justin Carter, executive director of reThink Green (Sudbury), will speak on "Year One: How Not to Run an Environment Network."

ReThink green (formerly the Greater Sudbury Environmental Network) is a not-for-profit membership based organization dedicated to the facilitation of environmental efforts in the City of Greater Sudbury. Their website states "we aim to be a catalyst for positive environmental change in our community, beyond." They were involved in the Earth Day Festival held in Sudbury this past weekend (April 26).

In addition to the speakers, Saturday's program will feature local, environmentally friendly products, services and organizations showcased in a trade show format including geo thermal, organic foods, solar energy and much more.

"The purpose of the event," said Ms. Erskine, "is to provide consumers with alternative choices that minimize the use of harmful chemicals and fossil fuels and/or promote the enhancement of the natural environment with minimal or no harm."

"Also at the event this year," continued Ms. Erskine, "we will have invited speakers to provide educational sessions to the public featuring sustainable farming (Glenn Black), cycling (Maja

DSB social housing units will go smoke free effective January 1

by Alicia McCutcheon

MANITOULIN—Following a survey of Manitoulin-Sudbury District Service Board (DSB) tenants on going 'smoke free' within DSB's social housing units, the board passed a motion that, effective January 1, 2015, a smoke free policy will be enacted.

Following the smoke free social housing issue report of January 23, surveys of DSB housing units were undertaken, asking the following five questions: do they smoke or allow smoking in the unit; their interest in designating their building and unit as smoke free; their interest in an offer of smoking cessation programs; and their interest in signing a new lease to designate their unit as smoke free.

Donna Moroso, director of integrated social services, explained that they received a 44 percent return on surveys that relayed that 57 percent of residents smoke and 42.3 percent class themselves as non-smokers.

Staff recommended, based on the survey results, that the DSB adopts a smoke free policy based on attrition. Existing tenants may choose to adopt the policy in their units and designate the unit to be smoke free for themselves and their guests. Current residents who smoke will be grandfathered in their current unit for the duration of their tenancies, Ms. Moroso said.

She explained that a letter will be sent to all tenants on the wait list, advising them of the new smoke free policy and giving them the option to remain on the list or remove their name from the waitlist.

"Further," Ms. Moroso added, "as it is the goal of the organization to transition buildings to smoke free, residents will be offered support from local organizations for smoking cessation programs," explaining that the DSB has already been in contact with the Sudbury and District Health Unit which has agreed to help tenants who wish to quit.

"Once the smoke free policy is approved, non-smoking units will be identified and designated as smoke free," she told the board. "Existing tenants, who wish to voluntarily designate their unit as smoke free, will sign an addendum to their existing

Premier Wynne challenges Conservatives and NDP leaders to Northern Ontario issues debate

NORTHERN ONTARIO—Ontario Liberal Party leader Kathleen Wynne has challenged the PC and NDP leaders to a debate that is specifically focused on Northern Ontario issues, if the other parties force a provincial election this spring.

Ms. Wynne spoke with an audience of over 200 Northern mayors, councillors, and business leaders at the Northwestern Ontario Municipal Association's annual conference in Fort Frances last Thursday night. During her speech, Ms. Wynne focussed on the importance of building partnerships and listening to local leaders as the government expands opportunity and builds security across the North.

"You know your communities better than anyone—you understand the unique needs and challenges that must be addressed. And your input has helped guide our vision for Ontario," said Ms. Wynne.

As the government prepares to introduce a budget on May 1 that includes the next steps in her plan for jobs and growth, the premier put forward a direct challenge to both PC and NDP leaders at the end of her speech.

"I hope the other two parties do the right thing and support our budget. I hope they will put the public good ahead of their partisanship. But if the other parties don't support this plan and instead send the province to an election, then I will call on the other party leaders to come to the North and discuss these issues at a Northern leaders debate," Ms. Wynne stated.

In reaction to the premier's challenge, Sault Ste. Marie Liberal MPP David Orazietti said in a press release, "A proposed Northern leaders debate demonstrates Premier Wynne's ongoing commitment to ensure that Northern Ontario's concerns are addressed. She has travelled to the North to meet with municipal and business leaders numerous times to make sure that Northern priorities and Northern economic growth are a critical part of our government's plan."

Liberal MPP for Thunder Bay-Atikokan Bill Mauro added that "Wynne held her first cabinet meeting in the North and has kept Northern issues front and centre in our government ever since. But the PCs and the NDP want to make the next election about Toronto subways. Kathleen Wynne wants to make the next election about the future of our province, and her vision for our future includes a thriving Northern Ontario and that is why she is committed to a northern debate."

Art programs livens up after-school options

by Michael Erskine

MANITOULIN—Manitoulin's 4elements Living Arts is bringing an after school art program of workshops for kids to Manitoulin schools this spring.

The program workshops will take place on Tuesdays and Wednesdays at different schools on the Island through May to early June, with at least one program taking place in June.

"Most of our programs try to make a connection to the natural world through the arts," said 4elements Living Arts Executive Director Sophie Edwards. Since many public school systems are looking at that approach in teaching, the programs make a perfect fit.

Through the program, teams of artists rotate through the schools after classes. The fit with the curriculum is also beneficial and having artists come into the schools to deliver the programs is close to ideal.

"A lot of teachers are not as comfortable (teaching art), they don't always have the time and sometimes they can be intimidated by the subject," she noted.

In the Kids in the School art classes, 'Exploring the World Through the Arts,' the teachers comprise a solid base of local artists, including Heather Thoma, Kate Thompson, Mariana Lafrance and Sophie Edwards.

The workshops take place from 3 pm on each Tuesday in May at Central Manitoulin Public School; on Wednesdays in May at Assiginack Public School and on Wednesdays from May 7 to June 4 at Little Current Public School.

Ms. Edwards described one art project in which the children will take part. "The students will be using a wide range of colourful materials to build fantastical bird's nests," she said. "The finished nests will be put outside and the students will be able to see if birds take the colourful materials to incorporate into their own nests." The brightly coloured materials will make it easier to spot when birds have integrated the material from the students' creations into their own construction.

Other workshops (open to all ages) being offered by 4elements this spring include 'Navigating the Ins and Outs,' which will take place at LoonSong Farm just outside Little Current on Friday, May 9 from 1 pm to 4 pm. This workshop in observing and drawing will explore extremes in nature and everyday life, and will help participants build the basic skills of artistry. The instructor is Heather Thoma and there is a $30 cost plus materials. A 'Mother and Daughter' workshop offered by Kate Thompson will take place from 9 am to noon in Kagawong on Saturday, May 31. 'Doll Making' will explore exactly that from 1 to 4 pm on the same day with Heather Thoma instructing. An 'Indigo Dying' workshop will take place on July 8 and 9, from 9 am to 4 pm, with instructor Harriet Boon. There is a $100 plus materials fee for this workshop. This workshop is co-sponsored by Manitoulin Weavers and Spinners.

During a 4elements workshop, Phoebe Aeschlimann creates a sphere using grape vine with the intention to toss it into the river at Bridal Veil Falls to test how water and art interact.

Vigilance remains a byword for Fair Election Act changes

The people of Canada can accept some cautious, and tentative, congratulations in their insistence that the federal Conservatives back down on at least some provisions of its proposed Fair Elections Act.

The people have spoken and their voices have been carried to the House of Commons by all of the parties sitting in opposition to the majority Conservatives and by many media outlets, both local and national, all across Canada.

Indeed, a headline on a recent front page editorial in this newspaper on this fundamentally important topic that asked 'What is 'fair' about proposed elections act?' seem to have caught the spirit of the national momentum in this debate for the legislation, as originally proposed, will diminish, not augment, the democratic process of voting in Canada in federal elections.

The government had sworn that the legislation would pass without change, even conscripting the Senate, where the majority of members are also Conservatives, to debate the proposed bill simultaneously with the House of Commons thus attempting to expedite its passage before parliament's summer recess.

The backing down has now begun, something that Prime Minister Harper doesn't enjoy doing, as his Minister of State for Election Reform, Pierre Poilievre, has begun to tame the bill in order to make it more palatable for Canadians.

Algoma-Manitoulin-Kapuskasing MP Carol Hughes has stated that it is the opinion of the New Democratic Party of which she is a member that Mr. Poilievre's proposed changes are still far from acceptable for final passage of the bill.

Much has been made of the vouching issue whereby voters showing up at the polls without identification have, in the past, been able to vote at their local polling place when another voter who does have the appropriate identification vouches that the person they know is indeed entitled to vote at that particular poll.

A great deal of the focus on this bill has centered on this particular aspect of it to the extent that Canadians can wonder if this contentious point was a throw-away one, put into the bill as a bright shiny object on which everyone can have an opinion one way or another and so minimizing the scrutiny on the many other changes the new legislation proposes.

For people who are inclined to think the worst of their neighbours, that they may be inveterate cheaters, advocating major surgery on vouching plays to that particular gallery and swings that cadre of people to the government's side for the rest of the changes included as part of this bill, even though they remain fixed on the vouching part. In the meantime, after criticism, it's a fairly easy portion of the bill on which to offer a compromise, which Mr. Poilievre did last week.

Was his apparent reluctance to change anything scripted?

Difficult to know, but the Fair Elections Act had, in the meantime, enjoyed nearly a month of most Canadians believing it dealt first and foremost with vouching on election day because that was mostly what they were hearing about.

Other important changes that have had much less limelight in the 15-second clips of the national media debate include changes in fundraising, in how pre-election partisan robocall details will be maintained (and for how long), the handing over to political parties of the poll-by-poll records of who voted in any given federal election, the role of the Chief Electoral Officer and his/her relationship with the Commissioner of Canada Elections (an investigative official) and a great deal more.

Canadians have clearly not been impressed. A compromise response to the 'no vouching' matter was, as already noted, issued by Mr. Poilievre last week and many of the national educational responsibilities of the Chief Electoral Officer have been restored as part of the government's response to the criticism. His/her relationship with the Electoral Commissioner has also been restored, at least in part, so a ready transfer of information, as required, can hopefully continue taking place between the person who oversees elections and the individual who looks into concerns with the electoral process.

But citizens must keep up the pressure on the government, thus legitimizing arguments put forward by the opposition parties in debate to ensure that, however this legislation finally turns out, it is as transparent as possible and is not weighted in favour of any one political party.

Today's leaders take no responsibility for their watch

Yearning for the days when the political motto was 'The Buck Stops Here'

To the Expositor:

Former President of the United States Harry S. Truman is famous for having a sign on his desk that read "The Buck Stops Here." He was a leader who had the integrity to recognize that he was ultimately responsible for anything that happened under his watch.

The sign on Kathleen Wynne's desk should be of the three monkeys, (See, Hear and Speak no Evil) for she obviously feels that as a leader she has no responsibility for anything that happens during her watch. The numerous policy fiascos during her reign all smack of no one being responsible, nor capable. To sue the opposition for suggesting that she is responsible for what has happened when she was leader just further degrades her office and her integrity as she tries to use the judiciary to block free speech.

I yearn for the days when the leader was expected to have integrity. When the captain went down with his ship because he had integrity and took full responsibility for what had gone wrong. They are a far cry from the lack of integrity in the captains of today. The captain of the Costa Concordia who jumped off the ship as it sank off an Italian island in 2012 and Kathleen Wynne who is responsible for nothing are wonderful examples of todays captains.

Writer tackles PSW renumeration questions

A hundred PSWs working on Manitoulin would be nothing to sneeze at

To the Expositor:

There was an interesting letter to the Expositor in your April 16 issue. It was written by Greg Young and the sub-heading was 'The demand for PSWs will be great, yet there is no incentive to join this field of work.'

A friend of mine is very grateful to have a PSW care for her elderly mother three times a week at four hours per shift. In this case, the PSW drives 60 km each way. Using Greg Young's numbers, and my friends data, she earns $56 for four hours at $14/hr and $45.60 at 38 cents per kilometre. The round trip is about 1.5 hours @ 80 km/hr or $30.40/hr.

During the four hours, there is about a half hour for assisting onto chair in tub, showering, drying, dressing etc. Another half hour is sometimes direct assistance, but is mainly sitting and watching TV together or playing a game or visiting. My friend occasionally asks her PSW to prepare lunch. Once, a Mexico sticker was found on the apple cut into the fruit salad, but it was noticed before ingested.

It is very likely that PSWs employed in homes have a lower wage than they would receive in a hospital or retirement home setting due to the nature of the work and because they are also receiving payment for mileage which is not likely paid by institutions.

Most people do not get paid mileage to and from work and many still work for less than $14 after they have driven there on their own dime. Some people pay thousands of dollars for a university education and start at $20 per hour (no mileage pay). It is possible that PSWs are being told they should be getting more pay by union organizers (who would profit by the membership). Without a doubt, people need to be paid for services rendered but a PSW certificate can be earned on-line at a person's convenience and compared to entry-level jobs, the pay is perhaps a bit higher.

So rather than complaining about the low wages, wouldn't it be better to think of the benefit to the Island if there were 100 PSWs working 40 hours per week and driving to and fro getting mileage pay? That could be 100 jobs at equivalent of $35,000 per year to equal $3,500,000 directly to the Island economy. Nothing to sneeze at. And all sorts of spin offs like.

Sincere best wishes to all,
Margaret Schwartzenuber

Bud McConnell

William Ross (Bud) McConnell is a charming gentleman, a newly awakened artist who cherishes historical perspectives. He is very proud to have shared most of his life with his beloved partner Dorothy. They had close to 62 years together. They endured the inconceivable hardship of losing three children, but always remained best friends, supporting each other through the hard times.

In his youth, during wartime, Bud had joined the merchant navy. He worked on three tankers and one passenger-cargo ship during his naval stint and he saw many foreign ports. Despite this historic and global perspective, he remains eminently happy to make his home on Manitoulin Island, not far from his son Barry, in Sheguiandah. "Barry is my rock," Bud insists. "He does so much for me."

"My paternal great-grandfather lived in Belfast. His son, my grandfather William McConnell, left Ireland during one of the famines. He became a blacksmith in Pennsylvania where my dad was born. Dad was three when he came to Canada with his family. My mother's family came from Scotland."

William Ross (Bud) was born to Jessie and William McConnell on March 6, 1928 in an old farmhouse. "I should have been called William as was tradition for a first son, but Bud stuck." Bud would have two sisters and one brother. "My first memory is being immersed in the apple orchard on our farm. It was wonderful to climb those trees, sit undetected on a comfortable branch and eat fresh apples, mostly spy." He also recalls early Christmas celebrations with the family. "We all got a bag of candy and we always had a good time."

Another indelible memory established a convincing fear of snakes in a five-year-old. "My dad and the neighbours were haying. I was placed on top of a tree stump and hovered, terrified, as several snakes began to move up the sides of the stump towards me. My dad had to rescue me. This fear of snakes has never left me."

Bud grew up on a small 49-acre farm just outside of Fenwick, about six miles from Welland. "We had two acres of garden that needed a lot of work. Dad grew grain and vegetables for our own use, with the help of a plow and a team of horses. He also had a contract with Niagara Falls in the 1930s to grow yellow string beans. We had to pick these endlessly er from Halifax. It was neat to see the huge convoy suddenly change direction at a specific, pre-determined time."

"On one foggy night a ship from another line hit us hard enough to cave in our side-plates. Luckily, the damage was above the water line so we could continue," Bud shares. "I can still hear the resonating sound of depth charges, like a giant hammer on the hull, because they never stopped growing. I hate them almost as much as the snakes."

School was a one-room facility like most rural schools with seven grades and one teacher for 20 to 30 pupils. There was a pot-bellied stove that warmed the daily soup for all the children. "For some of the kids, this was a major meal. We all loved to stand beside the big aromatic pot, stir the soup and absorb the good smells."

Bud left school at age 12 and began to work on the farm and do other paid work. The war created many shortages, including food. Age was not a limiting factor to get a job. "Workers were needed everywhere so if you could do the job, you got it." His first job in the summer of 1940 was for Erie Peat near Port Colbourne. Bud cut and dried peat that was used in the operations of the Fort Erie Raceway. "I remember feeling proud to take my first week's pay of four dollars to my mother. I was a contributing member of the household." His next job was at Welland Machine and Tool, making aircraft wing struts for two years.

The winds of change blew for Bud. In the summer of 1943 he and three friends hitched a ride to Toronto to join the merchant navy. "My mum was 'some disturbed' but my dad said, 'you're growing up, stay out of trouble'." Bud and his friends got on the train. They wound up in the shipping office in New York City. They called for five guys to come forward. "I put my hand up like my friends, but I wasn't sitting near them and was not chosen for that ship. We had made a pact that we would stay together but fate had another role for me."

"My ship went to Baltimore where a line of rollers were welded all around the toe-rail of the boat. A flexible hose was placed on the rollers and trailed out behind to refuel the naval escorts, the corvettes. In rough waters and it could take hours to find the end of the hose." The ships left together going off continually (underwater, to deter German U-boats) while we were in the convoy." Bud wondered how the fleet could carry so many charges. "We came into Southampton two days after D-Day, June 6, 1944. All the roads to the docks were jammed with American trucks, waiting to be loaded and shipped to France."

During two nights at sea in early 1945, their ship had left the convoy and was heading for Halifax. "A submarine's conning-tower was spotted and we knew we had a problem. We began to run full out. Luckily, the water was rough with a large following wave. Apparently torpedoes don't travel in a straight line in such conditions. The sub followed us for two days, likely waiting for the conditions to change. We had our survival suits on and hoped the wind would stay strong. The ship struggled with the prop coming out and then dropping back into the water with a great shudder but we made it home safely."

Bud was home for shore leave for two spring days in 1945. His sister took him to an outdoor party where neighbours and friends perched on the grass while local talent performed. Pop was served and everyone had a good time. "That was the first time I met her friend, Dorothy June Clark. She was so beautiful, my heart fluttered. I thought I was having a heart attack," Bud confesses, smiling. "It was really hard to return to the Fernbrook, a passenger-cargo ship in Boston harbour."

"My fourth assignment was a passenger-cargo ship heading for Port Said, Egypt with four holds full of wheat. When we arrived at the port, the water at the docks was too shallow for the draft of our ship. A line of barges was stationed to unload the wheat. Planks were laid to connect the boats."

"Shoeless men had to step through the hot tar that had been used to seal the steel deck plates. They were lowered into the dangerously hot hold so they could shovel the grain into sacks, which they did at a furious pace, despite the heat. About 200 men, looking for any kind of work, waited in line. They were all slight, wearing what seemed to be identical light flannel smocks that went to their ankles. They waited for their turn to have a 120-lb sack thrown on their back by two other men. The men carried the sacks along those planks to shore. It was quite a sight to see. This unloading took 13 days and continued around the clock."

"We were allowed shore leave into a very restricted area where we were mobbed by kids of all ages wanting to sell an item or get something from us." Just prior to leaving for home in August of 1945, the men heard an important announcement on the ship's speaker. "War with Japan is over." It was time for jubilance and celebration!

Bud was 17 in August of 1945, and his tender age was enough to get him out of the whaling ship duty he had agreed to earlier. He was most anxious to be reacquainted with his lovely young girlfriend Dorothy.

When he got home, his dad got him a job with his own employer, Atlas Steel in Welland. By October, Bud was working in the Booming Mill. They held the paperwork until his 18th birthday. "I learned all the jobs in the Bar Mill too. The cross-training came in handy."

The Bar Mill, the 10.2 mill, was designed to roll many different shapes, round, octagonal, and flat bars. "The stainless steel bars you see as safety rails in elevators could have been made here," Bud explains. "All grades of titanium and some super alloys were rolled here. Even uranium bars from the reactor were rolled here. Later I was told they used small tubes to store these rather than bars. It seems many men felt these uranium bars resulted in pain and early death. Many of these plants have been torn down since."

Bud and Dorothy got happily reacquainted. They married on June 28, 1947 in Dorothy's family dining room, accompanied by 30 guests. The honeymoon was spent at Weslemcoo Lake in the Peterborough area. They both loved to fish and sail and these pursuits further bonded their new relationship. They moved into an apartment and stayed until their first baby was on the way, then the couple moved into Bud's parents' home.

"My father gave us nine acres of land and we built a modest home there. After seven years, we bought some land and built another home in the Fonthill area. This home was special. It was designed by Dorothy and built into a hillside. The layout took advantage of the landscape, with exit doors at different levels."

Bud continued to work at Atlas Steel. He volunteered to lead a Cub pack. Bud became a member of the Kinsmen Club and he joined a pipe band that travelled to various fairs and parades. "We got to each local town two to three times a year. Occasionally we got as far as New York or Ohio, so it kept us pretty busy."

"We had lots of good times with the kids who loved to fish too. At one point we had three raccoons for pets. Barry saw their mother get hit by a car and soon after heard the cries of her babies. He followed the cries to a hole in a nearby tree and carefully pulled each tiny creature out through the hole. They were rolled up like little squirrels. Sadly a few died, but three survived and became family."

Bud and Dorothy McConnell were still a beautiful pair in their later years together.

Northeast Town Council Notes

Council raises water and sewer rates

The Northeast Town council reviewed proposed increases to both the Sheguindah and Little Current water rates, as well as Little Current sewer rates, carrying a motion to increase both rates by two percent.

"It's unfortunate that we have to raise it, but we need to make sure we are covering costs," said Councillor Bruce Woods.

MNR fire agreement amended

Town CAO Dave Williamson reviewed with council a staff recommendation to amend the municipality's fire protection agreement with the Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR). He explained that currently the agreement includes all of the municipality, but that as the municipality's new insurance policy covers any area that the town's fire department can reach (in terms of bush fires), the town only needs to have an agreement with the MNR to cover Ward 1 (the islands).

Through the change, the town will save over $12,000. "I would just like to say good job to the staff on realizing these savings," commented Councillor Marcel Gauthier.

Council carried a motion to amend the MNR agreement.

Council supports Manitoulin Horse Club

After reviewing a letter from the Manitoulin Horse Club, the Northeast Town council carried a motion for the club to host four events at the Little Current horse ring located behind the recreation centre.

"The club has done upgrades to the ring through adding sand and other repairs at their own cost last year," said Councillor Bill Koehler. "They host good events and bring people out. I would support this."

Councillor Gauthier added that the Manitoulin Horse Club adds to Haweater Weekend through one of their horse shows at the Little Current ring.

"I think it's a wonderful addition to things in our community and I will also support this," added Councillor Michael Erskine.

A motion was carried to grant the club permission to use the ring to hold up to four shows.

Northeast Town joins Town of Minto in opposing hydro increase

The Northeast Town council reviewed a letter from the Town of Minto looking for support in calling on Premier Wynne to take "immediate action to prevent hydro rate increases from being implemented."

The resolution forwarded from the Town from Minto points out that the province's recently released long term plan anticipates that consumers will face hydro rates that will rise by 42 percent over the next five years.

Councillor Erskine said he felt that even if the Northeast Town carried a similar motion, little could be done to change the expected hydro increase.

"I don't agree," responded Councillor Koehler. "If more people stand up to this bull crap, then maybe someone at Queen's Park will start to listen."

Council carried a motion to support the Town of Minto's resolution.

Week of October 12-18 declared English as a Second Language Week

The Northeast Town council carried a motion to declare the week of October 12-18, 2014 as 'English as a Second Language Week.'

"We don't have a large population of individuals who speak English as a second language, but this is a good motion to support," said Mayor Al MacNevin.

Community services and public works reports

Reid Taylor delivered the community services report to committee. He noted that the ice season was closing that evening, but that it had been a good season.

"We had four main user groups this winter including Skate Canada, the Manitoulin Panthers, Little Current Minor Hockey and Manitoulin Secondary School hockey," explained Mr. Taylor. "We also had five adult recreation hockey rentals per week, hosted many public skates and five tournament and skating events. The extended ice season attracted rentals from all over the Island and was well received."

As for this April at the recreation centre, Mr. Taylor said that Northeast Town soccer registration had been held, as had minor lacrosse and that the recreation centre would be continuing to host Sea Cadets and ballet programs.

"The third annual Litter Blitz event will be held on Sunday, April 27 from 1 to 3 pm," continued Mr. Taylor, noting the event will start at the information centre and follow along the linear waterfront trail ending at Low Island where there will be a barbecue.

Mr. Taylor added that Spider Bay Marina will open on Friday, May 16 and that the downtown docks would be installed as weather permits.

Gary May reported on the public works department for March/April. He said that in terms of roads, "crews have been busy steaming culverts and storm drains."

"The frost is starting to leave causing culverts to move and surfaces to break in spots," he continued. "Patching is being done as needed and grading will start next week."

Mr. May was pleased to report to council that the new steamer had arrived and that staff will start training this week. He also reported that the new trackless would be arriving this week.

Building controls report

Brock Sanftenberg delivered the building controls report to committee. He said that "to date we have issued seven permits with a value to $37,000."

He added that follow up inspections are being conducted and that "numerous inquiries regarding building permits are being answered."

He concluded that parking is being monitored and tickets issued as required.

Fire report

Northeast Town Fire Chief Darren Bailey reviewed the March/April fire report with committee. He went over the month's calls including a response to medical call on March 21, a Water Street fire alarm on March 29 and again on March 31 and a CO alarm call on Mill Street on April 5.

Town prioritizes rural project

Based on recommendations from the Rural Community Services Advisory Committee (CSAC), the Northeast Town council reviewed and prioritized the rural projects for town staff to look into.

Making the top of the list was work to the Government Dock in Sheguindah. Second was the installation of stairs by the fish ladder in Sheguindah, followed by a rest area at Limekiln Road, work on the archeological site, a picnic area at Bay Estates, the removal of weeds by the beach in Sheguindah and the addition of dry fire hydrants.

After council prioritized the projects, Mayor MacNevin explained that staff would now begin work to see if funding was available and what future steps would have to be taken for each.

Municipalities can look forward to over half-million in DSB surplus return

by Alicia McCutcheon

MANITOULIN—Following the audited financial statements of the Manitoulin-Sudbury District Services Board (DSB) last week, the board was pleased to learn that the 2013 surplus came in at $523,983—the highest in some time—and will be going back to the municipalities within the DSB region, including Manitoulin Island.

It is thanks to unbudgeted EMS funding in the amount of $355,813 and a WSIB New Experimental Experience Rating rebate of $37,962 that topped up the surplus to $523,983, otherwise, DSB CAO Fern Dominelli explained, the surplus would have only been $130,208.

"We're recommending the surplus be given back to municipalities based on the 2013 apportionment," DSB CAO Fern Dominelli told the board, noting that the only unforeseen expense might by the sewer system project at Little Current's Channelview Apartments. The DSB is currently reviewing solutions to flooding problems the apartment building has had, either through a replacement gravity fed or outside sewer system, which would tie into the municipal sewer system.

Junior Eagles medal at RDSB

Coach Gerry Holliday has been working hard with a very young CMPS Eagles' junior girls' basketball team to get them ready for the tough Rainbow District School Board Junior Tournament. The players and his hard work paid off last week as the fledglings took third place in the competitive event. The squad lost their first game to Northeastern but evened their record with a win over Cyril Varney Public. The win put them in 2nd place in their pool so they played against R.L. Beattie the top team from the other pool. The Eagles lost a close one, 19 - 16 and were relegated to the bronze medal game where they beat Princess Anne Public to win the bronze medal game.

Congratulations to Marjorie Scott, Madison Skippen, Julia Desbiens-St. Amand, Avery Sheppard, Leah Carrick-Spry, Morgan Wall, Amber Wahl, Hailey McGillis-Prior and Aislinn Brown.

3 on 3 marathon

My Dad was a 'foreign' correspondent this weekend as he and Mom headed out to Sault Ste. Marie and attended as many games played by Manitoulin teams as was physically possible. With the Open Ice 3 on 3 Tournament using four different rinks all over the city, it was amazing just how many of them they got to see. Here is his account.

Well it was a real Manitoulin homecoming this weekend in Sault Saint Marie this weekend as a dozen Island teams competed in the huge, three on three hockey tournament. The majority of the teams did very well and everyone, players and parents seemed to have a great, season-ending time. With well over a hundred Islanders in the Soo, one could hardly go anywhere without seeing someone you knew.

Manitoulin's Average Joes, which was essentially the bantam Panthers, skated and passed their way to six straight victories to claim the Bantam Thunderbird division championships. The team, coached by Panther coach Steve Doane featured the following players: Braeden Case, Cole King, Greg Doan, Mike Megwanabe, Nate Debassige, Mason Pine, Noah Moreau, Tait Wallace and T. McGregor. Congratulations gentlemen and to their supportive parents.

I especially enjoyed meeting former Panther players such as Matt Case, Jeff Green and Jason Pitawanakwat who were there to see their sons compete, or as in Jeff's case, compete in the adult division! The "young" men still have the moves. These guys have great supportive wives and families who have been in arenas almost from birth. Good news for Matt and Leanne Case as both their boys, Noah and Owen, have made the Sault Greyhounds AAA teams in their age divisions.

Also doing well were M'Chigeeng boys Jeremy Couchie and Cole Pitawanakwat who won the Greyhound division in the Midget age group with a Soo squad. The boys were watched by their parents grandparents and great grandmother 93-year-old Mrs. Norman Debassige! What a wonderful hockey family.

In the 2004 Greyhound division the Manitoulin Danglers won two of three to make it to the semi-finals. The Manitoulin Minor Moose won two and tied two and made the semi-finals in the 2002 (Peewee) Thunderbird division. The Manitoulin Major Wildcats won 1, lost two and tied one in the 2001 Peewee Thunder Peewees to a 2-1 and 1 record. The Manitoulin Outlaws coached by Ray Moreau won three and lost one but were eliminated because of their GF/GA percentage. The Manitoulin Haweaters coached by Rob Dearing won 1 and lost 3. The Manitoulin Renegades, coached by Jeff Francis and Dave Webkamigad ended up losing all four games. They actually outscored an opponent although it was overruled under a protest. Congratulations as well to other Manitoulin coaches Jonas Bondy and Craig Abotossaway.

Night running

Congratulations to recent CMPS French teacher Michel Spadafore-Lemire on his impressive run in the first ever Northern Water Sports' 5K Night Run. Way to go Mich!

Tracking runners

Good luck and congratulations to James and William Scott and Carissa Holliday who have been training hard this winter for track season. The trio will be running at the annual Black Flies Track and Field Meet this weekend at the Laurentian track.

A good sport is good for sports.

Island trio share in national tournament glow

by Alicia McCutcheon

STONEY CREEK—After six straight days of fast, end-to-end hockey against the best midget AA girls' hockey teams in the country, the Sudbury Lady Wolves, among them Islanders Victoria Pitawanakwat of Wikwemikong, Kennedy Lanktree from Mindemoya and Deidre Debassige from M'Chigeeng, advanced to the Esso Cup bronze medal game held Saturday in Stoney Creek against their hosts. They won the match.

In the Sudbury Lady Wolves first game on Sunday, April 20, the opening game of the tournament, the girls lost against the Weyburn Gold Wings 2-1 (Kennedy with an assist). But the Wolves took it all in stride, Kyra Lanktree, Kennedy's mother, said.

"They outplayed Weyburn, but they just couldn't seem to put it by the net minder," she said.

The following day, on Monday, the Lady Wolves faced off against the Moncton Rockets.

"Their nerves were gone by then because they won 5-1," Ms. Lanktree said. Kennedy had one goal and one assist in the game, and Victoria saw one goal.

Game 3 was Tuesday night against hosts the Stoney Creek Sabres, the team that had been defeated by the Lady Wolves in the provincial championships 3-0 only a little over one week before. The Sabres were looking for redemption, however, and edged the Lady Wolves for a 2-1 victory. Kennedy took the assist on the lone goal and Victoria was named MVP.

"Deidre Debassige is firm on the blue line," Ms. Lanktree said of the Lady Wolves defence-woman during the Esso Cup. "She's doing a great job back there."

"The girls' backs were against the wall in game 4," Ms. Lanktree said, noting the do-or-die nature of the game against five-time returning champions the Edmonton Thunder. But the Lady Wolves took it all in stride, beating the national champs 3-2, Kennedy posting an assist.

"They were now sitting at 2 and 2, and with fate in their own hands, the girls had to win against Fraser Valley to advance to the semi-finals," Kennedy's mom explained. "The girls came out flying. It was 4-0 by the end of the first period."

The Lady Wolves won handily with a score of 6-3. Kennedy and Victory each notched two goals out of the six, with Kennedy named MVP of the game.

The girls took to the ice on Friday afternoon, facing Weyburn once again for a shot at the gold medal, but looking for a much different outcome than game 1. It was not to be, the Lady Wolves lost in a shutout to Weyburn, the final score 3-0.

On Saturday at noon, the girls

Kirkland Lake Gold Miners crowned NOJHL champions

Quest for the Dudley-Hewitt Cup begins this week in Wellington

KIRKLAND LAKE—An Everett Thompson power play tally late in the second period proved to be the difference as the Kirkland Lake Gold Miners edged the Soo Thunderbirds 2-1 last Tuesday evening to capture the Northern Ontario Junior Hockey League's (NOJHL) Copeland Cup McNamara trophy as NOJHL champions in six hard-fought games.

The Gold Miners, the former Manitoulin Islanders franchise, now advance to represent the league at the Dudley-Hewitt Cup Central Canadian Jr. A championship, April 29 through May 3, in Wellington.

In last Tuesday's contest Kirkland Lake opened the scoring two-and-a-half minutes in as Steven Babin beat a Thunderbirds defender to the puck on a dump in that was left behind the net by goaltender Joel Horodziejczyk and fed a wide-open Damon MacEachern in front who slipped the night's first tally into a yawning cage.

Sault Ste. Marie, playing without the captain and the NOJHL's leading scorer Gavin Burbach due to injury, notched the equalizer midway through the contest as Tyler Jones made a crisp cross-ice pass from the right point to the stick of the Nicolas Tassone, who wristed a shot past Gold Miners' starter Jeremy

The home side retook the lead late in the second stanza during a man advantage as Babin neatly chipped a puck past Jones just into Sault territory where McEachern sent it over to Thompson, who beat Horodziejczyk from in close at 18:18.

Kirkland Lake had another good opportunity in the final seconds of the frame only to see Samuel Wilbur's backhand stopped by Horodziejczyk.

Neither side would score in the final 20 minutes with Pominville and Horodziejczyk making a number of key saves in thwarting opposing shooters.

The Thunderbirds pulled their netminder in the late going in an effort to notch the equalizer, but could not dent the Gold Miners' defence.

Final shots on goal were 26-25 in favour of the visitors.

Joining the Gold Miners in the Dudley-Hewitt Cup will be the host Wellington Dukes along with Ontario Junior Hockey League champion Toronto Lakeshore Patriots.

With the field of competing teams now set for the Dudley-Hewitt Cup Central Jr. A hockey championship, game action got underway Tuesday afternoon when the champions of the Superior International Junior Hockey League, the Fort Frances Lakers, took on the title holders of the Ontario Junior Hockey League, the Toronto Lakeshore Patriots.

Rounding out day 1 competition will be NOJHL's Kirkland Lake Gold Miners, tangling with the host Wellington Dukes at 7:30 pm.

The following is a rundown on each of the clubs that earned their way to compete in the Dudley-Hewitt Cup.

Kirkland Lake Gold Miners: Like Fort Frances, Kirkland Lake enters the Dudley-Hewitt Cup fresh off their first-ever championship.

A well balanced attack, stingy defensive play and top notch goaltending allowed the Gold Miners to go 12-2 in postseason action.

After sweeping North Bay in the quarter-finals, Kirkland Lake did likewise to Espanola before facing a formidable opponent in the Copeland Cup McNamara Trophy NOJHL final vs. the top ranked Soo Thunderbirds, who were not only the first place finisher in league play, but also the No. 1 ranked club in the 128-team Canadian Junior Hockey League.

In the NOJHL championship Kirkland Lake won their initial crown in six hard-fought games.

Steven Babin led the Miners in playoff scoring with 18 points and was only held pointless in one of 14 post-season contests.

Austin Rust chipped in with 14 points, including a league-high four game-winning goals and was named NOJHL playoff MVP.

In net Jeremy Pominville was stellar for Kirkland Lake going 11-2 in the second season and led all goaltenders in average and save percentage at 1.85 and .931 respectively.

Head Coach: Marc Lafleur

Regular season record: 43-7-1-5

Place: 2nd overall

Final CJHL Rank: 13th

Playoff record: 12-2

Fort Frances Lakers: Battling back from a 3-1 series deficit versus the Minnesota Iron Rangers, Fort Frances stormed back to win the final three games of the Bill Salonen Cup final to capture their first Superior International Junior Hockey League (SIJHL) title in franchise history.

In semifinal play the Lakers, who were their league's regular season, swept the English River Miners in four straight games.

The also won an opening round match-up against the Thunder Bay North Stars.

Fort Frances forward Miles Nolan led all SIJHL skaters in playoff scoring with 15 points, including a league-high 10 goals. He faced their rivals, and hosts, the Stoney Creek Sabres, whom they had played in game 3 of the tournament. It wasn't until the second period of the game that the Wolves picked up their pace, coming in fast and furious and were rewarded for their efforts with a goal less than two minutes in. Another goal at 14:08 saw the Lady Wolves take the lead for the remainder of the second period. After the Sabres tied the match in the third period, it was Wikwemikong's own Victoria Pitawanakwat who saw the Northern girls take the lead and win the bronze medal.

The Expositor spoke with Kennedy Monday morning after a triumphant return to Manitoulin Secondary School. She admitted she was tired but said, "it was amazing—it was a once-in-a-lifetime thing to do."

Kennedy said she was impressed with how she and her team were treated at the Esso Cup, noting the items left for them in their dressing room and at the banquet, such as T-shirts, pucks, water bottles and more.

"We were treated really well," she said.

Kennedy said the best game of the tournament was by far the bronze medal game, adding that following each of their games, the girls would head back to their hotel rooms to watch the games and listen to the commentary and play-by-play calls that were made by Hockey Canada. It was also memorable "seeing our coaches almost burst out crying," she added.

Kennedy, a Grade 11 student, is already looking forward to next year's triumphant return to the nationals, a goal that has already been set by the coaches of the Lady Wolves this spring. There is no rest for the weary, though, as tryouts for next year's squad take place this week in Sudbury.

Deidre, too, hopes to make the Lady Wolves team again next season and left the Esso Cup headed for Montreal where she is currently competing in the National Aboriginal Hockey Championships.

Kennedy said she is hoping to receive a hockey scholarship to play in the United States upon graduation, just as teammate Victoria already has with the Rochester Institute of Technology. Next season will mark the 10th year Kennedy and Deidre have been teammates.

It takes a lot of dedication to get to this stage, however.

Victoria started playing hockey for the Manitowaning Wolves at an early age, continuing with the organization until her first year at the peewee level where she made the jump to play for the Manitoulin Ice Angels bantam team. The following year she would go back with her own age group and play with the Ice Angel peewees. Her first year as a bantam, Victoria made the decision to try out for the Sudbury Lady Wolves and succeeded in making the bantam BB team. In her second bantam year, Victoria would earn her spot on the bantam AA team and would remain on the first picked team in her three years of midget AA play for the Lady Wolves.

"It's a good way to end things," Victoria said of taking bronze at the Esso Cup.

After five years with the Lady Wolves, the young woman is excited about her new adventure, continuing her hockey dream at Rochester Technical Institute. "The stands are full of fans—it's a pretty good atmosphere," she said of the school.

Like Kennedy, her highlight of the tournament was beating Stoney Creek. "We've been playing those guys all year," she said.

She also acknowledged the royal treatment the players received, including 20-minute warm-ups, just like the pros.

After a few days off following the nationals, Victoria said she is eager to hit the gym, keeping her training up for the fall.

Kennedy got her start playing hockey for the Mindenoya Thunder at the age of 5. Deidre also started at this age for the M'Chigeeng Thunderbirds. Both girls played with their home clubs until their first year of novice when they would both try out for the Manitoulin Panthers. They would play the following year with the Panther atom team. For their second year of atom, a decision was made to try out for an all girls rep team. Both girls proved to be good enough and after the first two tryouts, both were guaranteed a spot on the Lady Wolves atom A team. They would continue to prove to be valuable players and would remain with the Lady Wolves A and AA teams from peewee through midget levels.

Kennedy and Deidre would join with Victoria for the first time as teammates at the bantam level, Victoria in her second year, Kennedy and Deidre their first. They would then reunite as teammates two years later as midget AA players.

"This was Victoria's last year as a Lady Wolf and the goals were set early in the season," Ms. Lanktree told The Expositor. "After missing a spot at provincials for the last two years and Kennedy and Deidre missing that chance once, they would not settle for anything less."

"The three young ladies all bring different attributes to the team," the proud mother states. "While Kennedy and Victoria play forward positions, they are relied upon to put the puck in the net. Deidre holds the spot on the blue line as defence and is relied on to help shut down the opposing team."

As for other young female hockey players hoping to one day play in a national championship game, Kennedy has the following advice. "If you really like it, play on a higher division team, and hopefully your dreams will come true too."

"It's never too late," Victoria advises. "I didn't start playing rep hockey until the bantam level. Just don't give up on trying out for better teams."

This very spirited athlete brings a positive attitude to every sport she is involved in. Hanna Boyer is in Grade 11 this year and she is very enthusiastic on how to get involved and have school spirit around MSS! Even back when Hanna attended LCPS she won the science award and was on the honour roll in Grade 8. In Grade 9 and 10, Hanna was on the cross country and track and field team. Her cross country team qualified to NOSSA both years, and she qualified to NOSSA for long distance racing in Grade 9. So far in her Grade 11 year, Hanna has been on the cross country team, volleyball team and is looking forward to the upcoming track season as well. Another sport she is planning on trying out for is tennis! "My inspiration is my sister, growing up to be like her, she is my role model, she always had the best attitude towards everyone and she always had a smile on her face" said Hanna. Away from school and sports, Hanna enjoys photography, reading, listening to music, kayaking, skiing and hanging out with friends. Hanna's favourite sport is volleyball, she likes how it is a team sport and everyone needs to be aware of each other. Hanna's favourite subject is biology because she loves science and the facts of why things are what they are. Hanna loves how sports make it a fun way to exercise and get physical activity. After high school, Hanna is planning on taking a year off before university or college. Then travel in Europe for a month with her parents, ending her trip in Spain and hopefully stay there and work for 4 to 5 months. Best of luck on all of your future adventures and goals, and keep up the great work Hanna!

Feds amend controversial Fair Elections Act

by Alicia McCutcheon

OTTAWA—After a collective howl of displeasure that resonated across the country at the Conservative government's proposed Fair Elections Act, led by junior Minister of State for Reform Pierre Poilievre, the federal government announced late last week changes to the contentious bill.

The first draft of the Fair Elections Act took away the option to have someone vouch for his or her identity at the polls in lieu of voter identification. It also allowed political parties to access a list, showing who had voted and who did not. Elections Canada was also stripped of its rights to advertise with the hopes of encouraging voter turnout.

The bill also saw changes to campaign finance, what the Chief Electoral Officer can and cannot say, the role of the Commissioner of Canada Elections and the ability for local party associations, or the national party itself, to nominate returning officers and poll clerks, among many other items.

On Friday Minister Poilievre announced that voters will still be required to show identification, but if they don't have proof of address another person can vouch for them. He also amended the original bill to allow the Chief Electoral Officer to speak on any issue, removing the 'gag order,' as well as the amendment that saw returning officers and poll clerks appointed by party.

The spending stipulations in regards to mail outs and phone calls to past donors have also been dropped, and 'robocalls' by telemarketing agencies will now have to keep all scripts and recordings for three years, instead of the proposed one year.

"From the start, Mr. Poilievre said there would be no changes, that the bill was not flawed," Algoma-Manitoulin-Kapuskasing MP Carol Hughes told The Expositor. "Obviously there are problems and there continues to be problems."

Ms. Hughes said that any election reform should take in the say of all Canadians. "Every piece of legislation is important. There used to be a time when you could weigh in on issues such as this," she added, calling the circumstances surrounding the Fair Elections Act part of the failure of the political system over the years.

"The NDP have been very vocal on this: we've all made mention with respect to this act, which is anything but fair," Ms. Hughes added. "It's really providing less of an opportunity for people to vote when we should be encouraging people to vote." In reference to eliminating Elections Canada's right to advertise, she said, "they're saying advertising resulted in less voter turnout, and that's definitely not true."

"We're seeing where they're trying to skew this in their favour," Ms.

Hughes continued, noting similar situations in the United States with the Republican party making it so that "only the people they want to vote will vote."

She called the Friday announcement by Minister Poilievre a positive step, but said more work needs to be done.

Ms. Hughes explained that she was part of the Parliamentary Library Committee that was in the midst of undertaking the Parliamentary 20/20 study before the last election, which looked at how to interest Canadians in their government, in turn increasing voter turnout.

"After the last election these efforts went by the wayside and no matter how many times I bring it up, there's never a favourable response," she said. "And that's been intentional."

Ms. Hughes said that time and time again, Conservative government moves that have little to no public consultation are coming back to "slap them in the face," noting the bills on prostitution, minimum mandatory sentences, the support of Judge Marc Nadon to the Supreme Court and now, the Fair Elections Act.

"Instead of doing their due diligence, they should be having conversations with Canadians," Ms. Hughes added. "This is a government that's really not interested in points of view other than their own."

The Patriots began their quest for the Buckland Cup disposing of the Toronto Jr. Canadiens in four games.

In quarter-final play they breezed past the North York Rangers in one game over the minimum before putting the broom to the Georgetown Raiders in the conference final.

In the Ontario Junior Hockey League (OJHL) championship they bested the Aurora Tigers in six games.

An offensive force in the playoffs, Toronto Lakeshore assistant captain Kevin Shier garnered the Brett Ladds trophy, emblematic of OJHL's most valuable player in the postseason.

The 20-year-old tallied eight times and doled out 24 assists for a OJHL-best 32 points in 19 outings.

Andreas Tsogkas topped TLP in regular season play with 57 points that included a team-best 31 goals.

'Festival of the Seven' leverages the region's connection to iconic artists

by Michael Erskine

SUDSBURY—The Art Gallery of Sudsbury (AGS) is once again celebrating the influence of the famed Group of Seven with the Festival of the Seven.

"The Art Gallery of Sudsbury is presenting the second summer long 'Festival of the Seven' celebrating Franklin Carmichael and the Group of Seven's importance to the Sudsbury, Killarney, Manitoulin and LaCloche areas," confirmed AGS curator Tom Smart. "The festival will feature special exhibitions, interactive excursions, musical performances, art, film, and education workshops." Last year saw the launch of Sue and Pat Waddington's book 'In the Footsteps of the Group of Seven,' he noted. "They will have a role in this year's presentations as well. The Festival of the Seven highlights the significant impact the Sudsbury, Killarney and LaCloche areas had on Franklin Carmichael, A.Y. Jackson, The Group of Seven and their contemporaries."

"The Festival of the Seven just keeps getting bigger and better," said AGS board member and renown Willisville photographer Jon Butler. "We are encouraging local lodge and resort owners to come on board with events of their own and a lot of them have already risen to the occasion."

The festival is particularly poignant for Killarney Park and the LaCloche region this year due to it being the 50th anniversary of the park. "A lot of people don't realize that A.Y. Jackson played an important role in the establishment of Killarney Park," said Mr. Butler. "He wrote a number of letters in support of the creation of the park."

At least five members of the Group of Seven worked extensively in the Manitoulin/LaCloche regions and their work has inspired many artists working in a wide range of mediums and art forms in the region today.

"Last year's festival sought to develop a multidisciplinary program and to highlight how (the Group of Seven's) work has inspired contemporary artists," said Mr. Smart. "Last year, for example, we had Diana Thornycroft who replicated their work as backdrops in her installation 'Group of Seven Awkward Moments.'"

Think Dave and Doug McKenzie of the 'Great White North' fame, sitting drinking beer on their couch in the forest, surrounded by a pack of ravenous wolves. Ms. Thornycroft's dark humour and groundbreaking work has received international attention and acclaim.

Another innovative facet of last year's festival was the creation of a graphic novel highlighting the mysterious demise of Tom Thomson written by George Walker. That work is now being integrated into Parry Sound's Festival of Sound with a display at the Stockey Centre this summer.

This year's Festival of the Seven will have its official opening at the AGS at the end of June, with a special pre-launch taking place on May 22.

The Festival of Seven leverages the special relationship the Manitoulin, LaCloche, Killarney and Sudsbury areas have with the art of the Group of Seven to attract tourists to the entire region and is being looked at as a template for other regions across the North and beyond—but they don't have the same cache as ours. "Of course not," laughs Mr. Smart in agreement. "But they are looking at us as the model."

The Festival of the Seven is looking to lift the economic boats of the entire region with a tide built upon the global reputation of the Group of Seven and their love of the rugged beauty of the wild and untamed Canadian landscape and there is a role for just about everyone to play.

"If you are in the Sudsbury, LaCloche, Manitoulin or Killarney areas and have a Group of Seven inspired event, give us a call at 705-675-4871," encourages Mr. Smart.

Islanders encouraged to apply for managed forest tax credit

by Alicia McCutcheon

MANITOULIN—Hawea Maria Diebolt has conservation in her blood. The daughter of retired Conservation Officer John Diebolt, she has returned to her native Manitoulin to help Islanders in their own forestry conservation efforts and to map out a managed forest plan in order to qualify for the Ontario Managed Forest Tax Incentive Program.

Ms. Diebolt explained that she is a recent graduate of Lakehead University with a major in forestry conservation and this opportunity, to be a managed forest plan approver, was a perfect opportunity for her to practice her trade. "I really like talking to people, so this is kind of a natural step for me," she said.

The tax incentive program, she explained, is jointly administrated between the Ministry of Natural Resources, the Ontario Forestry Association and the Ontario Woodlot Association.

She explained that the term 'managed forest' means getting landowners to manage their forests in a sustainable way. For landowners with 10 acres or more of forested land (excluding residences), they could receive a 75 percent tax reduction on that portion of their land. Ms. Diebolt gave the example of people who own hunting properties or a maple stand as those who may want to make a managed forest plan.

lease. All new tenants will be required to sign leases that include a smoke-free requirement."

Ms. Moroso also explained that new and amended leases will include information or the penalty for smoking in a smoke free designated unit, including a cleaning fee of $300 and possible termination of tenancy.

Derek Stephens, Central Manitoulin councillor, called the new policy "discriminatory" toward smokers.

Mr. Dominelli said that residents can still go outside to smoke and that designated smoking areas will be established and identified on each DSB property, adding that it will probably take upwards of 20 years for the buildings to be entirely smoke free.

"It is your right to smoke, but it's not my right to smell your smoke," said Gore Bay Councillor Lou Addison.

Espanola Mayor Mike Lehoux noted that whether buildings have smoke free units in them or not, no wall can contain the permeation of cigarette smoke within those buildings.

The motion to make DSB social housing units smoke free effective January 1, through attrition, carried.

...challenges Conservatives and NDP leaders to Northern Ontario issues debate

Craig Hughson, the Ontario Liberal candidate for Algoma-Manitoulin, also weighed in, calling the challenge, "further proof that Kathleen Wynne's Liberals are focussed on Northern Ontario and continuing to better the lives of Northern Ontarians every day" in a press release issued by his office. Mr. Hughson went on to say, "it is clear that the Liberal Party is the best party to represent our priorities as Northerners."

Ms. Wynne's challenge is in keeping with her record of taking action for Northerners, said Mr. Hughson. "A proposed Northern leaders debate demonstrates Premier Wynne's ongoing commitment to ensure that Northern Ontario's concerns are addressed. Our premier has travelled to the North to meet with municipal and business leaders numerous times. She fully understands and recognizes the importance of Northern priorities and Northern economic growth as a critical part of our government's plan," said the Liberal candidate for Algoma-Manitoulin.

"Algoma-Manitoulin residents need a strong effective MPP that will stand up and work for Algoma-Manitoulin," Mr. Hughson continued. "Our MPP should be working to get Algoma-Manitoulin priorities into this budget, not travelling around the North telling people he plans to vote against it. The Mantha-Hudak approach of planning to vote against the budget without reading it is irresponsible and reckless. Partisanship should not triumph over a better Northern Ontario. Algoma-Manitoulin deserves better," concluded Mr. Hughson.

...group recommends 30% deer tag reduction provide the deer access to food, as many as six dead fawns were seen (along one route), which is a large number especially in a small geographical area."

"I weighed a few of the deer that perished and one fawn was just 38 pounds. It had frozen and died from starvation," said Mr. Anderson. "So this year we are going to see two age classes having been impacted by the winter and there will be a scarcity of fawns."

"What is unseen is the fawns that won't be born," continued Mr. Anderson. "We'll see a shortage of two age classes, last year's fawn crop and this spring's. This is going to have an impact on Manitoulin Island for years to come."

With the severe winter Manitoulin Island endured this year, and the loss of deer because of the harsh weather, the United Fish and Game Clubs of Manitoulin (UFGCM) is calling for a 30 percent reduction in antlerless deer tag permits for this fall's annual deer hunt on the Island. This recommendation has been forwarded on to the Ministry of Natural Resources for action.

"When you can pick up an adult deer and throw it in the truck with the tailgate up you know there is a problem," said Mr. Anderson.

"In my personal feeling, and to err on the side of caution, we won't know exactly how many deer we have lost until the harvest this fall," said Mr. Anderson. "I think it's a no-brainer that we have to reduce the number of antlerless deer tags another 25 to 30 percent. I think this will be a minimum."

"If we want make a decision based on the health of the Manitoulin we have to reduce the tags, it's just a matter of how many," stated Mr. Anderson. He also said that the deer being spotted in fields and on the sides of roads are probably all the deer that remain after this winter's hard conditions.

"We have to be hardnosed on this issue (to recommend a decrease in deer tags) or we will be shooting ourselves in the foot," said UFGCM member Ches Witty at a recent meeting.

"We have to have reductions due to the anticipated loss in deer," said Mr. Anderson. "I saw more dead deer this winter than I've seen in any of the past 20 winters."

Jim Sloss, UFGCM chair, commended Mr. Anderson and other members of the Deer Save Committee and volunteers for their efforts this winter in saving deer on the Island.

"This recommendation (if approved) would be for one year," noted Mr. Anderson. "My guess is the harvest may have gone up a little bit last fall, and I suspect hunter success went up as well, but now because of the winter we had, we are now back in the hole."

Last year's antlerless deer tags were set at 3,900 (3,500 for Wildlife Management Unit 43B and 400 for WMU 43A) for the annual Manitoulin deer gun hunt.

"To the families impacted by the transition and our community partners, we want to emphasize that the designation of KGCFS as an agency is a significant gain for First Nations children and their families," Ms. Morrow states. "Designation of KGCFS will ensure the agency's vision that KGCFS will honour and support our family's and community's inherent authority to care for their children based on unity, traditions, values, beliefs and customs. The basis for this will be the wider implementation of a community-based model for prevention and protection services, one that incorporates cultural traditions and the practices under First Nations' leadership."

"The founding objective of KGCFS has always been to ensure First Nations children are protected and stay connected with their culture, language and community while strengthening family and community relationships," Ms. Morrow continued. "Designation has been a goal that KGCFS has pursued since its inception more than 20 years ago and the process of transitioning KGCFS to agency status is a realization of this goal. Through our efforts to fully realize this goal and ensure a successful transition, CASDSM and KGCFS are working closely with the Ministry of Child and Youth Services and our community partners, including First Nations leadership, the families impacted, and first response groups. The children impacted by the transition are, as always, our first priority. As such, KGCFS and CASDSM will continue to keep the best interests of the children and families that we work with at the forefront of our efforts to achieve a smooth transition."

It is important to note, however, that not all families will be transitioned to KGCFS. It will only be those that are recognized and identified members of the seven First Nations served by KGCFS initially followed by a second phase of all other First Nations. CASDSM will continue to provide child protection services to Metis and Inuit families.

"We encourage all families that have a history with CASDSM and KGCFS to reach out to their case workers for more information as to how the transition might affect them," Ms. Morrow said. "KGCFS and CASDSM are committed to supporting our community partners in their efforts to ensure that every child serviced within the Districts of Sudbury and Manitoulin receives the services they need throughout the transition to the community-based model. The services provided by first response teams (police, hospitals, violence against women services, school boards, healthy babies/healthy children services), in particular, will be impacted. KGCFS is currently negotiating new protocols with all first response groups and more information regarding new protocols and the timeline for implementation will be distributed as soon as possible."

"During the transition," she continued, "first response groups can contact either KGCFS or CASDSM. Children remain our first priority for KGCFS and CASDSM. Services will overlap and be redirected as needed to ensure that all children receive the help they need, when they need it, during the transition. KGCFS and CASDSM are committed to keeping our stakeholders up-to-date on the transition and will continue to provide information as it becomes available."

which led to the construction of the new mall," explained Mary Lynn Odjig, general manager/EDO for the WDC. "We did a community study, door-to-door in 2008 inclusive of everything, and one of the questions we asked was 'how much do you spend in each area?' such as gas, hydro, food and where? After we gathered all the data we brought it to Zarex Business Centre to complete an economic leakage study. They determined that people in the community were spending $15 million in retail and that $10 million of that figure was leaving the community. They also identified a discount/dollar store as the number one business opportunity for the community."

Through research into what would be the best franchise for the community, 'The Dollar Store With More' was identified and opened as the anchor tenant in the new mall.

"With the dollar store we aren't looking for a big profit," explained Chief Duke Peltier. "It was identified as something the community needed and something that was causing our band members to leave the community for. We are hoping to

...initiates peacemaker justice program

"Each party gives a rationale and together they come up with a plan of restitution," the chief explained. "This could be community service hours or pay back restitution in lieu of a criminal record."

He said not having a criminal record is crucial, as so often a young offender who has made one bad decision will be forced to live with that black mark for the rest of their lives. This, he said, can lead to a path of despair leading to still more inappropriate decisions.

Funding for the program has been accessed through the Ontario Ministry of Children's and Youth Services.

"It's not a lot of money, but if we can make a difference in some young people's lives, that's what counts," Chief Peltier told The Expositor.

The diversion process works both pre-charge, with the police referring the offender to the Peacemaker Justice Program, and also post-charge, when the Crown Attorney and justice program will review the dockets and liaise about potential candidates for diversion. Any individual can also request a diversion to the program. The offender also has the right to consult with legal counsel and has the right to refuse the diversion.

Offences that are not subject to diversion include: spousal abuse, sexual offences, child abuse, offences involving serious injury or death, offences involving firearms and any other offences the police or Crown Attorney may restrict for diversion.

"Once the recommendation is made, the onus would be on the accused that this is a process they would like to engage in," Chief Peltier explained. "The victim would also have to agree to it."

"Some of these things are unnecessarily going through our court systems," the chief continued. "It falls in line with Ogimaa Duke Peltier met with Wikwemikong Tribal Police Chief Gary Reid and Crown Attorney Stacy Haner to sign the Wikwemikong Justice Diversion Protocol last week. The protocol outlines the process of pre-charge and post-charge diversion where the police and Crown Attorney can refer cases to the Wikwemikong Peacemaker Justice Program to hold justice circles. Also present were justice personnel and members of the Wikwemikong Justice Committee: In photo are, front row, from left, Wikwemikong Police Chief Gary Reid, Crown Attorney Stacy Haner, Ogimaa Duke Peltier, back row, Detective Constable Scott Cooper, Miranda Trudeau, Rhonda Trudeau, Band Councillor Gladys Wakegijig, Justice R.P. taking a step forward toward breaking that cycle (crime to court to crime). It also gives our community the initiative in taking some of the responsibility into our own hands instead of a Justice of the Peace making those decisions."

Community consultations have been taking place in the community since December, as have mock sessions and scenarios by way of training for the people involved in the new protocol.

"This has given the justice committee confidence that this will work and be sustainable," he added, noting that he is hopeful that Wikwemikong will be able to make the case for long-term funding. "It makes economical sense for them (Ontario government) as opposed to tying up valuable court time."

"The Office of the Crown Attorney for the District of Manitoulin is very excited about the Wikwemikong Peacemaker Justice Program," criminal justice system is a very positive step towards ensuring that justice is properly administered in that community. We look forward to continuing to work closely with the Peacemaker program."

The United Chiefs and Councils of Mnidoo Mnising (UCCMM) has had a similar program in place since the mid-1990s and has deemed it a success.

"It works just excellent," said United Chiefs and Councils of Manitoulin Police Chief Rodney Nahwegahbow. "It's an opportunity for offenders to accept responsibility for their actions."

"Because the person accepts responsibility, it allows all parties to express how it has affected them," the police chief added, giving the example of his recent involvement in a healing circle with a youth who had been picked up for underage drinking.

Police Chief Nahwegahbow said he told the young offender that because of this mischief, his police officers were taken away from more pressing matters. "Not that it isn't important, but it's time consuming. We try to use the justice program whenever we can."

Eli Fox is the community justice worker for UCCMM and said that, since 1998, approximately 500 people have gone through the justice program.

"And our recidivism rate is pretty good—15 percent since 1998," he said.

"The idea behind it is we use the term 'healing' rather than 'punishment' or 'retribution'."

with potential partners in addition to showing individuals the opportunities that exist," explained Chief Peltier. "We really want to foster development in the community."

Another project that Ms. Odjig and the chief were excited to share was an art gallery, scheduled to open in the new mall June 1.

"We've hired Mike Cywink (a Wikwemikong artist and former Ojibwe Cultural Foundation curator) to develop the art sector in Wikwemikong," Chief Peltier said. "The gallery will be in a central location to provide exposure of Wikwemikong art locally, but Mr. Cywink will also be working on cataloguing and determining markets in other areas of the province and Canada. We want to create a market for local artists of all kinds, from woodwork, painting etc., so that they can keep creating and pass on their knowledge to future generations."

All of these projects are from the Comprehensive Community Plan, Capital Plan and Land Use Plan, which work together to provide direction to the band and council.

"We developed the Comprehensive Community Plan in 2012, which council will be reviewing again in May," Chief Peltier said. "The Capital Plan gives Wik-wemikong an overall map of what we are working towards. We recently fully implemented our first plan and now have approved our plan for the next 20 years. It is clear to people who have just returned to the community just how much has changed and been developed over the last 15 years. As for the Land Use Plan, we have designated areas for future development such as an industrial park in Buzwah by the cell tower."

The chief said that some of the projects identified as priorities in terms of infrastructure under the Capital Plan include the replacement of Wasse-Ain Pontic School and Wasse-Abin Junior School, with feasibility studies to start this year. Roads and drainage upgrades, the replacement of aging public works equipment and senior citizen long term care expansion has also been identified.

"Wikwemikong has a rising population, with the age median getting younger and younger," said Chief Peltier. "We need to provide opportunities to sustain people living here by promoting and growing local development."

"We are working towards a community that, in another 20 years, is self-sustaining, operating under its own governance and is continuing to expand into a vibrant economy."

...workers commemorate 'Day of Mourning'

"April 28 was chosen as the date of the National Day of Mourning for a very specific reason," noted Manitoulin Legal Clinic executive director Michael Shain. "On this date, 100 years ago, Justice William Meredith laid down the foundations of the system by which workers in this country were to be compensated for injuries in the workplace (and employers protected from lawsuits) and it was on April 28, 1914 that the Workers' Compensation Act first came into being."

The Manitoulin North Shore Injured Workers Coalition organized the event in AOK in part to help bring attention to changes to how workers' claims are assessed that are currently being instituted by the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board (WSIB) and the deteriorating plight of injured workers in the province.

"In 2012 there were 977 workers killed in Ontario," said Mr. Shane. "Between 1993 and 2012 there were 18,029 people who lost their lives on the jobsite in Canada. In Ontario alone there were 242,000 workplace injuries that resulted in workers not being able to report for work the next day. It is staggering."

The ceremony in AOK opened with the wreath laying ceremony and the lighting of a candle by the family of Brent Wade, a 22-year-old worker from Sheguiandah who was killed on the job on November 9, 1999.

Master of ceremonies, Manitoulin North Shore Injured Workers chair Colin Pick, explained the significance of the colours of the flowers in the wreath.

"Black is for the workplace deaths, yellow is for those stricken by cancer or other diseases caused by toxins in the workplace and white is for those who have died from causes on the worksite that are still unknown," he said.

Retired United Church Minister Martin Garniss delivered the opening prayer, preceding the invocation by relating his own harrowing near miss as a construction worker when a gravel loaded front end loader tipped into the trench he was working in with his brother-in-law. He related another experience he had while working on a survey crew, as he watched helplessly when a poorly trained university student driving a huge loader failed to double-clutch when downshifting and rolled backwards over a cliff to his death.

Reverend Garniss quoted from the Song of Solomon, citing the words from the Bible noting that with all the ancient king's wealth and fame, his sense of what was important in life connects with all of us.

AOK First Nation Chief Patsy Corbiere was unable to attend the ceremony, but she sent words of welcome to the traditional territory of Mnidoo Mnising on behalf of the AOK Fist Nation leadership, staff and community members through her representative.

"I would like to acknowledge and welcome the planners of this event, master of ceremonies Colin Pick, Reverend Martin Garniss and Michael Shain from the Manitoulin Legal Clinic and the federal government for officially recognizing the National Day of Mourning," she said. "The significance of this day is overwhelming as we pay tribute to the many individuals who have lost their lives from workplace injuries."

Chief Corbiere acknowledged Brent's mother, Joanne Wade and her family. "I could not imagine the grief that she has gone through in the workplace accident of her son Brent," said the chief. "She has worked tirelessly as an advocate for workplace safety and I am very proud of the personal stance that she has taken to raise awareness of such a critical issue, workplace safety. As employers, we must strive to establish safe conditions in the workplace that will prevent deaths, illnesses and injuries—not just on April 28, but every single day of the year."

Her initial reaction was one of totally disbelief. "Impossible," she said. But it was, and as denial was forced away by the terrible reality of her son's death. "So much of me died that day," she said.

Ms. Wade went on to describe her son as 'a good kid' who was finally leaving behind the rambunctiousness of youth and looking forward to settling down, marrying and raising his own family. "So many of my hopes and dreams were his hopes and dreams," she said. She described her last conversation with her son, he had found a serious girlfriend he couldn't wait to introduce to her, had quit drinking and was saving his money for a home.

"When I finally met the girl of his dreams, it was at his funeral," she said.

Ms. Wade recalled how at a time when she, as a parent, was supposed to be a support for her children, her daughters wound up supporting her. "I went into a strange world where I didn't know who I was or where I was," she said. "I couldn't function. I was an RN and I was unable to function. I should have been there to support my daughters, but I wasn't."

The strange new world she was in is hard for those who have never suffered loss to understand. "People are there for you when it happens," she said. But the immediate aftermath passes for them. Life goes on. It is not the same for the parent who loses a child. She recalled one Saturday morning shopping, three months after her son's death. "I was standing in the grocery store staring at the maple syrup...and I just started bawling," she said. "Saturdays were our day to get together and have pancakes."

The people who were so supportive before would avoid her, going through the other aisle, too embarrassed or uncomfortable to approach her. "So many things had changed," she said.

Today, all she has of her son are the memories, such as the picture of their last trip together. "That is what I have left to last me a lifetime," she said. "Children are not supposed to die

Cultural symposium gives direction to coordination of Island arts endeavours

by Isobel Harry

KAGAWING—On a rare sunny day last week, a diverse group of more than three dozen artists, institutional, municipal and business representatives, funders and supporters of Island arts and culture met in a Cultural Direction Day organized by LAMBAC at the Park Centre in Kaga-wong. The meeting was the follow-up to last November's Manitoulin Cultural Symposium and subsequent Action Day.

The agenda for last fall's Symposium and Action Day originated in LAMBAC's strategic plan for 2010-2015, which identified arts and culture as significant contributors to Manitoulin's economic growth. From that impetus, and with Billings as the municipal lead, the Manitoulin Cultural Planning Project was approved for funding by the Ontario Ministry of Tourism, Culture and Sport in 2012, and a local steering committee set up in 2013 to plan the symposium, which drew over 120 attendees to the Manitoulin Hotel and Conference Centre on November 9. A cultural inventory was created and a website (manitoulinculture.ca) went live post-conference with an interactive map of cultural 'assets' and events listings; committees began work then to help give form and direction to the outcomes of the conference and to maximize the contributions of the Island's vibrant arts and culture scene.

Participants in the Direction Day first heard a brief history of the project from Adam Hayden, LAMBAC's industrious intern. Reports were presented from the committees that had worked all winter to explore ways to increase the impact of the arts and cultural sector on the Island economy and on artists' work and lives, and to look at practical structures and ideas for the creation of an arts and cultural council. Artist Michael Cywink suggested that the room's tables and chairs be reconfigured into a circle, immediately turning the space into one of 'participatory democracy' and greatly improving communications for the rest of the day.

Committee chairs Alex Baran, Ashley Whyte, Kate Thompson and Sophie Edwards shared committee efforts aimed at developing marketing ideas and organizational structural and sustainability strategies, fostering creative networking, and creating an effective liaison with the Manitoulin Tourism Association. Early on, there had been agreement among committees to support the MTA's own cultural strategy, specifically the MTA's Festival of a Thousand Skills slated for the last weekend of September.

According to the MTA, the new festival, which will incorporate the former Taste of Manitoulin food festival, will be a "three-day skill-sharing experience with more than a hundred micro workshops and demonstrations of a wide variety of community and family knowledge and cultural traditions." Sophie Edwards, executive director of 4elements Living Arts (most Manitoulin cultural workers wear many hats but for this article, they are described by their most familiar occupation) says, "liaison with the MTA is important as the MTA mandate is to provide the broad-based marketing to attract tourists to the Island, although not all cultural organizations and activities are tourism-based. The 'external' marketing of the MTA and the 'internal' communications work of the arts council would create a holistic approach to communicating the Island's cultural activities." The workings of that collaboration between the group and the MTA will be defined further in the coming weeks; as a first step, a 'skills inventory' is in the process of being fleshed out by the planning group.

Alex Baran, multi-faceted cultural worker and facilitator, presented his committee's proposals for the creation of the Manitoulin Arts and Cultural Council, including a mission statement and organizational plan for a board and sub-committees. Based on seven core cultural disciplines or sectors identified as performing, visual, digital, literary and culinary arts as well as crafts and heritage, it was proposed (and approved) that there be seven representatives from First Nations and seven representatives from non-First Nations on the council's board.

General Manager of LAMBAC, Mary Nelder, reflects that, in the planning process, "the sharing of ideas between people from both our founding cultures and various artistic disciplines was great to see and left us, the organizers, feeling very hopeful."

imaginative new ways and that aim to extend the marketing reach of Manitoulin this year and in future. Bonita Taibossigai, tour development officer for the Great Spirit Circle Trail, outlined the GSCT's inspiring 'experiences' programs, an impressive Island model for success in cultural tourism.

Joel Gauthier, regional advisor for the Ministry of Tourism, Culture and Sport, and Françoise Nadon, community economic development officer for FedNor (Industry Canada), described criteria and 'tips for success' in funding applications that were eagerly received by the audience.

The day's business continued with discussions of the board nomination process, which is open to arts and culture workers listed in the cultural inventory, and includes self-nomination. Further proposals were put forward that outlined recommendations for work to be undertaken in the first and second years of the new Council in the categories of shared activities, capacity building (skills inventory), communications, organizational funding and events. The first orders of business for year one are to define collaboration with the MTA on the Festival of a Thousand Skills, seek funding to hire an arts and cultural coordinator to manage communications, among other

Wiky youth fundraises to attend arthrogryposis multiplex congenita conference

by Robin Burridge

WIKWEMIKONG—Nine-year-old Randee Jawana and her family are fundraising to send her and her guardian to a conference for people living with arthrogryposis multiplex congenita (AMC)—a rare condition that causes congenital joint contractures—in Minneapolis in July.

AMC affects one in 3,000 babies born, causing abnormal fibrosis of the muscle tissues which causes muscle shortening. Arthrogryposis means ‘curving of joints’ in Greek.

For Randee, the nonprogressive condition means that she is confined to a wheelchair and unable to operate her hands and feet in the conventional sense.

“She has no mobility in her hands and feet,” explained Randee’s adopted mother (biological great aunt) Rose Jawana. “She has to use a wheelchair, but she doesn’t let it get her down. She is learning to walk on her knees, swim and she can use the computer, text and do most things a nine-year-old can do, just in her own way.”

Randee is a bubbly Grade 4 student at Wasse Abin Jr. School whose hobbies include crafts, painting, music and playing on the computer, including working on her blog randeesmiles.weebly.com.

“Sometimes things get her down such as not being able to go to certain restaurants or Island businesses due to the lack of a wheelchair ramp (something that Ms. Jawana recently wrote a letter to the editor about in The Expositor)

Nine-year-old Randee and her adopted mother Rose are fundraising to attend a conference for arthrogryposis multiplex congenita, a condition that Randee was born with.

or people not understanding her condition,” said Ms. Jawana. “That’s why attending the AMC conference would be such an amazing opportunity for her to meet other children like her living with AMC.”

“Randee will be able to experience for the first time the chance to meet other children like her and Rose will have the chance to learn from medical professionals, agencies and other parents affected by AMC about the new technologies, mobile devices and resources to help with her development,” commented Ms. Jawana’s niece, Joni Shawana, who wrote to The Expositor about the family’s fundraising efforts. “This trip can potentially be a life changing experience for Randee—emotionally, mentally, spiritually and maybe physically.”

Randee and Ms. Jawana attend Toronto’s Sick Kids Hospital biannually for Randee’s checkups, but it has been an ongoing struggle to get Randee an occupational therapist. All of her current equipment has been due to the generosity of the community and Randee’s family.

Randee has received ongoing support from the Wally Walk and Andy’s, with the latter having recently donated a riding lawnmower, which will be raffled off to raise money for the trip.

“We are also going to be holding prize bingos, taco sales and other events to raise money,” said Ms. Jawana. “It has been a dream for us to attend this conference and we are hoping to make it a reality this year.”

Donations can also be made through etransfers to rosejawana@hotmail.com.

tasks, continue website development and maintenance, and plan an event for year two in a different timeframe from the Festival of a Thousand Skills, in order to enhance and expand Manitoulin’s cultural offerings into the ‘shoulder seasons.’ An intern will also work within LAMBAC to support the board and the coordinator’s efforts.

Mary Nelder sums up the work of the planning group in the ongoing process as “a reflection of the fact that the people on those committees truly have their ears to the ground and are committed to finding solutions that work for local artists and artisans, not borrowing a plan from somewhere else and manipulating it to fit our reality.”

Sophie Edwards adds, “As small, rural and Northern communities, we need to engage our creativity to rethink our economies, build our resilience and create healthy communities. We need to think about interconnections, sharing resources, co-learning and co-teaching. We may not be able to do it the way we’ve done until now, and we may not be able to rely on the typical centralized meetings and structures we know so well.”

Artist Sophie Pheasant-Jones underlined that a critical element in the success of the process has been “the continual involvement and support by the artists and the organizations.”

Alex Baran outlines the future of the council and its initiatives as an “ongoing process”—a dynamic one, with nominations and election of the council’s board to take place within a month or so, and matters of governance, legal status, priorities and longer term issues to consider following the creation of the Manitoulin Arts and Cultural Council.

Judging from the enthusiasm and engagement of the participants in the thoughtful and disciplined process of the Cultural Planning Project since last November, all of Manitoulin stands to benefit from the positive impacts of this leading-edge development on the cultural landscape.

gala competition and crowning show will take place on Saturday, May 3 at 8 pm. Tickets are $25 for both nights or $10 for Friday night and $20 for Saturday night and available at Bottega Mia, Fashion City, J.B. Jewellers, Lindgrens Bridal or at the door on show nights.

Last Haweater Weekend saw seven contestants from across the Island compete for the Miss Manitoulin crown at the pageant's Haweater comeback after a nine-year hiatus.

This will be Brooke's second time competing in the Miss North Ontario pageant, having been scouted and participated in 2012 when she was named runner up for the People's Choice award.

Brooke grew up in M'Chigeeng, eventually moving to Hanmer with her family, but still calling Manitoulin home.

She has just completed her first year at Carleton University studying Criminology and Criminal Justice.

before their parents."

The battle to regain her life has, not so surprising for someone who has spent their life in the caring services, been built in part on her advocacy and support of other parents who have lost their children, particularly through the group Threads of Life. That group's mission is to "help families heal through a community of support and to promote the elimination of life-altering workplace injuries, illnesses and deaths."

Ms. Wade noted that the Threads of Life organization will be holding five kilometre (5,000 steps) Steps for Life fundraising walks across the country in May. On May 3, a Steps for Life Walk will be held at Minnow Lake in Sudbury. Ms. Wade will be taking part in the walk in Timmins, at the Gillies Lake Conservation Area on Sunday, May 4.

Following Ms. Wade's address, the names of fallen workers were read out to the gathering.

Meanwhile, several hundred miles away from the gathering in AOK, the Ontario legislature was recognizing the National Day of Mourning.

"Speaker, today, in Ontario and throughout Canada, we pause to remember workers who have been killed on the job, or who have suffered work-related injury or illness," said the Honourable Kevin Flynn, Minister of Labour, in a statement before the Ontario legislature. "We lower our flags to honour friends, neighbours and loved ones whose lives have been lost or affected by workplace incidents—incidents that are almost always foreseeable and preventable."

Joanne Wade lights a candle in memory of her son Brent Wade, who died at 22 in a job-related accident in 1999.

The minister went on to outline the province's progress in the realm of workplace safety. "Our government has almost doubled the number of workplace health and safety inspectors in this province," he said. "Since 2003, the number of work-related traumatic injuries in Ontario has declined by 30 percent. But we know that we need to prevent injuries before they happen, and that's why we appointed Ontario's first-ever Chief Prevention Officer."

The minister went on to speak about the many programs and legislative moves that have been made by the government to try to prevent workplace injuries and to educate workers as to their rights. But for the Manitoulin North Shore Injured Workers Coalition, who initially had planned a protest for the day, those words run counter to what they are seeing from the provincial agency that most people believe is supposed to be looking after the rights of workers.

"The changes they are making to the way that injured workers' claims are being handled is an outrage," said Mr. Pick. "It is a travesty of justice." The organization Mr. Pick chairs was formed to bring attention to the under-the-radar changes being brought into place.

"I spoke to our MPP Mike Mantha," said Mr. Pick. "I asked him to bring it up in the house. The message he gave me is the same one I get from the government. It is an internal regulatory matter with the WSIB and it isn't up for debate."

Mr. Pick said that he and the members of the Manitoulin North Shore Injured Workers Coalition believe it should be a matter put before the public and the government made to justify its actions towards injured workers in the full glare of the public eye. "People believe that the system is in place that will protect them if they are injured at work," said Mr. Pick. "They need to know that the government is taking steps backward."

The workers' insurance program is not funded by the government, but through employer contributions. It was Canada's first social program and widely supported by both workers and employers.

...Now and Then: Bud McConnell

members. Son Kevin took one to the local fair and won first prize."

Bud and his partner laid out and built the 18-hole 180-acre Highlands Course just outside of Welland. He and Dorothy were able to enjoy golfing there over the years until they sold it in 1971. "I hear the golf course is still doing very well," Bud acknowledges.

The couple had five children. Their first child, Gail, had spina bifida. At that time there were no interventions and her anxious parents were told she would never walk. Sadly, she died at five months of age. Second son William was a breach birth and the doctor got to the delivery late, held up by a prior house call. The nurse did her very best, but unfortunately the baby had been without oxygen for too long and his brain was damaged.

Barry, the third child, became a 'jack of all trades.' He is good at various construction tasks, from drywall to tiling. He lives with his wife Laura in Sheguandah. "Rory, our fourth child, is an excellent welder. He worked for John Deere near Welland."

Fifth child Kevin was healthy, but at age five, his mother noticed that he was easily fatigued and they soon learned the terrible news: he had leukemia. "He was such a happy child when he was feeling good. He loved to fish. When he was 14 we were visiting Melody Bay in Buckhorn (near Peterborough), when he began to feel very ill. He died before we could get him to the hospital in Peterborough."

Both Barry and Rory worked with their dad in steel production at the rolling mill. Bud retired from Atlas Steel after 40 years on the job, at 58. "My favourite time of the year is fall. The leaves are amazing and that was the best time for the golf course. It was still a bright emerald green, wasn't as crowded, the heat of summer had dissipated, and there were fewer bugs."

The McConnells had a sailboat, a 25-foot MacGregor with a drop keel. "On our first sailing trip from Port Colborne to Buffalo, we encountered a bad thunder storm that left Dorothy disillusioned with sailing. She did not relent until we got a bigger boat, a 29-foot Bayfield that made her feel safer. This cutter-rig was such a pleasure to sail."

Friends Ann and Ed joined them when they decided to visit the Thousand Islands. They sailed from Port Colborne through the Welland Canal and laid-over at Niagara-on-the-Lake's marina. "The next morning we left for Oswego on the American side and heard about some rough weather coming up. We were about six miles from Rochester when a five foot wave hit our beam and knocked the boat over. It righted again but a smaller boat in front of us did not fare well."

"Ed noticed the boat in front of us had disappeared." Bud saw some floating items nearby. "We headed over to find two young men on floating cushions. Their 24-foot boat had sunk." Bud maneuvered their boat closer to the men and Ed, a tall man, easily flipped the two men onto their boat. The US Coast Guard was called and they asked them to stay in the area. They would send out a rescue ship.

"It was pitch black on the water, with lightning and high winds so we called the coast guard back to say we were coming in. They said their boat would be there shortly but it took another hour. When it did arrive it looked like a floating dock and I was afraid to get too close in rough water, so we both headed for shore."

"We arrived to a small cheering crowd and an ambulance that took the two young men. It seems the two university students were going to sell their boat for school costs. I wondered if they would have survived if we hadn't been nearby? To this day, I also wonder if they ever found their boat." The two couples had good weather the next day with 'following waves' using only their storm jib. They got to Oswego in no time at all.

The couple enjoyed a seasonal lot and a trailer at Batman's Campground at Sheguandah. They spent some wonderful summers there. "We met so many great people who I still take pride in knowing."

In 2000 Bud noticed a change in his wife. She was the family accountant and had a very sharp mind. "I noticed she missed some items that she would normally never have missed." A CT scan did not show any problems, but by 2002 it was clear she had developed Alzheimer's. She had lost one aunt to that disease.

The next three years were very stressful for Bud.

"Thank God Barry was nearby when the going got rough. Sometimes she would want to go outside into the snow in her bare feet and there was nothing I could do to stop her. She seemed to have such strength. I called Barry and he would come over and help. In 2005 Dorothy was admitted to Lindhaven in St. Catharines, about 30 miles from home.

"Barry came to my rescue again. He was living in Sheguandah on Manitoulin and he managed to get his mother into the Centennial Manor in the fall of 2006. He also had a room for me in his home." In time Bud moved in with Dorothy at the Manor. Living with cancer and ankylosing spondylitis, an inflammation of the spinal joints causing pain and stiffness, Bud needed help too. With support, Bud and Dorothy had a few more good years together. "It was really difficult when she died in January of 2010. I was able to hold her when she passed away. Life just isn't the same without her."

Being an ardent historian is a comfort to Bud now. He has always been curious about innovation and life and he loves to read. Patience is another virtue. He has settled in well and his room is fully equipped. He has a computer. He can share email, read jokes and catch up on the news. His newfound hobby of painting has added enthusiasm to his life.

"Many of us here have started to paint with watercolours with the help of a few volunteers like Linda Jack, Lemar Hyatt, Beth Bond McCullagh and many others. I really enjoy it," Bud states. He has created artful designs on several stools and a number of his works have been scooped up by admirers.

"I don't have any regrets. If I could go back in time, there is nothing I would change. When I think of the amazing innovations that have occurred even in my short time, I am always incredulous. My home is here now in the Manor and I can't say enough good about this place. The staff, my friends, the food and the entertainment make it a very special place to live out my days."

"Although I am relatively new to this Island, I just love Manitoulin. It is such a laid-back place," he sums up. "If you find yourself in a hurry, just relax and stop worrying. People just take things easy here and that is a good way to live your life. If you go downtown you are greeted with a warm 'hello' by friendly people. That makes life worthwhile. Manitoulin truly is a place aside from the rest of the world."

JAMES ALEXANDER FISHER

SEPTEMBER 3, 1915 - APRIL 26, 2014

In loving memory of Jim Fisher, a resident of the Manitoulin Centennial Manor, Little Current who passed away peacefully at the Manor on Saturday, April 26, 2014 in his 99th year. Jim was born at the family farm in Billings Township, son of the late Frederick and Mildred (Prestage) Fisher.

Although he lived for a short time in both Toronto and Elliot Lake, the majority of his life was spent in Kagawong at the house now occupied by Manitoulin Wind and Wave. He moved to the Bayside Apartments at Gore Bay in 1991 and lived there until moving to the Manor just last October. Throughout Jim's life, he worked at many jobs to support his family, as was common in those years. While he had at various times operated a store, delivered rural mail, collected township taxes, delivered propane to western Manitoulin and even sanded the Kagawong hill during the winter, he was primarily a meticulous and much-sought-after carpenter until he retired in 1980. Examples of his skilled craftsmanship live on in many homes and cottages on the Island. A self-taught musician, he could play several instruments but is most remembered for his talent and magic with the alto sax. For many years, he was a fixture with the Gore Bay Orchestra, playing for events and dances across the Island. He also made time for many interests and hobbies, such as traveling, reading, gardening, crosswords and listening to music (especially the old standards and anything by Guy Lombardo). Although physical ailments gradually robbed him of many of these pleasures, he continued to live independently and even maintain his driving license until his move to the Manor. He will be sadly missed, but many memories will be cherished and his dry sense of humour will be remembered by his family and all who knew him. Jim was predeceased by his cherished wife of 40 years, Norine (Graham) Fisher. There was not a day that went by where he did not miss her. Loving and loved father of Gail Gonzalez and Jorge (predeceased), of Mexico and Stewart and Yinnar Fisher of Pickering. Proud grandfather of Jorge, Jamie (Marija), Ryan, and Vicki. Predeceased by siblings Norm (Marjorie) and Harry (Dorothy) Pierce, Laura (Bert) McLaughlin and Bill Fisher. Survived by sister-in-law Betty Fisher. Jim was predeceased by brothers-in-law Allan and Lyle Graham and Gerry Brunette. Also survived by Minnie and Lois Graham and Dorothy Brunette and many nieces and nephews. Jim's family would like to extend their heartfelt thanks to the staff of the Centennial Manor for the dedicated compassion and care given to him while there. Cremation will take place and a memorial service to celebrate Jim's life will be conducted in the Wm. G. Turner Chapel of the Culgin Funeral Home on Friday, May 2, 2014 at 2 pm with Rev. Sherry De Jonge officiating. Interment at Kagawong Cedars Cemetery will follow at a later date. If so desired, memorial donations to St. John's Anglican Church, Kagawong or the Gore Bay Medical Centre would be appreciated. Online condolences may be left at www.culginfuneralhome.ca. Culgin Funeral Home, Gore Bay, 705-282-2270.

Youth conference used stealth-teaching methods

M'Chigeeng Youth Conference builds communication pathways with laughter and smiles

by Michael Erskine

M'CHIGEENG—The ‘Inspiring Minds’ Youth Conference held at the recreation centre in M’Chigeeng was filled with laughter and the sounds of young people having fun and enjoying themselves. Who knew they were learning, critical life and work skills that would serve them in good stead in the years ahead as they head into jobs, careers and families of their own.

“Hands on learning, experiential learning, are an integral part of what we do,” said Maheengun Shawanda (Wolf), founder of the Great Lakes Cultural Camps and the youth leadership skills instructor for the conference. “Youth experience learning and learn from experience. Building relationships with each other lays the foundation for what comes after.”

He noted that the sounds of laughter and the “tons of smiles” are indications that relationships and connections are being made. It is through those relationships and the avenues of communication created by that laughter, and reinforced by those smiles, that make the method of learning so very powerful. “But the learning associated with it is very subtle,” he smiled.

The youth conference has been a tremendous exercise in collaboration and partnership in its conception, formation and execution, noted Mr. Shawanda. “The M’Chigeeng First Nation Family Resources, the Training Hub Centre, Health Services (education), UCCMM and the UCCM Police Services joined with dozens of private sector sponsors and Kenjgewin Teg to successfully put this conference together.”

The key role played by Kenjgewin Teg has been particularly inspiring, he said. “I am an absolute fan of what they are doing,” he said.

Mr. Shawanda pointed to the workshop on the youth employment program and practical resume design advice provided by Tashine Migwans, Hub Program Support with the M’Chigeeng First Nation as an example of the types of positive collaboration taking place in the conference.

Ms. Migwans gave an engaging and interactive discussion with a large audience of local youth about what employers expect of them as workers and the employment opportunities that exist all around them, especially in the tourism industry in summer. The value of attaining the bronze level of swimming, enabling a youth to reach a lifeguard or swimming instructor accreditation was noted as particularly valuable.

Participants in the conference were advised to come prepared for both indoor and outdoor activities. “Part of what we are doing is engaging youth in physical activity,” said Mr. Shawanda. “We are using and recruiting with the outdoors.”

The conference had opened in the traditional manner, with a smudge ceremony and a prayer, but in this instance, the rituals were not simply performed in isolation, but the significance of the ceremonies and rituals were explained. “It may be hard to believe, but for a lot of these kids this is the first time that anyone has actually explained the why of what is happening,” said Mr. Shawanda, who noted that M’Chigeeng Chief Joe Hare was particularly engaged (and engaging) in that part of the day.

“It is all part of making the change,” said Mr. Shawanda. “You can’t talk at them, you have to treat them with respect if you are going to engage them to bring about the changes themselves. We plant the seeds, then they decide if they want to see what the rest of it is all about.”

A great deal of the strategy behind the Great Lakes Cultural Camps instruction methodology utilizes peer-to-peer mentoring. That is what makes the laughter and smiles so powerful an ally in teaching. They lay the pathways through which knowledge and training are imparted; pathways that are built with smiles and laughter raise fewer of the barriers youth use as shields against the patronization of teachers who simply stand, lecture and test.

Tashine Migwans, Hub Program Support with the M’Chigeeng First Nation, imparts information on band youth employment programs and provides key recommendations on resume building to the participants at the Inspiring Minds Youth Conference held this past weekend in M’Chigeeng.

North Shore Marine Tourism Council optimises website for mobile

by Michael Erskine

SPANISH—The North Shore Marine Tourism Council (NCMTC) annual general meeting and conference took place April 11 to 12 at the Four Seasons Waterfront Complex and members were treated to an in-depth analysis of boating issues and developments in the industry from a variety of speakers.

Words of welcome were given by Spanish Mayor Gary Bishop and NCMTC Chair Stan Ferguson and an address by Algoma Manitoulin MPP Mike Mantha (who delivered regrets on behalf of Algoma-Manitoulin-Kapuskasing MP Carol Hughes who was recovering from ankle surgery).

"Groups like yourselves have a great impact on the communities you serve," said Mr. Mantha. "Tourism in Northern Ontario is a big part of our Northern economies."

Mr. Mantha noted the work that has been done on issues such as the delay last year of the Chi-Cheemaun ferry and noted the non-partisan approach he has taken with his provincial counterparts in order to move the issue forward. He challenged the retreat of the federal government from supporting infrastructure.

"The Chi-Cheemaun has a $40 million return for the Island," he said. "I have been building bridges in the Conservatives and the Liberal government to ensure that the future of the ferry is secure. For a $280 to $320 million investment, the benefits for the entire region are clear. A lot of the problem was brought by the federal government not meeting their responsibilities."

Mr. Mantha went on to note that the region and both its land-based and marine tourism operators are facing an even greater threat from an overzealous Technical Standards and Safety Authority. "Four gas stations in my riding alone have been shut down," he said. "We are facing really big challenges from TSSA. I know that Blind River is facing issues as well."

Key to the issue are the timeframes that TSSA has been imposing on operators to correct issues and meet new standards. "The cost of the changes they are imposing on small gas station operators are far outweighing the profits from the little bit of gas that these operators pump," he said. "Nobody is opposed to the regulations, but it is the time frame."

Mr. Mantha told the story of one operator who, after investing $4,800 into upgrading his equipment to meet an inspector's orders, was then told that the improvements were "no longer good enough" and that the operator had to upgrade his equipment further.

The MPP then went on to note the impact potential of the Invasive Species Act and the challenges the Act places on development and business expansion in the North.

promotional tea mugs (with accompanying spoons) bearing his name and telephone number as gifts to the conference delegates—with delegates of all political persuasions lining up to collect the cups.

Mr. Ferguson thanked Mr. Mantha for his remarks and his support, going on to pour praise and gratitude on the Town of Spanish and its council and staff for their support of the NCMTC over the years. "We couldn't have accomplished what we have over the years without your support," said Mr. Ferguson.

Mr. Ferguson noted the success that the NCMTC had in partnering with Fed Nor and the support they provided for the NCMTC through the intern program and the success of a DVD featuring the Georgian Bay and North Channel regions (on display at the conference).

"This DVD is really remarkable," said Mr. Ferguson. "I encourage all of you to check it out and to retail it at your operations." He noted that a promotional offer to purchase the DVDs had been extended by Lifestyle Integrated for members of the NCMTC.

Members then received a briefing on the success of the three-year shopping bag marketing initiative and sponsorship from director Margie Hague. Ms. Hague noted that the bags are distributed by Roy Eaton through his highly popular CruisersNet broadcasts. The bags were improved in quality for this year. "The first bags we had custom made by My Ol' Blues in Gore Bay and they were really very nice," said Ms. Hague. "But we couldn't afford to continue that route. Last year we went with a much cheaper bag, also from a supplier in Gore Bay, but we decided they were a bit too flimsy. We went with a better bag this year, a lot more like the first bag and we expect the bags to be very popular again."

The cotton bags bear the names and websites of sponsors from across the North Channel region and, with the $200 in funding from each of the 17 sponsors, the bags are very cost effective, she noted. "We end up paying about $850 for 700 of the cloth bags."

Ms. Hague explained that 250 of the bags, filled with NCMTC membership go into Google Maps and update the location of their communities and their marinas so the map option works properly for their community. That is the one thing we cannot do for them."

Little Current entrepreneur Chris Blodgett provided an overview of the progress on his new cruise ship operation that will accommodate up to 50 passengers to start and expand to 100 passengers in the near term. Licensed by the AGCO and providing 'pub food' in conjunction with local restaurants and drawing barely more water than a well-laden canoe, the tri-hull Le Grand Heron will conduct tours of the area's premier boating destinations and be available for charter events such as weddings.

Mr. Blodgett anticipates his vessel being in operation by the July 1 weekend.

Directors for the 2014 NCMTC board will be Stan Ferguson (reelected as chair), Joe Cain (Sault Ste.

Marie and vice-chair) Mal Clarke (Blind River), Marg Hague (Gore Bay), Bruce Ibbetson (Richard's Landing), Robert Hope (Village of Hilton Beach), Peter McMullan (Killarney), Michael Erskine (Little Current) and Lincoln North (Thessalon).

Long time secretary of the NCMTC, Mary Bray of Elliot Lake (former clerk of Spanish), retired at the April 12 meeting, with deep regrets expressed by the council, and the new secretary treasurer Pam Lortie of the Town of Spanish was appointed with gratitude.

"Mary has really been the backbone of this organization for many, many years," said Mr. Ferguson as he presented Ms. Bray with a painting of the North Channel as a momento from the NCMTC membership. "I don't know what we would have done without her all these years."

Manitoulin's Katie Harper shines in Legally Blonde the musical

by Robin Burridge

SUDSBURY—Little Current's Katie Harper is currently starring in Sudbury Secondary School's production of Legally Blonde.

The vibrant Grade 10 student previously attended Little Current Public School before being accepted into Sudbury Secondary School's arts education program two years ago.

Known throughout Little Current for her beautiful, powerful voice, Katie's singing was a staple at past Little Current Remembrance Day ceremonies, among other events.

During her Grade 9 year at Sudbury Secondary School, Katie laid the groundwork for starring in this year's production by demonstrating that there was more to her than just a great voice.

"We did a smaller production my first year and I wasn't a lead, but I worked hard, showing the director, Madame Roberge, that I was outgoing and dedicated," explained Katie. "I also worked on improving my acting, singing and dancing so that not only was I the best I could be this year, but Madame knew I was dependable and a hard worker."

Manitoulin's Katie Harper starring as Elle Woods in Sudbury Secondary School's production of Legally Blonde on now until Saturday, May 2.

All of her hard work paid off when Katie was cast as Legally Blonde's lead Elle Woods—a blonde sorority girl from California who shows that she is more than a 'dumb blonde' when she attends Harvard Law School.

When asked what Katie thinks of her character or if she relates to her, she responded, "I don't really relate to her Malibu sorority side, but once she evolves (at law school) you can start to see the real her and I can relate to that side of her."

"I like that Elle is an underdog—people don't expect much out of her, just thinking that she is a 'dumb blonde,' but she surprises them and herself," explained Katie. "I can relate to the 'dumb blonde' because I am a blonde myself and in the past I think people have underestimated me, but I'm here now in an accomplished arts program, pursuing my dream."

Katie Harper as Elle Woods sings her way into the audience's hearts.

Katie, along with the entire cast and crew of Legally Blonde, have been busy practicing since early this year with a rigorous rehearsal schedule four times a week for two hours after school and then recently four times a week for five to six hours.

"It's been busy, but I love the production," exclaimed

Katie. "I never get bored of it."

Since opening last weekend the production has gotten rave reviews from major Sudbury media outlets, even director Line Roberge has nothing but positive things to say about Katie's performance.

"Katie Harper is a young Barbara Streisand in the making," said Ms. Roberge. "Do not miss your opportunity to see this young woman in her first starring role."

Legally Blonde runs at Sudbury Secondary School in the Sheridan Auditorium on 154 College Street all this week.

The next performance is Thursday, May 1 at 7:30 pm, followed by Friday, May 2 at 7:30 and a final performance on Saturday, May 3 at 7:30 pm.

Tickets are $12 for students and seniors and $16 for adults and available at the school, Jett Landry Music and Stage and Street. Call 705-674-7551.

Recipes from Rose's Kitchen by Rose Diebolt rjdiebolt@hotmail.com

Have you ever stopped and thought about how you grocery shop. Are you a quick reader, reading the front of the "flashing neon sign" package of food or do you stop and actually read the ingredient list and nutrition fact panel? If you shop for most of your groceries from the outside perimeter of the store—meat, produce, dairy, juices etc., you are way ahead of the game. If you start shopping for most of your groceries down the middle aisles, pre-packaged items, you need to read your labels more carefully. As a consumer you must always be aware of the healthy-sounding or healthy-looking products. Whatever the product promotes—high in fiber, made with whole grains, cholesterol free, low sodium, vitamins—they should be listed first in the ingredient list. The further down the ingredient list the less there is of the "healthy" product.

My practice always has been to buy and eat items that don't need labels, and if you do buy items with labels (as we all must do) buyer beware: the marketed "better-for-you" version isn't always healthier. The healthiest to me is to make as much of the food that you eat in your kitchen, as that is where you are in control!

Crunchy Banana Bread

This light-in-fat loaf has lots of banana flavour plus a crunchy texture, thanks to the millet. Millet is not only good as bird seed but has health benefits for us. Millet is a smart carb with lots of fibre and low simple sugars, has magnesium and niacin.

1/2 cup milk
1 1/2 tsp white vinegar
3/4 cup brown sugar
1 Tbsp butter, softened
1 cup mashed bananas
2 eggs
1 cup graham flour (I used spelt)
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 tsp baking powder
1 tsp baking soda
1/4 tsp salt 1/3 cup millet

Combine milk and vinegar; set aside. In large bowl, beat sugar with butter; beat in bananas and eggs. Combine the flours, baking powder, baking soda and salt; stir into banana mixture alternately with milk mixture, making three additions of dry and two of milk. Stir in millet. Pour into well-greased 9x5 inch loaf pan.

Bake in 350°F oven for 45 to 50 minutes or until tester inserted in center comes out clean. Makes one loaf.

Chocolate Mocha Cake

One of the simplest cakes to make. You can bake it in a square pan or two round pans for a fancy birthday cake. Make the cake mix first. It will keep up to 2 months in an airtight container in a cool, dry place.

Cake mix:
8 cups cake-and-pastry flour
6 cups granulated sugar
1/4 cup baking powder
2 tsp salt

In a large bowl, mix together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt until well combined. Transfer to an airtight container.
2 tsp hot water

1 Tbsp instant coffee granules
3 1/3 cups Best Cake Mix
3/4 cup buttermilk
1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1/2 tsp baking soda
1/2 cup vegetable oil
2 eggs
2 tsp vanilla

In small bowl, stir water with coffee; let cool.

In a large bowl and using an electric mixer at medium speed, best cake mix, buttermilk, coffee, cocoa, and baking soda for two minutes. Add oil, eggs and vanilla; reduce speed to low and beat 1 minute.

Pour into greased 9-inch square pan; bake in 350°F oven for 35 minutes or until cake tester comes out clean. Let cool in pan. Ice with your favourite icing.

White Vanilla Cake
3 1/3 cups best cake mix
3/4 cup milk
1/2 cup vegetable oil
2 eggs
2 tsp vanilla

In a large bowl and using electric mixer at medium speed, beat best cake mix with milk for 2 minutes. Add oil, eggs and vanilla; reduce speed to low and beat for 1 minute.

Pour into greased 9-inch square cake pan; bake 375°F oven for 30 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Let cool on rack. Ice with your favourite icing.

Noojmowin Teg Health Centre grows healthy eating through new Gardening and Nutrition Conference

by Robin Burridge

M'CHIGEENG—Noojmowin Teg Health Centre hosted a Gardening and Nutrition Conference earlier this month at Lakeview School in M'Chigeeng. The one-day event had over 90 attendees ranging in age and from all across Manitoulin who came out to learn about the nutritional benefits of growing your own food.

"This is our first conference on the topic of gardening and nutrition," explained Noojmowin Teg Health Centre Healthy Children Program Coordinator Mark Peltier. "We have been hosting a spring conference annually for the past three years on physical activity, but this year we decided to change our focus to gardening, based on interest from our clients."

"Funded by the Ministry of Health and Long-term Care, the conference is aimed at teaching gardening and the benefits associated with it," added Mr. Peltier. "We are really pleased with the turnout today and the response from those who attended."

The family-friendly conference began earlier Saturday morning with registration and a light breakfast, followed by an opening prayer.

The morning workshops including 'Worm Composting' with Rua Lupa, 'Fire and its Effects on Soil' with Falcon Migwans, 'Wild Edibles' with Dan Charette, 'Vegetarian Cooking' with Mike Rueter, 'Growing Sprouts' with Sunday Harrison and 'Wild Edibles' with Dan Charette.

After lunch, the workshops continued with 'It's the Pits: Turning Kitchen Waste into Plants' with Gail Robinson, 'Eat What You Grow' with Cody Leeson and Crystal Morro, 'Cycle of Life from Seed to Seed' with Chuc Willson and 'Making Three Sister Soup from the Garden' with Linda Willson.

'It's the Pits' by Ms. Robinson was a popular workshop where participants learned about replanting from the remains of used produce you would normally throw away.

She explained that you can regrow produce such as lettuce starting from the 'heart' (the bottom of a head of lettuce) from the top of a pineapple, from the pit of an avocado and pretty much any other produce by placing the 'heart' in water until it develops roots and then planting it in soil.

In Ms. Morro and Mr. Leeson's workshop 'Eat What You Grow,' the pair highlighted five seeds that were easy to grow, discussed how to use them in cooking and the associated nutritional benefits. At the end of the workshop, participants were able to plant one of the five types of seeds and take their plant home to grow.

"The five plants we focused on were tomatoes, Swiss chard, lettuce, basil and sunflower," explained Mr. Leeson. "We discussed how to grow each one from seed and did a cooking demonstration using them for participants to try. We also discussed the nutritional benefits of growing your own food."

"Growing your own food not only provides the gardener and their family with nutritional benefits, but also food security and a tradition that individuals can pass on to their children," added Ms. Morro.

During 'Making Three Sister Soup from the Garden,' Ms. Willson explained to participants the benefits of having a traditional three sister garden (beans, corn and squash) in terms of growing the vegetables and cooking with them.

"The three sisters are corn, beans and squash," said Ms. Willson. "When I made the magical discovery of the power of the three sister when they are grown together, my husband Chuc and I started our own three sisters garden."

She went on to explain that the vegetables work collectively, with the corn providing a natural pole for the bean to climb and that the beans improve the soil through the nitrogen in their roots and that the bean runners also help to stabilize the corn plants from the wind. As for the squash, their vines prevent weeds and the soil moisture from evaporating, as well as discouraging predators by means of their spiny leaves.

Using the three sisters, Ms. Willson did a cooking demonstration making three sisters soup and corn bread.

The day concluded with a presentation from keynote speaker Sunday Harrison who spoke on 'Cultivating Connections,' followed by dinner.

Ms. Harrison founded Green Thumbs Growing Kids, a non-profit charity in 1999 that aims at working with urban children, youth and their families to learn about, grow and prepare fresh foods and cultivate in an environmentally sustainable manner in hands-on programs.

Photographer captures images of Manitoulin's beauty

Bob Blaney

Remarkable images of the flora, fauna and landscapes of Manitoulin Island and the North Shore abound in the portfolio of photographer Bob Blaney. While traversing the bush, hiking trails and roads on foot or on motorcycle, he has been able to capture a wide variety of subject matter.

Residing in Lively with a camp at Birch Island, he is never far from the Island and is a regular at the Mindemoya Farmers' Market from May to October.

The photographer has been taking pictures for many years. "I bought my first camera with my first paycheque in 1968," he explained, adding that his roommate in mining school had a manual 35 milometre that he covetted until he purchased his own.

Following the years of raising his children he returned to photography in 1989 and now uses a digital camera, which accompanies him everywhere.

"You never know when you will see something you want to shoot. It's not just about luck; it's about being there with the camera," he remarked.

"One of my top sellers is a shot I took on a day when I was just out and about without an agenda. Two fawns and a doe came walking towards me and I took a photo of one of the little guys walking down the middle of the road."

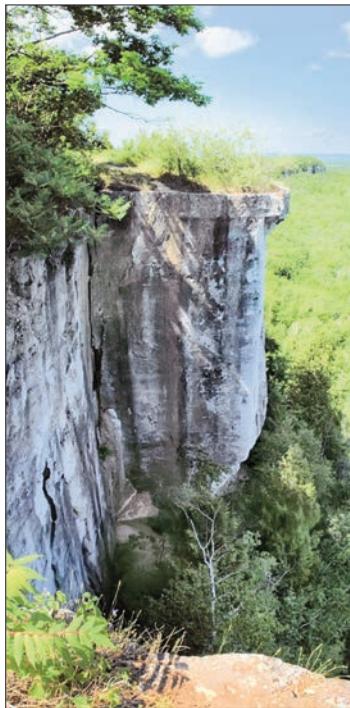

Nature photography is Mr. Blaney's preference although he also shoots small weddings and enjoys taking photos of family and friends. "These days I like to drive around and go into the bush, way off the beaten path," he said. He is often accompanied

In recent years Mr. Blaney has won awards at the LaCloche Art Show including 'Best Photograph' for his image of a fox entitled 'Mysterious' in 2013 and an Honourable Mention for 'Misty Lake Panorama' in 2010.

While at the Farmers' Market he carries over a hundred photos in matt frames and has many more to choose from in his photo books.

As a member of the Manitoulin Fine Arts Association he sits on the board of directors as the secretary and also manages the organization's website, doing his part to promote the arts on Manitoulin and the North Shore.

Provincial premises registry update campaign

In an effort to keep premises ID, current producers whose registration information is more than one year old can expect a letter from the service provider requesting that existing information be confirmed or updated as needed. This is the first of what is expected to become an annual process. Premises ID continues to be made available at no cost to producers and is required to participate in a number of provincial programs.

Introduction to Nutrient Management for their own farm. To become qualified you must complete the Introduction to Nutrient Management course and the Regulations and Protocols course. Certificates are valid for five years. It has been a few years since an Introduction to Nutrient Management course was offered in this region. Another course will not be offered locally until there is sufficient demand. If you anticipate needing a new or renewed Agricultural Operations Planning certificate in the next two years please contact the training providers at Ridgetown College. 1-855-648-1444.

Sustainable New Agri-Food Products (SNAP) program

In Northern Ontario, many agriculture and food producers or businesses have difficulty funding equipment purchases for value-added processing. The Sustainable New Agri-Food Products (SNAP) program is a pilot for Northern Ontario agriculture and food producers, businesses and collaborations, which will provide up to $5,000 (per collaborator, to a maximum of $15,000) at 80 percent cost-share toward the purchase of processing equipment that would result in the creation of a food or agriculture product new to the business. The SNAP program is administrated by the Rural Agri-Innovation Network in collaboration with Clover Valley Farmers' Market, Eat Local Sudbury

Co-operative and the Northeast Community Network. Eligibility: Eligible applicants must be a legal entity with the authority to enter into a legal agreement seeking assistance to purchase equipment to add value or create an agriculture or food product new to the business. Examples of a legal person could include corporations or not-for-profit organizations, primary producers, processors, distributors, First Nations, Metis and Inuit. Collaborations will be accepted of up to three applicants. Each applicant in the collaboration must be a legal entity. Applicants must have at least one component of their business located in northern Ontario. Collaborations must be composed of 75 percent of businesses, organizations or persons located in northern Ontario. Algoma/Manitoulin/Sudbury District Coordinator is Katie Filion, kfilion@ssmic.com, phone 705-942-7927 ext. 3024.

Tehkummah Talk and Times'2014'

The wind it blew for Earth Day
And inside here I lie
No clean up of the beds or yard

I thought that I might die
I had a bloody flu bug
With a bad headache
I couldn't put a shovel in
Or even pick up the rake
To plant a tree or share some bulbs

Soon daffodils will bloom
This is a time to move them

I always can find room
Clean up the yard or ready things

For Spring is on the move
Get patio areas looking nice

I must get in the groove
I always try to recognize This day for what it's worth

I tip my hat, and salute Our "Good Old Mother Earth".

April 22, 2014

April 17—Tara and I checked out the new dollar store in Wikwemikong on Thursday morning. They sure have a lot of stuff, especially for parties of all kinds. We had our lunch at Queen Street General. We hadn't had a "just the two of us date" for a long time. I got home just in time to pick up Mum for Bible study at Pat Novak's. Two parts today bring this most interesting series to the end. It being Maunday Thursday we partook of the elements after and Pat played the piano. We sang some of our favourite songs "What a Friend We Have in Jesus", "How Great Thou Art", "The Old Rugged Cross", and more. The communion seemed very special in the small circle. Pat and John Novak had just came home on Wednesday from a visit with the daughter Michelle in London.

Reta Vanhorn tells me she's a great-grandma for the first time to a little girl. Congratulations all!

Reta was on KP duty Thursday night at the euchre tournament. Brad and Bill won the lone hands with 7; first, Dorothy and Ken, 88; second, Dorothy C. and Ted, 85; third, Brad and Bill, 80; fourth, Lyla and Clive, 71; low, Marg C. and Marg A., 43; door prize, Dorothy Allard; second door prize (plant), Ken Pepper.

Well the snow is going away slowly and that has been a great help, no heavy "April Showers" to cause flooding around. Despite all the grumbling the winter caused, we always have cause to be grateful. Yes!

Sure are lots of branches and stuff to pick up this year. I did a bit of Poppy poopy raking and pickup, but I've had a few days of really bad bloating and gas. I must have folded something up inside! I have absolutely no stay/work power left.

Well I guess the multitudes of turkey vultures are finding lots of carrion so if you're outside try to look alive (twenty-five in one bunch?). When we went for a drive on Friday evening we saw a young eagle eating from a deer lying dead in the lake on Lakeshore Road. We counted 74 deer, a low count this year. A lot of the deer are back home again; forty-three count from Mindemoya turnoff (Prov. Road) to Tehk on Saturday evening. We had gone to the Happy Moose for our supper; Susan, Simon, Mom, Pauline, Wayne, Sherry, Dave, Cal and I. A great spot to eat. Eunice and Ben (Wilson), Debbie and Art (Scott) think so as well. It was kind of an eating weekend I guess. We all went to Pauline and Wayne's for a Tiki game after supper. Early morning Sunday. Our Sunrise service was chilly, no wind, cloudy overhead until the first reader of the Day - a hole opened in the cloud - a brilliant sun gradually fading out with the second reader. Justin brings the Wooden (tree) Cross, Quillan couldn't get over the Church??? Outside (he's such a sweet little boy), Kim entertained musically- he and Mom did "The Old Rugged Cross" after the actual service. We thank Martin, Bert and Garry for the fire. Chrissy could have sung "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" later. A robin sang the whole time we were there. A pair of wild geese did a fly-by at a very low altitude (I think they wanted to see what we were doing there?) and curved around us. There were lots of good breakfast type goodies and Robert's good coffee was sure appreciated! This Easter bunny made a stop, then played a couple of games of crib with Mom, then time for church. (I ran out of time and memory.) In the afternoon played cards with Cal, he beat me. Then time to pick up Mum for Easter dinner at Sherry and Dave's. There was a pretty full house. Wonderful and delicious dinner. Susan, Tara, Ray, Jacob, Skylar, Tavis, Alisha, Marion, Cal, Kim and Kathy. I gave the last two on the list their Christmas presents. We had a great visit later. Kim, Kathy, Sherry, Mum and I playing cribbage. Sherry and I did well, and we just went around the first bend on our way home and a little skunk had its tail up aimed in the direction of the van!

Lori and Rick headed St. Catharines way for their Easter.

Elaine McGauley had a huge family dinner at her place on Sunday.

After the Good Friday morning service, Earl was surprised to see us come in. He says it's not Sunday? Bert, Elaine, Rosie, Justin, Quillan, Mary Yett and her sister Janie from California. She spreads California poppies on roadsides down thata way. Mary compared her to me and the Lupin (and other) flower planting. This Monday morning Mary, Janie, Rosie and Quillan were in and went for a walking tour through my yard. Mostly snowdrops and crocus, and they admired the stone in my house as we walked in the April 28—April is just about over but it still keeps a bit on the cool side. Visitors with me last Tuesday were Nola Haner and Sheila Fogal. They brought me some treats. We had a nice visit. Blair Sullivan was in for a visit after the McDermid funeral.

Sympathy to the White and Lanktree family in the passing of Thelma. Irwin and Irene MacIntyre were in for a visit on Saturday afternoon. A number of people from here attended the luncheon at the Catholic Church in Mindemoya on Saturday.

Several people from out of town attended the funeral of Ken McDermid at Culgin Funeral Home in Gore Bay. Some were Gordon and Marilyn, TJ, Leslie and family, Gordon Jr., Robert, Brenda and family, Terry and Pamela, Wally and Fern Pugh. A lot of Blue Goose cattle from my barn left this week. Today is the Twilight Club's meeting in the Providence Bay Hall. Get well wishes to all who are sick.

Congratulation to Alain and Nathalie of the Auberge Inn in Providence Bay on the birth of a beautiful baby girl. Lea was born on April 20 at Sudbury hospital. They will be hosting a meet and greet the baby on May 24 at the Island Time Ice Cream Shop. The time will be announced at a later date.

Don't forget the pancake breakfast this Thursday at the Curling Club. Come out for a delicious breakfast and bring a friend. The time is 7:30 to 9:30 pm.

We had Blair Sullivan over for supper on Friday Night. Blair also had a visitor over the weekend.

His daughter from North Bay visited him for a few days. A welcome treat for him.

Please call if you have something for the paper. Phone Gloria at 705-377-4449. Remember our sen-tors and veterans this week. Visit them or at least give them a call. It is always welcome.

Providence Bay News and Notes

rain. I think Janie is enjoying her time here.

Kim and Kathy are gone back home to Clarksburg. Visit was lovely but as always too short. While we're saying goodbye, Cousin Pat Leeson called from Elliot Lake. She had just got her Christmas present from Joan "My Book of Poetry" and she gave me some lovely compliments! She had some family with her over Easter and they visited Calvin after supper at the nursing home.

Cal and I went back down to Sherry and Dave's for a replay of that delicious turkey dinner. Then I had to scoot to get to bingo in time.

Four tables for cribbage on Wednesday. A couple of presentations before the winners were announced. A (ahem?) "Gold Medal" to Mary J. for her 28 hand a couple of weeks ago and the framed card of Betty Jean and Bill's last years, "perfect score"! First time we've had three high hand 24 points for Betty Jean, Margaret and Gib. First place, Bill and Betty Jean, 948; second, Margaret and Audrie, 946; third, Gib and Florence, 934; low, Jean (Mum) and Mary, 875; door, Audrie. After the cribbage game I skunked Mum twice!

Friday afternoon I took in the euchre at Knox Church Hall in the afternoon. I played with Dave James. Not such a hot partner for him unless lots of nines and tens count! Played a few games of cribbage with Cal later and didn't do well at all. Even got skunked!

Saturday—Pauline's surprise birthday get-together at Carol's and Earl's (parking lot only as they were away). So we went to the Happy Moose in Mindemoya where the food is always great. Christine and Dave Merrick.

Thursday—Four tables at euchre tonight. Nice to see some folk back again. Shirley and Dave Nelder spent their winter in Florida. Dave James is spending a couple of weeks at his Sandfield place. Ruth MacDonald says the maple syrup production is way down this season. Men's high, Lloyd, 63; men's lone hands, Bill Case; low, Clive, 4; ladies' high, Betty Jean, 73; ladies' lone hands, Pat Novak, 3; low, Audrie, 46; door prize, Dave James. Robert and Daisy Moise were on KP duty. They took over for Reuben and Jeneen. Sympathy to the family on the loss of her mom (after a fall). Thelma White was a hardworking lady for her church communities, Tehkummah and Manitowaning, over the years.

Earlier today I burned some brushes, cleared some flower beds and did a bit of raking. Wishing I was 20 years younger doesn't help much.

Grandkids, Tatyana and Ava from Val Therese, brought a beautiful cake that was served up at Susan and Simon's later. The rest of the crew, Wayne, Mum, Mollie and John (Cal and Cole came in for a piece of cake). After we had a couple of games of TIKI. While there I did a walk through of the farm? There are golden pheasant, ducks, different chickens, baby chicks, bunnies (so cute), a boy cat (now called Maxine) and Black Beauty (the horse)!

Church at St. Andrews, a pretty full house. After some of us stayed for Rosie and Mary's presentation on Permaculture in Cuba. So very interesting. Mary and Rosie stopped at my place for some of my flower excesses. Did yard work, me, then the neighbours invited me for supper, it was good! A nice visit and sit in the sun too!

Spring into Shape in Tehkummah with Debbie Graham and the Mellow Mowers, May and June (summer off), two afternoons a week. Call Debbie at 705-368-0559.

In this past week we've lost two folk from our area. Sympathy to Jeneen and Reuben in the loss of her mom Thelma White. And sympathy to Sharon in the loss of Brian Gleason. And, of course, all the friends and family. Thinking of you at this time.
