Wikwemikong youth Shantel Wemigwans studies her community's proposed constitution, Chi-Naaknigewin, during a packed community meeting held last Tuesday evening. The community will head to the polls on June 14 to vote in the document, which has been in the works since 2007.

Wikwemikong Unceded First Nation goes to band members with constitution document

Community vote on the constitution is June 14

by Alicia McCutcheon

WIKWEMIKONG—Last Tuesday evening, members of the Wikwemikong Unceded Indian Reserve gathered at the community centre for a presentation and question and answer event on Chi-Naaknigewin, a community constitution that has been seven years in the making and proposes to “ensure the protection of our rights, both as individuals and as a collective.”

The community hall was filled to capacity with band members of all ages as the evening's proceedings got underway, led by Lynda Trudeau, governance administrative coordinator with the Wikwemikong Governance Unit. She explained that the chief and council, back in 2007, had decided it was time for the community to have its own constitution, defined as “the fundamental, overarching law of a nation, establishing the institutions of government, defining the scope of power and guaranteeing individual civil rights and liberties.”

After years of conversations, meeting, edits and rewrites, the almost-finished product is ready to be voted on by the community on June 14.

Chief Duke Peltier thanked his community for gathering in what is “truly an historic time in our community, where we're embarking on a journey to set our ways on a land we call our own.”

He noted the many youths in the audience and the importance of Chi-Naaknigewin, especially for them, and spoke about a recent trip to the Grade 6 classes at Wasse-Abin Pontiac School. “What an intelligent group they are,” he said proudly, confirming that all the work done by council in Chi-Naaknigewin is “to ensure a better life for them—the future leaders of the community.”

“Chi-Naaknigewin helps us to define who we are as Anishinaabe—Anishinaabe that are unceded and Anishinaabe of Wikwemikong,” the chief continued.

The leader talked of a recent meeting with provincial government officials a few weeks ago that began with them telling the testing of each turbine to ensure it operates correctly) taking place through to last week.

Mr. Kaminski explained that the project is awaiting the Ontario Power Authority (OPA) to declare the wind farm commercial and is currently reviewing the final documents.

Though the project is still awaiting OPA approval, all other permits and approvals are in place, allowing the turbines to produce energy, however not at the full contract rate, said Mr. Kaminski.

“Construction cleanup has also

UOI Grand Council Chief Patrick Madahbee sees Caledonia-style conflict if Ottawa legislation targets Native tobacco

by Michael Erskine

OTTAWA—A federal government bill has proposed shoring up criminal sanctions against the traffic in untaxed tobacco products with the stated aim of preventing non-Native consumers of tobacco from circumventing taxes on those products by purchasing them from on reserve ‘smoke’ shops. Reaction from First Nation leaders and proprietors has been universally negative, with a potential to generate Caledonia-style confrontations across the province, according to Anishinaabek Nation (Union of Ontario Indians) Grand Chief Patrick Madahbee.

“We have a real dilemma in that the federal and provincial governments are trying to say that First Nations dealing with tobacco is illegal,” said Chief Patrick Madahbee. “They are calling it contraband.”

The road those governments are travelling down is fraught with peril according to Chief Madahbee. “The government is going to have a big backlash,” he said. “This will impact a lot of economic activity.”

While Chief Madahbee said there was no question of the health impacts of tobacco products, “we are all aware of that impact,” he said, but the economic hit that will sweep over First Nations communities will be of tsunami proportions. “There are hundreds and hundreds of people who have been taken off the welfare rolls by employment in the industry at all levels.”

Chief Madahbee pointed out that in addition to the ubiquitous retail ‘smoke’ shops that every

Ontarians go to polls on June 12

by Michael Erskine

ONTARIO—Premier Kathleen Wynne made the long walk to the office of the Honorable David C. Onley, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario on Friday, May 2 to ask him to dissolve the legislature following an announcement by NDP leader Andrea Horwath that her party would not be supporting the 2014 Liberal budget released the day before.

Ms. Horwath ducked reporters immediately following the budget, but made her announcement around 10 am Friday morning following a meeting with her caucus and senior strategists.

Although the Liberal budget delivered at Queen's Park contained many provisions tailor made to placate the third party, the NDP leader said that the Liberal government has lost the confidence of her party.

McLean's Mountain wind farm now set and ready to generate

Awaits Ontario Power Authority final approval

by Robin Burrige

LITTLE CURRENT—The McLean's Mountain Wind Farm has concluded turbine commissioning and as of Thursday, May 1 became fully dispatchable (able to supply electricity based on the provincial need).

“We are ready to be a full grid participant,” McLean's Mountain Wind Farm Project Manager Paul Kaminski told The Expositor last Friday.

The 24-turbine project connected to the provincial electricity grid and the facility was successfully energized in February, with the turbine commissioning (the

Ferry set sail Saturday

A day late due to unexpected ice

by Alicia McCutcheon

OWEN SOUND—After a slight delay to the start of the Chi-Cheemaun's sailing season, the Owen Sound Transportation Company (OSTC) saw only a day-late start to the ferry's first sailing which took place on Saturday, May 3. The delay came about when high winds late Monday night, April 28-29, pushed ice across Georgian Bay and impeded the route the ferry takes from its winter berth in Owen Sound to its Tobermory sailing terminus.

Susan Schrempf, OSTC CEO and president, told The Expositor that on Friday, May 2 the Canadian Coast Guard sent a helicopter from Parry Sound on an ice reconnaissance mission along the Bruce Peninsula from Owen Sound north to Cove Island.

“We needed to know if there was an opening, but even the Coast

Alexis French, centre, of Sheguiandah First Nation won first place at the Royal Canadian Legion public speaking provincial finals in Ottawa last weekend.

Sheguiandah student wins Ontario Legion public speaking competition

by Michael Erskine

OTTAWA—Manitoulin Secondary School student Alexis French of Sheguiandah has been kept pretty busy receiving congratulatory calls from friends and family following her first place finish at the Royal Canadian Legion public speaking provincial finals in Ottawa.

"It was pretty stiff competition," said Ms. French, recalling the field she faced down to capture the win. "The other people had some amazing speeches."

What put her ahead? "I talked to some of the people after the speeches were judged and they told me that a song and dance always wins over the judges," she laughed. "Since I had a song and dance at the beginning and the end of my speech, I guess that is what won over the judges."

Ms. French's speech was on the dangers of identity theft and the subject matter is near and dear to her heart. "I am a bit of a nerd," she admitted. Her career sights are set on video game programming and computer science. She delights in the bits and bites of the digital domain. She has found that she is good at bridging the digital divide for people.

"People tell me 'you can take the most complicated thing and dumb it down so that anyone can understand it'," she said. Certainly a good skill set for the 21st century.

But just because she is a self-confessed nerd doesn't mean she isn't a thoroughly normal teenager. The next best part of the trip to Ottawa, after winning the competition of course? "I got to go shopping," she laughed. "I almost didn't get to. There was nothing around the place where we were staying."

Luckily, her father found a mall about five minutes away from the hotel. "I bought some new clothes,"

Government to compensate for bee losses

by Michael Erskine

MINDEMOYA—The Ontario government has announced that it will compensate beekeepers for unusual losses in their hives this year. The compensation comes in the face of growing concern over global bee losses and the general decline in the numbers of these crucial crop pollinators, according to the Ontario Beekeepers' Association (OBA).

"We recognize the critical role pollinators and beekeepers play in maintaining a healthy environment and productive agri-food sector," said Premier Kathleen Wynne, who is also the Minister of Agriculture and Food. "We want to keep honey bee colonies strong going into the growing season, working with the industry to support long-term sustainability for beekeepers and the health of all pollinators."

"We are pleased that the Ontario government has taken a first step toward helping beekeepers," said Dan Davidson, president of the Ontario Beekeepers Association. "While the compensation plan doesn't solve the problem, it will help mitigate losses that Ontario beekeepers have suffered from the harsh winter and the inappropriate use of neonicotinoid pesticides."

Dave Kains of Big Lake is a local beekeeper who could qualify for the compensation, but so far this season he has been too fortunate to qualify. "We only lost about eight percent over the winter," he said. "We have been good and lucky. I have heard rumours of some pretty heavy losses."

Compensation being offered to beekeepers includes $105 per hive to beekeepers with more than 10 hives who experience hive mortality of over 40 percent of their colonies between January 1 and October 31, 2014, according to the Ministry of Agriculture website.

"OBA has been advocating for over a year for beekeeper compensation related to extraordinary bee deaths," wrote Mr. Davidson in a recent letter to Ontario beekeepers heralding the announcement. "The amount per hive provided under this program is significantly less than we were proposing; however, we feel it is a good first step and shows awareness of the hardships many Ontario beekeepers are experiencing. We are pleased, as well, that losses will include those occurring over the summer and early fall, and not just winter. This is significant. Ontario is the first province to compensate beekeepers for losses likely caused by pesticides as well as other causes. We will be getting back to everyone with further information as it becomes available."

"It doesn't cover everything," agreed Mr. Kains, "but it is a big help if beekeepers can get something when they have a catastrophic loss."

If elected NDP pledges 200 more plows on Ontario roads

Gilles Bisson says winter standards have changed

by Alicia McCutcheon

NORTHERN ONTARIO—Gilles Bisson, who had been the Ministry of Transportation critic for the Official Opposition (New Democratic Party) before the election was announced last Friday, confirmed with The Expositor that winter road maintenance standards have changed in the years since the Progressive Conservative-led government of the 1990s.

"Prior to the Tories privatizing winter road maintenance, there were 1,500 snowplows on Ontario highways," Mr. Bisson, who is hoping to re-claim his seat in the June 12 election as MPP for Timmins-James Bay, told The Expositor. He explained that the Ministry of Transportation (MTO) would augment their highway maintenance programs with private company plows when needed.

"There were routes and a certain amount of time to do those routes—an 'x' amount of time to do the entire route and get back to the point of origin," he said. "When the government first started privatization, that number was reduced to 1,100 plows."

When the plows were reduced, the circuit time had to increase, Mr. Bisson said. "The roads could not be maintained according to the old times, so the times went up."

"When the routes get bigger, the circuit time also gets longer," he continued. "The classification sys-

Providence Bay farmer squares off against 'big guys' in fight for stable chicken prices in Ont.

by Alicia McCutcheon

PROVIDENCE BAY—Providence Bay's Glenn Black, president of the Small Flock Poultry Farmers of Canada, will be facing off against the Chicken Farmers of Ontario next week in an Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food appeal hearing. Mr. Black says the growing and selling of chickens in the country, under Canada's Supply Management System, is at a crisis level.

The Expositor spoke with Mr. Black last week as he was preparing for the May 14 appeal tribunal.

"I'm trying to focus on what's good for Ontario and Canada," he said. "Chicken Supply Management has been drifting way off course and needs to be righted."

Mr. Black quoted statistics that state that 7.6 percent of Canadian families can't afford the food they need to feed themselves, with this number more than doubling in Ontario.

With rising awareness that chicken is a healthy, lean option for Canadians, Chicken Farmers of Ontario, among other Canadian groups, are using this trend to their advantage, he said, increasing the costs each year by an average of 3.75 percent. "They are looking to make chicken at or equal to hamburger on a dollars per kilo basis, and they've blown way past turkey," he said.

Mr. Black explained that the cost of raising beef cattle on feedlots takes approximately 20 to 25 kilos of feed to create one kilo of beef. It only takes 1.83 kilos of feed to produce one kilo of chicken.

"Chicken should be 1/20th the cost of beef as 60 percent of the cost of raising the animal is the cost of feed," he said. "They have a monopoly and they can do as they please."

Mr. Black spoke of the 'Frankenstein chickens' that are being created by the industry due to the additions of antibiotics and arsenic in the feed. Both of these methods cause the chicken to grow twice as fast "creating this Frankenstein thing we call meat," he said.

'Real' chicken, he said, has a 3.5 to 4 Omega 3 and 6 ratio. Factory chickens boasting Omega 3 and 6

Island chiefs weigh in on Chief Atleo's resignation

by Alicia McCutcheon

CANADA—Last Friday's news that Assembly of First Nations (AFN) National Chief Shawn A-in-chut Atleo would be resigning from his post effective immediately came with mixed reviews, with Anishinabek Nation Grand Council Chief Patrick Madahbee saying the announcement came after a series of events that ultimately ended with the prime minister "hanging him out to dry."

Chief Madahbee said Prime Minister Stephen Harper began his puppetry of the national chief when he first announced that he, along with Aboriginal Affairs Minister Bernard Valcourt, would create a joint panel with the AFN, but the government then appointed everyone on the panel with no say from the AFN or the chiefs it represents.

The chiefs also learned that Mr. Atleo met with the prime minister without consultation "and now the First Nations Education Act," calling the recently tabled second draft "an even worse piece of legislation."

"They thought they'd quiet it down by throwing a bit of money out there, but it came back even worse," he reiterated. ($1.25 billion for First Nations education over three years has been committed by Ottawa, but is not to be available until 2016, the year following the next federal election.)

Last week, Ontario regional chief Stan Beardy called for an emergency meeting of the AFN chiefs to be held on May 14 in Ottawa regarding the First Nations Education Act, invoking Article 14 of the AFN charter that gives members of the executive the ability to request a special session. Chief Madahbee said there was discontent among the

LAMBAC announces Michael Addison as new general manager

GORE BAY—LAMBAC announced last week it has hired a new general manager to replace the current GM, Mary Nelder, who retires on June 30 after 14 years with the company.

Michael Addison has been named to the position of general manager of the Community Futures Development Corporation, which serves all of Manitoulin Island, the LaCloche Foothills region and Killarney. Mr. Addison resides in Gore Bay and is well-known across the Manitoulin-LaCloche region. He has worked with Fontaine and Associates Inc in the Sudbury area, and with Xela International in Toronto and Gore Bay, as well as several years as Communications Manager with Manitoulin Transport. Currently he is Director of Corporate Services with the UCCM Anishnaabe Police Services in M'Chigeeng.

"We are very pleased to welcome Michael to the position of general manager," stated Mack Emiry, chair of the LAMBAC board of directors. "His experience in management of both private and public sector companies will serve the people of this area well. As you know, LAMBAC provides business assistance and loans to entrepreneurs as well as community development support to municipalities and not for profit organizations, so it is important that the GM understands both sides of the equation and how each sector contributes to the economy of our region."

Voters will look forward to the future or backwards to punish

Politics, politics: now we have an Ontario election to look forward to, just a little more than a month from now, on Thursday, June 12.

The minority Liberal government has, of course, been living on borrowed time ever since former Premier McGuinty resigned from office early in 2013 and Kathleen Wynne won the Liberal leadership in a closely contested race, hence becoming the premier.

During her year in office, she has tried hard to mend as many fences as possible. In Northern Ontario, the government reclaimed the Ontario Northland Railway's freight division, thus maintaining many jobs along the Highway 11 corridor north from North Bay. This was of foremost concern to the mayors and reeves in this same area, many of them well-known Progressive Conservatives, who urged Ms. Wynne and the Ontario government to reconsider its decision to sell off all assets of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission. (The passenger service was closed down and Ontera, the telephone and Internet service that serves much of the same region, was sold this year to Bell Alliant.)

This move somewhat appeared to mollify the major concerns of most of the local politicians and the government's pre-budget announcement that it would commit $1 billion to the Ring of Fire chromium mineral development, to help build infrastructure the project will require, was also good news for the North.

But here comes the "politics, politics:" the offer is only good if the federal government also ponies up a similar amount of money.

Ms. Wynne must enjoy these games because it's fairly certain that Prime Minister Harper's federal Conservative government would far rather contribute to a partnership, in Ontario, on a project proposed and led by the Progressive Conservatives than by Ms. Wynne and the Liberals.

Nevertheless, a move like this is an astute one for it will make the federal Tories appear that they are attempting to influence a provincial outcome if they indicate another party with which they would prefer to dance. It also sets up the Northern mayors and reeves (remember that many of them are Conservatives) to lobby their friends in the government in Ottawa to seriously consider Ms. Wynne's proposal since bringing this project on line sooner rather than later will benefit their communities. Fairly close to Manitoulin, the major player in the Ring of Fire project, Cliffs Resources from Cleveland, has indicated they would build their chromite smelter at Capreol in the Greater Sudbury Area, thus delivering 400 skilled jobs to the general region.

Courting the labour vote, and with the clear intention of drawing away NDP votes, the Liberal budget last week proposed wage increases to personal support workers, something Ontario NDP leader Andrea Horvath has been demanding for some time.

Last Thursday's budget (thinly disguised as an election platform) was very NDP friendly in a number of ways and more than a few NDP supporters have been publicly critical of the caucus and its leader for rejecting the "half a loaf" budget offering with Ms. Horvath and her MPPs instead declaring they would treat the budget vote as a confidence issue and defeat the government.

The cat is very clearly among the pigeons now; the budget is a friendly one for many Ontarians, especially those in their early working years who would benefit in retirement through the enforced savings an Ontario Pension Plan would require that would augment them later in life together with their Canada Pension Plan and Old Age Security benefits.

Granted, the employers' share of such a new Ontario Pension Plan would mean greater wages and benefits costs but, in the long run, a relatively more affluent cadre of retirees means they will also be consumers of retail goods and services longer so this expense can just as readily be viewed as an investment than as an expense.

What Ms. Wynne and her Liberal candidates have to overcome is the very real concerns about decisions her predecessor, Dalton McGuinty, made respecting not constructing natural gas fired electricity generating stations within two southern Ontario ridings where this construction was vigorously opposed.

Each was a Liberal riding and whether Mr. McGuinty felt more strongly about saving those ridings for the Liberal cause or, and this is quite different, doing whatever was necessary to prevent them from going to the Progressive Conservatives, the contracts were cancelled, penalties to the contractee (the government) were invoked resulting in more than $1 billion in costs to the taxpayers for which they received absolutely nothing.

The next month will be an interesting one in this province's history as Ms. Wynne makes her case for the improvement of life for Ontarians and the opposition takes her to task because of the poor judgment of her successor.

In a way, the election will be waged and won (or lost) on either looking forward to what Ms. Wynne will present as a positive future for this province or by being spanked by the opposition NDP and Tories for indiscretions committed by a prior administration.

First order of business for any government is lowering costs

Hydro, gas and heating oil are the major factors behind financial problems

To the Expositor:

Well, citizens of Ontario will be heading to the polls this spring. Citizens need to act now and start demanding that whoever wins the office should first fix the problem of skyrocketing hydro bills, gas and heating oil. These are the two major factors for financial problems for citizens and especially for people who are living on fixed incomes—economic gains can come later.

Put that aside for now because economic gains do not happen overnight. It takes time. So how are the citizens going to get through this if they do not fix the problem with high cost of hydro, gas and heating oil as it also affects our grocery bills.

The high cost of fuel gas tax has to be lowered and home heating oil and the citizens have the right to enforce this on their MPs. These people are working for you, they're not working for the corporations or industrial companies and if the conservatives win I hope it will be a minority government. They will not have too much power to do as they wish. They can not be trusted because they're like the Republicans, they only back up the rich.

Retired personal support worker sets record straight on pay

"The only reason I had these provisions was the Canadian Union of Public Employees"

To the Expositor:

As reported by Kelly Grant (health reporter for The Globe and mail) the words used by Health Minister Deb Mathews were "very smart investment" when announcing (on April 29, 2014) a Liberal "vow" to raise the minimum wage for PSWs in Ontario by $4/hr. This increase is to come in $1.50 increments with the first one kicking in on July 1, 2014 (retroactive to April 2014), then again in 2015 and 2016.

Now you have to ask yourself when hearing this: "has someone actually woke up and smelled the coffee finally" or is this simply election rhetoric. It is not a new thing for the provincial government to renege on healthcare funding promises. The Progressive Conservatives have already jumped on the bandwagon after the announcement dismissing it as an "election ploy," so we will have to wait and see if the Liberals will walk the walk now that they have talked the talk!

In the April 30 edition of The Expositor, a letter to the editor (in regard to PSW wages) was written by Margaret Schwartzentruber ('Writer tackles PSW remuneration questions,' page 4). Now I of all people have a great deal of respect for people who express their opinion in the public eye, but at times even I have to shake my head at some comments. I am not going to take a whole lot of times rebuking Ms. Schwartzentruber's comments as, if my memory serves me right, this is the same lady who wrote in the paper that she was "in fear of being taken hostage by Natives" who were conducting an information protest on Hwy 6 awhile back. I truly feel that that kind of statement is very similar to her statements in her last letter. I certainly do not care if someone is openly "anti-something"—millions of people in the world are and it is my personal opinion that this lady is plain anti-union, which is her right, but she really needs to get her facts straight.

I will try and explain it using my career as a PSW as an example.

First, I consider myself to have been very fortunate to have been able to have spent my whole PSW career in a facility where I could make a modest wage, get a full benefit package and have a fairly decent pension plan, but why was I able to have that? Did my employer simply say, "here you go, PSWs, we are going to give you all these perks because we want you all to be happy campers?" Well to most reasonable people, no, that that is absolutely un-true. The fact is the only reason I had these provisions was simple—The Canadian Union Of Public Employees. No employer or government body is going to freely increase wages or improve benefits or pension plans unless it benefits them or they are 'forced' to as a result of an arbitrators ruling in the collective bargaining process. That is a fact and is just the way it is!

Thank God there are people out there who truly appreciate the hard work that PSWs do and are able to educate themselves to separate fact from fiction.

I hope the public who truly understand the need and importance of keeping Ontario PSWs on the job and continuing to serve the sick and elderly of this province take the time to contact the premier of this province and demand that she does 'walk the walk' on this issue.

As for Ms. Schwartzentruber, I truly hope that if she ever needs the services of a PSW that she appreciates them and she will probably find out that in the big scheme of things "a little piece of sticker on a chunk of apple" really is quite a miniscule thing.

Thank you,

Greg Young

Miss Indiana embraced by Zhiibaahaasing during family visit

Zhiibasshassing supports band member dream through $3,000 donation

by Robin Burrige

ZHIIBAAHAASING—It was a full house last Wednesday night as the entire community of Zhiibaahaasing gathered to celebrate the homecoming of Mekayla Diehl and show their support for the 25-year-old Miss Indiana USA 2014 who will be competing in the Miss USA 2014 pageant next month in Louisiana.

“We are so pleased to have one of our band members, Miss Indiana, as a proud representative of all Native young women,” began Zhiibaahaasing Chief Irene Kells during the community dinner held in Ms. Diehl’s honour. “Welcome back to your community. We are so pleased you could be with us tonight.”

Ms. Diehl grew up in Elkhart, Indiana with her paternal grandmother, but is a Zhiibaahaasing band member through her maternal grandfather and returns to Manitoulin to visit her mother and brothers.

Crowned Miss Indiana USA last November, Ms. Diehl has had a busy six months representing her state and preparing for the Miss USA pageant.

“I try and come back at least twice a year, if not more,” Ms. Diehl shared with The Expositor. “I feel balanced here and that I can just be myself.”

Growing up the only girl among five brothers, Ms. Diehl said she was a tomboy, playing with Hot that I enter a fair queen pageant because I was comfortable on stage. I learned it was also a way to earn scholarship money for college. After my first pageant I got the ‘bug’ and I was hooked.”

Through pageants Ms. Diehl was able to pay her way through school, graduating in 2011 from Albion College, Michigan with a Bachelor’s Degree of Liberal Arts in Mass Communication and Psychology.

“Pageants are all about empowering women—giving them self confidence, the power to believe in themselves and to follow their dreams,” explained Ms. Diehl. “Pageants also teach women to be humble and to give back to others.”

Ms. Diehl gives back through her charity work advocating against child abuse.

“Advocating against child abuse is a personal cause for me as I was sexually abused as a child by a family friend,” she shared. “At the time my parents were distracted with other things and it got pushed under the rug and I didn’t get the help I needed.”

Ms. Diehl said she was later adopted by her paternal grandmother and eventually reconnected with her mother six years ago.

“I have learned the power of forgiveness and now have rebuilt a very strong relationship with my mom,” Ms. Diehl continued. “Everything happens for a reason, and last fall I found the strength to speak out about what happened to me and advocate for others.”

She also added that during her most recent visit to Zhiibaahaasing she was able connect with elders and learned that many of them had gone through similar experiences while in residential school.

“Through talking about what happened to us, we can start to heal as individuals, as a community and encourage others to come forward and begin to heal,” said Ms. Diehl, adding that the elders also gave her a spirit name, Gimiwanookwe (rain woman), and that she learned about the eagle feather teachings.

During a heartfelt ceremony, Chief Kells presented Ms. Diehl with a strand of braided sweetgrass, “to protect you and give you a good mind and good spirit to help take you to wherever you want to go.”

The chief also presented Miss Indiana with a card signed by all members of the community, wishing her well on her journey towards becoming Miss USA 2014, a bouquet of flowers and a cheque for $3,000.

“(Ms. Diehl) shows us that you can be anything at any time and to never give up on your dreams,” said Chief Kells. “There is a purpose for everyone and if you follow your dreams, that purpose abest on your travels and wish you the best on your next big venture.”

“I can’t thank you enough for opening up your hearts and embracing me, welcoming me back into the community,” responded Ms. Diehl. “It has been a spiritual journey and I feel so blessed.”

Following a presentation from Ms. Diehl on ‘Finding Your Why,’ the community was able to ask questions about the pageant world and her experience as Miss Indiana USA.

“Smile every day and do something daily that make you feel happy and pretty,” responded Ms. Diehl to a question asking her what advice she would give to young girls.

Ms. Diehl will be travelling to Baton Rouge, Louisiana on Sunday, May 25 to begin her Miss USA 2014 journey.

“My mom was in the fashion and modeling industry and eventually it started to rub off on me,” laughed Ms. Diehl, explaining how she started getting involved in pageants. “I got into dancing (as a child) and danced through to college, when someone suggested exploring the city and rehearsing,” said Ms. Diehl of her first week in Baton Rouge. “There will also be interviews with the judges and preliminaries to decide who will make the top 16 and be competing in the finals on June 8, televised live on NBC at 8 pm.

“I’m not nervous yet,” responded Ms. Diehl to an Expositor inquiry. “I’m more excited. I can’t wait!”

An open letter to union members and workers everywhere

We must act together now to prevent the imposition of draconian changes to workers’ compensation

To the Expositor:

Greetings brothers and sisters:

My name is Colin Pick and I am the president of the Manitoulin and North Shore Injured Workers Group, along with my co-chair and vice president Herne Steelgrave.

We are contacting your union with the hope that your executive and membership will support us and, in fact, all injured and ill workers within Ontario, to stop the hurtful policy changes that the WSIB has already been imposing onto the backs of injured workers for the past four years.

No doubt you are already aware that the WSIB Act allows policy changes, that are reasonable under the circumstances, without the necessity of legislative debate and such changes become somewhat binding in law, however, in my humble opinion, and that of our lawyer Mike Shain and many other legal and professional minds, trade union leaders among others, these changes are way out of bounds of any reasonable meaning, true intent or spirit of the Act.

Not only is it wrong and unjust for the WSIB, under their CEO David Marshall, to try and completely dismantle any semblance of what was once the time tested principles of Lord Justice Meredith’s final report and recommendations to the Parliament of 1913, of which the previous Workers Compensation Act was based, but it is wrong at any time, to impose such harsh, punishing or radical measures onto the backs of injured workers or those suffering from work related diseases, without such radical changes, having had at the very least, some form of debate in parliament, but better still, full debate and a third reading of parliament.

Because of the recent fall of the Liberal government, and the time element now becoming a priority, one can bet that the WSIB will attempt to impose these changes onto Ontario workers any day now, therefore, it becomes crucial that we act now, and all together in creating an uproar to try and get these changes stopped now and before it’s too late. Will you help us?

I can be reached by email at colinp@eastlink.ca or by calling (705) 859-3818. Cell Vice-President Herne Steelgrave can be reached by email at n.m.i.w.group@gmail.com and by phone at (705) 805-2334. Lawyer Michael Shane can be reached by email at ShainM@lao.on.ca and by phone at (705) 368-3333.

Sincerely,

Colin Pick and Herne Steelgrave

Police agencies working together to prevent prescription drug abuse

When a physician prescribes medication for a patient, it is only intended for that person, but sometimes when prescriptions lie around unused or expired, they can end up in the hands of those they are not intended for.

When expired and unused prescription medication is left unattended, it can lead to prescription drug abuse, a press release from the Manitoulin detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) states. Police agencies and health organizations are working together again this year to fight against this public health and safety issue.

The OPP will be participating in a province-wide initiative that will provide residents an opportunity to dispose of old and unused prescription medications. Prescription Drug Drop Off Day will be held this Saturday, May 10.

The OPP is making more than 60 detachment locations available so that the public can simply and safely dispose of unwanted, unused or expired medications without exiting their vehicles. Officers and volunteers will be on hand to take the medications from community members on May 10 from 10 am until 3 pm.

The Little Current detachment of the Manitoulin OPP will be participating in a province-wide initiative that will provide residents an opportunity to dispose of old and unused prescription medications. Prescription Drug Drop Off Day will be held on Saturday May 10, 2014 at the Little Current OPP detachment 12 Campbell Street East. Officers will be set up at the public garage entrance to the detachment so residents can drive through the parking lot without having to exit their vehicle.

The public is also reminded that they can drop off any unused medications at any time to their local pharmacist.

"I fully support Prescription Drug Drop Off Day. In last year's campaign, the OPP received over 330 kilograms of medications from 730 citizens. I urge all Ontarians with unused medications at home to work together and make our homes safer by participating in the 2014 Prescription Drug Drop Off Day," said OPP Commissioner Vince Hawkes.

For a complete list of OPP detachments near you who will be participating in Prescription Drug Drop Off Day, visit opp.ca.

Warm weather means going to the cottage

Do your best to keep your property secure

The warmer spring weather has finally made an appearance in the North. The lake is quickly receding and the trees are starting to bud. Many seasonal cottagers will soon begin the process of opening up their properties for the summer. The isolated cottage roads are now navigable and that means that thieves may be lurking about looking to hit the jackpot. It is important for property owners to take a few extra minutes to consider the tasks that they can complete to keep their properties as secure as possible when they prepare to open things up for the year. Here are a few tips that may help:

- Take items of value home. If this is not possible place them out of view or lock them in a secure room or cabinet. If valuable items are not visible through a window and are locked up, they are less likely to be taken.

- Do not leave food or liquor in your cottage. In many break in incidents, liquor is one of the common items taken. If you decide to leave it in your cottage—once again store it out of sight.

- Make sure that all doors and windows are locked and secured when you leave. Do some extra work by installing theft prevention devices on your sliding patio doors and windows. Even a stick in the track to prevent the sliding door or window from opening will work in a pinch.

- Close all your curtains and blinds so that thieves cannot see inside your cottage. If you don't have curtains, use a blanket or sheet to cover the windows. If they can't see in, they may not try to get inside, especially if you have made your property secure from the outside.

- Install quality locks on your doors. A dead bolt is always a good idea. You can also strengthen your doors and door strikes by installing longer screws right into the wood frame. This will make it harder for someone to kick in the door. When locking up your outbuildings, once again, quality tamper resistant locks and hasps are a good idea.

- Do not leave boats, ATVs or other vehicles out in the open and unsecured. If you can, bring them home or lock them up in a garage—and remove the keys. If you must leave them outside, lock them to a tree or some permanent structure. Install transom locks on your outboard motors. Remove the fuel from the fuel tank and engines.

- Lock up your gas cans or take your unused fuel home. Do not leave gas cans at camp unless you plan to use it over the winter. This may be used to steal your ATV, boat or sled. It also reduces the risk of a fire on your property.

- Tell your neighbours when you are not going to be at camp—especially if you have permanent residents living close by. They can be your eyes and ears when you are not there.

- Use your security system if you have one. You can also purchase battery-operated motion sensing alarms. It will not prevent entry to your camp, but it may scare them off or alert a neighbour to the thieves.

- If you have a gate, lock it up. This will prevent thieves from driving up to your cottage.

- If your cottage has hydro, turn it off unless your must keep your refrigerator running. Turn off your water supply.

Manitoulin Secondary School CrossFit program gets $20,000 grant to expand fitness program

by Robin Burridge

M'CHIGEENG—The Manitoulin Secondary School (MSS) CrossFit program has been awarded $20,000 through the Ministry of Education's Physical Activity in Secondary Schools Grant program.

"The purpose of the grant is to encourage schools to create or renovate space in their high schools to promote/enhance physical activity in teens," explained MSS teacher Tina Balfe, who helps run the MSS CrossFit program along with her husband Jon Balfe. Mr. Balfe started the program at the school six years ago. "We started the program using our own personal equipment so with the funding we will be replacing some existing equipment, purchasing new equipment and converting some space in the school to create a more functional facility for larger groups participating. We also plan on buying some rigs to allow more students to be working out simultaneously."

CrossFit is a strength and conditioning program that aims at improving cardiovascular endurance, stamina, strength, flexibility, power, speed, coordination and balance through high intensity, varied functional movements.

"We currently have a not-for-profit CrossFit affiliate running out of our school, with a certified Level 1 CrossFit trainer (Jon Balfe) and the help of a few other staff," explained Ms. Balfe. "Participants range from Grade 9 to Grade 12, males and females, athletes to 'non-athletes,' looking to foster a healthy lifestyle and functional fitness into their every day lives. Everyone in the school is always welcome and one can join at any time."

The MSS CrossFit group averages between 10 to 15 students who come out three nights a week, in addition to six staff members, but Ms. Balfe said the number can fluctuate based on student commitments to other school athletics or groups.

"CrossFit is great because it is something that anyone can do and at MSS it has created a group that allows healthy fitness for all," explained Ms. Balfe. "You only have to measure against yourself and it is a commitment to yourself. The students are able to see big improvements and can work towards personal goals."

Ms. Balfe said the MSS program has also received a grant from Loblaws Inc for $2,000 last year to put towards equipment and two years ago CrossFit Kitchener ran a fundraiser and donated over $6,000 towards the Manitoulin club to help them purchase equipment.

"Most CrossFit gyms are like other gyms, where you pay memberships to join or get trained and attend classes, but since we are non-profit we offer the service for free and don't have any incoming funds so it is great to see so many supportive groups out there that are willing to help us out," Ms. Balfe said. "We are very thankful for this recent, generous grant (from the Ministry of Education) and excited to expand our program."

Michael Laidley and the Aurora Tigers finish top of their division, but lose the Buckland Cup to Toronto Patriots

by Robin Burridge

AURORA—Manitoulin's Michael Laidley and his team the Aurora Tigers did not move onto the Ontario Junior Hockey League (OJHL) Dudley-Hewitt Cup last week in Wellington after losing to the Toronto Patriots in the Buckland Cup last month. The Patriots went on to win the cup and be named the new Central Canada Jr. A champions, advancing to the Royal Bank Cup in Vernon later this week.

Though Michael was cheering on his team from the stands during the series after sustaining an injury earlier in the playoffs against the Kingston Voyageurs, the loss was still a blow as the Little Current hockey star was hopeful that his fractured middle finger would heal by this week in time for him to play in the finals.

Eighteen-year-old Michael will continue with the Tigers next fall before moving on to play for St. Lawrence University in Canton, NY in 2015 (with a full scholarship).

What is rodeo?

Rodeo is coming to Manitoulin this June for a Canada Day celebration

by Kyla Jansen

This is a two-part series to help people to understand what rodeo is in a lead up to the Manitoulin Rodeo, coming to the Manitowaning fairgrounds this June 28 and 29.

Rodeo is a competitive sport which arose out of the working practices of cattle herding in Spain, Mexico, and later the United States, Canada, South America, Australia and New Zealand. It is based on the skills required of the working vaqueros and later, cowboys, in what today is the western United States, western Canada, and northern Mexico. Today it is a sporting event that consists of events that involve horses and other livestock and is designed to test the skill of cowboys and cowgirls as if they were working at large. Many but not all rodeo events were based on the tasks required by cattle ranching.

Most rodeos are comprised of time events or rough stock events.

Bareback Bronc Riding - timed event

The bareback bronc riding event shows the ability of the contestant to move his feet from the point of the shoulder back to his hand hold. His knees will almost strike his chin. The contestant only has a hand hold, which resembles that of a suitcase handle. The ride lasts for eight seconds in which time the contestants' free hand cannot touch the animal or any part of his body. The mark out rule also must be adhered to. The contestants' feet must be over the point of the horses shoulders when the horses feet touch the ground outside the chute. The bareback broncs are usually smaller than the saddle broncs with a lot of quick twists, sun-fishing, and turn backs in their moves. The horse and rider are judged by a two-judge system. Each judge will award a score out of 25 for both the rider and the animal giving a total score of 100.

Saddle Bronc Riding - timed event

Saddle bronc riding is called the "classic event of rodeo," originating from the task of breaking wild horses for use on the cattle ranches of the Canadian and American west. It

WolfPak Racing Team on the podium at Ontario Cup Race in Woodnewton

SUDBURY—The podium streak for the Walden Mountain Bike Club's Wolfpak Racing team continued as two Wolfpakers stood on the podium at the Plastiglas Ontario Cup XC Mountain Bike Series event in Woodnewton.

Tehkummah's Alex Anstice finished second in the Master Sport 30-34 male division with a time of one hour, seven minutes and 13 seconds and Eddie Skala finished third in has since evolved for the rodeo arena and has also become one of the most complicated events for the rodeo cowboy. It involves strength, timing, and technique as the cowboy attempts to ride the bucking bronc for eight seconds holding onto only a thick rope attached to the horse halter. He only uses one hand to work the rope and keep him on the saddle as he spurs the horse and tries to time his movements with the broncs bucking in order to score high points. The scoring is also done with two judges the same as the bareback bronc.

Steer Wrestling - rough stock event

Steer wrestling, also known as "bull dogging," is the fastest event in the arena. The bull dogger, from his galloping horse, attempts to grab a running steer (weighing between 400 and 600lbs) and wrestle it to the ground. Like the roping events the steer is given a head start and is followed by the wrestler and his hazer. The hazer is a mounted cowboy who rides along the right hand side of the steer keeping it running in a straight line. This makes the steer wrestler's job easier when jumping from his horse. The wrestler reaches for the steer's horns and swings his legs from behind him to in front as he tries to use the momentum of that maneuver and his strength to bring down the steer. The clock is stopped when the steer's head, body and all four legs are on the ground. All this action can take place in less than five seconds. As with roping, penalties apply if the wrestler leaves the box too soon in pursuit of his steer.

Barrel Racing - timed event

Most rodeos have this as a women's event. The riders will race their horses into the arena to run a cloverleaf pattern around three barrels and out again. The goal is to have the fastest time without knocking over a barrel. The rider tries to guide the horse as tightly around each barrel as close as she can to shave milliseconds off her time. A fraction of a second is all it takes to win or lose a barrel race.

the Senior Expert 19-29 Male field at one hour, 33 minutes and six seconds.

Dominic Girard and Nicholas Tavchandjian finished sixth and seventh in the senior expert 19-29 male field—a member has stood on the podium at every Ontario Cup and Canada Cup event since the Wolfpak formed in 2010.

This sport highlights the speed and agility and training of the horse.

An electric eye connected with an electronic timer and a judge with a stopwatch record the time. The rider is given a running start into the arena and her time begins when she passes the starting line and ends when she crosses it again after running a long stretch back from the third barrel at the opposite end of the arena.

This is the first four events of our rodeo section. Please stay tuned for more information on the other events that A-K Rodeo will be bringing to Manitoulin Island as cowboys and cowgirls from all over begin their 2014 quest for top prizes. May is the start of rodeo season in our province and we look forward to inviting here for our Canada Day weekend activities. For more information see www.manitoulin-rodeo.net or join our Facebook page.

See you at the rodeo!

Manitoulin team wins tournament for a cause

Canadian coaching excellence

Skate Canada Manitoulin coach Abbie Drolet recently received Skate Canada Northern Ontario's (SCNO) Coach of the Year Award. The award was presented to Ms. Drolet at the SCNO annual general meeting in Thunder Bay on Saturday, April 26. "I was very excited and honoured," Ms. Drolet told The Expositor. "Abbie is a great coach and goes above and beyond on and off the ice," commented Skate Canada Manitoulin secretary Nicole Taylor on why Abbie was nominated. "The club is so proud of her and her representation as one of the best coaches in Northern Ontario." From left, is Nicole Cousineau, SCNO board skating program/volunteer development, Ms. Drolet and SCNO Thunder Country Region Director Tara Patterson.

Guard radar images could not show this," she said, explaining that Environment Canada's ice report could not give them the information needed to sail either. "Knowing there wasn't an icebreaker anywhere near, the Coast Guard sent a helicopter from Parry Sound. We now know where the ice would be found."

Ms. Schrepf said the remaining ice is found largely near Cape Croker and Lions Head, so the Chi-Cheemaun had to make her annual journey from Owen Sound a little further east than usual. The southwest wind that blows is also helping to push the ice away from the ferry route. "And the ice is rotten and there's less of it," she added.

The Chi-Cheemaun's first sailing of the year took place at 1:30 pm from Tobermory, arriving at South Baymouth at 3:30 pm. A video of the big canoe's triumphant return to Manitoulin can be found on The Expositor's Facebook page, which had garnered over 16,000 views by press time Monday.

The front page headline in the April 30 edition of The Manitoulin Expositor was accurate as of press time on Monday, April 28, but it was that very night that high winds pushed ice across Georgian Bay from the Parry Sound side to the Owen Sound-Tobermory side.

The Expositor learned last Tuesday afternoon of the sailing delay caused by Mother Nature's wind but by that time, the paper had been printed.

The Chi-Cheemaun had her first month of sailing 40 years ago this fall, in 1974, and this was the first time the ferry's season opening has been delayed by ice conditions, a remnant of the long and cold winter just past.

...Madahbee sees Caledonia-style conflict

community has, there is a huge industry that employs people in the manufacturing, distribution and warehousing of the products. "You have to remember that there is also a resurgence in agriculture in our communities as well, as people have started to grow tobacco again to supply the factories," he said. "Pull that economic plug and you will see a flare up that will make Caledonia look like a picnic."

Chief Madahbee said that the First Nation leadership recognized the government's concerns. "We have said work with us, but they refuse to meet," he said. "It is just another example of how this government works. They decide what is good for our communities and then move to impose their ill-conceived solutions and wonder why everything blows up in their faces."

The provincial and federal governments are so fixated on their lost tax revenues that they are losing sight of the positive economic impact that has come to First Nations communities through the development and growth of the industry, he said.

"When all is said and done, this bill should never have been introduced," said Chief Madahbee. "There should have been proper consultation and a workable solution found. Instead they are looking to criminalize a segment of our communities that are just trying to make an honest living and become economically independent of government handouts."

Penalties under the act are fairly severe. On indictment the maximum penalty is up to five years' imprisonment and on summary conviction it's up to six months. A key concern among those opposing Bill C10 are the provisions for mandatory minimum terms of imprisonment for individuals who have been convicted of this particular offence for the second or subsequent times. For a second conviction the penalty calls for a minimum of 90 days, while a third conviction starts up at 180 days of minimum imprisonment and for a fourth or subsequent conviction the penalty is up to two years less a day.

These penalties do have a caveat, however. In order for these penalties to be imposed requires the presence of, or the involvement of, 10,000 cigarettes or more of contraband tobacco, or 10 kilograms of raw leaf tobacco, or 10 kilograms of any other tobacco product.

The First Nations have conducted trade in tobacco for thousands of years without problem until non-Natives became involved in the trade and started putting all kinds of additives and carcinogenic adulterants and governments began collecting excises and taxes from it, said Chief Madahbee. "We just should never have introduced you guys to it."

On that point at least, First Nation tobacco advocates and public health authorities undoubtedly agree.

...Ontarians go to polls on June 12

Algoma-Manitoulin NDP incumbent Mike Mantha said he supported his leader's decision and was ready to hit the hustings.

"We are ready to go," he said on Friday morning. "We took a look at the budget and we held discussions. Andrea made her decision today. We have heard from the voters and we have listened. This government has no respect for the voters of this province."

Asked if the decision to force an election was made over the contents of the budget, Mr. Mantha replied "it was a combination of both. We had a few items that we had asked for in the last budget and she (Premier Kathleen Wynne) couldn't get them implemented. She wants to be captain of the ship, but she can't build a raft."

Mr. Mantha said there were three promises made to the NDP in the last budget that the Liberal government has not been able to deliver on. "Now they are making 70 promises and we do not think they will deliver them any better," he said.

Among the provisions contained in the 2014 budget were increased taxes on those making more than $150,000 a year (two percent of the population), increases in cigarette taxes and small increases (one percent) in Ontario Works and Ontario Disability Support payments.

UNIFOR, the newly amalgamated union formed from the Canadian Auto Workers and the Communications, Energy and Paperworkers unions, recommended Ms. Horwath pass the budget, saying the budget "deserves NDP support."

"(It) makes a difference in the lives of working families," said UNIFOR president Jerry Diaz. "The bottom line is that this is a decent budget."

Several other major unions had stepped up pressure on the NDP leader in the lead up to the budget release and its immediate aftermath, but Ms. Horwath, announcing that the premier would not bully her, turned the budget down. Some pundits suggested that in doing so, the NDP leader had fallen for a carefully laid Liberal trap.

Liberal candidate for Algoma-Manitoulin (and Haweater) Craig Hughson of Elliot Lake said that although he and his campaign team are ready to go, his initial reaction to the NDP decision was one of surprise. "I am surprised but ready for this unnecessary election," he said. "I do question how the NDP could not support this budget. Voters in Algoma-Manitoulin will want to know why Mike Mantha and the NDP are against jobs for Algoma-Manitoulin."

Mr. Hughson, who grew up on Manitoulin Island and who once worked for former Liberal MPP Mike Brown, said he offered Algoma-Manitoulin "a strong option for election day."

"A week since Horwath and Mantha indicated they were forcing an election and still no reason why aside from a lie about the financial accountability officer, and no policies from them," Mr. Hughson added, referring to the Liberal assertion that the NDP leader had prevented at least one of their demands from being met over the past year. "Liberals have been very clear. We're putting people ahead of politics."

Liberal candidate

Former candidate Joe Chapman of Little Current (also a Haweater) has indicated in the past that he would be interested in running as the Progressive Conservative candidate for MPP again. An announcement was expected shortly following The Expositor's press deadline.

Rumours and conjecture aside, as of press time on Monday, no statement had been issued by the party or the riding association as to who the candidate might be.

Riding president Ron Swain of Bruce Mines confirmed that the riding had not yet nominated a candidate for the riding. The Progressive Conservative website lists a small number of ridings across the province that have not yet nominated a candidate, including the Sault Ste. Marie riding contested last time out by Jib Turner of Little Current. Mr. Turner is not expected to enter the contest there this time out.

It should also be noted that the writ did not officially drop and the official start of the election will not take place until today, Wednesday May 7, by which time the Progressive Conservative candidate should be known. Stay tuned to The Expositor website at manitoulin.ca for updates.

Green Party spokesperson Sarah Hutchinson said that her riding association was not prepared to conduct a candidate search at this time. "Justin Tilson (the former candidate) has been out of the country for the past six months working, so he does not qualify under the Ontario election rules," she said. "Unless someone steps forward locally, or the party decides to parachute someone in, I don't think we will be contesting this election." That does not mean her party will be inactive however. "We will be focussing on our leader Mike Schriener. He is the best candidate for premier and we will be highlighting our party's position throughout the election."

The Ontario Progressive Conservative position on the Liberal government and the 2014 budget is well known. The Progressive Conservatives had no problem turning down the budget, particularly as the projected $12.5 billion goes against Leader of the Official Opposition Tim Hudak's off-repeated mantra of slashing government spending and reining in union contracts.

Other provisions in the defeated Liberal budget, largely seen as a precursor campaign document before its release crafted to appeal to NDP voters, included improving the province's transit and infrastructure as a budget priority with $130 billion spent over a 10-year period—an investment the Liberals believe will support 110,000 jobs annually.

NDP incumbent

The defeated budget turned platform included a new Ontario Retirement Pension Plan for people without a workplace pension that would require contributions from employers and workers of 1.9 per cent of salary. For instance, someone earning $70,000 a year would pay $1,263 into the pension plan and their employer would match that amount. The new plan would have been introduced in 2017. There was $29 billion over 10 years for public transit, roads, bridges and infrastructure; $11.4 billion over 10 years for hospital expansion and redevelopment projects; $11 billion over 10 years to repair, upgrade and build new elementary and high schools; $2.5 billion over 10 years for a new jobs fund which would give grants to corporations; $1 billion to help build a road to the remote Ring of Fire mineral deposit in Northern Ontario, but the money is contingent on getting matching funds from the federal government; $810 million over three years for community supports for adults with developmental disabilities; $294 million for a program that helps prevent homelessness; $32 million to expand school breakfast and lunch programs; increasing social assistance rates by one per cent for people on disability supports and welfare; replacing the Northern Allowance for people on social assistance with a Remote Communities Allowance adding $50 a month for the first person and $25 a month for each additional family member; hiking the provincial tax on aviation fuel by four cents a litre over four years; and would have increased the tobacco tax from 12.35 cents a cigarette to 13.975 cents or $3.25 on a carton of 200, but the tax rate on cigars would have remained unchanged at 56.6 percent. The Liberals have said that if reelected, they will reintroduce the budget.

The writ may not have officially fallen, but election spin is definitely in full swing. NDP house leader Gilles Bisson issued a press release heralding a Forum poll that indicated the electorate blame the Liberals for the election call—with 50 percent of Ontarians supporting the forcing of an election. That same poll indicates that 48 percent of Ontarians approved the budget and that support for the NDP had dropped following Ms. Horwath's 'popular' decision to topple the government—her party now places a distant third in the polls at 22 percent (following the election call) with the Progressive Conservatives in the lead at 38 percent and the Liberals in second with 33 percent. But, due to their vote being more efficiently distributed across the province's ridings, the poll also indicated a Liberal minority government being returned to the 107 seat legislature at Queen's Park with 48 seats to the Progressive Conservative's 45. The NDP would be reduced from 21 seats to 13.

But there are 41 days left in the 2014 Ontario election campaign and a lot of things can happen in politics between the dropping of the writ and the depositing of an elector's ballot into the box. An Oraclepoll survey released by the separatist (from Ontario) Heritage Party showed a deep dissatisfaction with Ontario politicians in general when it comes to handling Northern issues (there was no indication of an Ontario Heritage Party candidate). It will be up to each of the candidates to convince the electorate that they will make a change in that perception. Watch page 3 of The Expositor in the coming weeks for responses from each of the candidates to questions posed by this paper.

...goes to band members with constitution

 chief that his community enjoys no special rights because it is unceded. "I had to bite my lip and take the democratic approach and continue to listen," he said. The chief told his community how, when the moment was right, he quietly reached down to his leather bag and pulled out the wampum belts he had brought with him "that define those special rights."

"The government was taken aback," he explained. "They didn't know how to deal with that."

Chief Peltier said that if there's one thing government respects, it is the written word which is why a constitution is so important. "It's time to put this document to the test and enact it into supreme law and begin our own lawmaking procedures that will benefit our community."

Chief Peltier concluded by commending the work of the governance unit on Chi-Naaknigewin to much applause from the audience.

Ms. Trudeau said that, despite the vigorous attempts at building community awareness of the constitution in Wikwemikong, off-Island and on the web, that there are still plenty of questions out there and encouraged residents to stop by her office or request a home visit. Ms. Trudeau also put out a call for fluent Ojibwe-speaking elders to assist in the process.

Councillor John Dube, who holds the council position on the special portfolio, called June 14 an "historical day for the community. We get to tell our province, our country, how we want to live our lives," he said. "By voting that day, we're establishing our jurisdiction."

Ms. Trudeau went through the time frame of Chi-Naaknigewin, including all of the activities and meetings that have gone into the making of the document.

She spoke of the community's history and how business was conducted on a nation-to-nation basis. "We need to get the pieces of our past that are good and be reflective of that," she said. "We know we can't return 100 percent, but we can take those pieces from the past, mould it and make it reflective of ourselves."

"The Indian Act isn't for our people; it's for the Canadian government," Ms. Trudeau added. "My name might be Trudeau, but not 'that Trudeau'," she laughed along with the audience.

She said she wanted to make the point clear: just because the community may adopt Chi-Naaknigewin as its constitution does not mean it is at the point of self-governance. "We still need to have a relationship with the federal government," she said. "We don't want people to think that we're going on our own and will start taxing ourselves." The constitution will, however, give the community more power down the road, should they one day choose to break those ties.

Ms. Trudeau explained the lawmaking process as part of Chi-Naaknigewin, giving the example of the Peltier family asking chief and council for a law which states that anyone crossing the border must wear yellow pants. This can't be done, she said, without a public process and three readings of the proposed law through chief and council. A law will require 50 percent plus one of the council's votes to pass.

The Wikwemikong community centre was filled to capacity for the community meeting on Chi-Naaknigewin, Wikwemikong's constitution. Band members will go to the polls on June 14 to vote it into law.

While accountability is already in place now, the document confirms the accountability of chief and council.

Chi-Naaknigewin also enshrines the role of elders in the community's decision-making with an elders' council to be set up through appointment by chief and council. A justice council will also be enacted, elected by the community, which will act as the "independent judicial authority of Wikwemikong Unceded Territory."

Ms. Trudeau explained that the Chi-Naaknigewin will be a fluid object that can be changed or amended as the community changes. "The Indian Act is designed to assimilate us but the Chi-Naaknigewin is made so we can continue to be Anishinaabe," she said, emotion in her voice. "So that when my son is a grandfather, he will continue to be Anishinaabe."

To help get the word out, the community is hosting a video, poster and essay contest on 'what Chi-Naaknigewin means to me' and 'the difference between the Indian Act and Chi-Naaknigewin.' Posters have been put up, mailouts sent, and webinars hosted among many other avenues of communication in spreading the word.

The floor was then opened up to the community for any questions they had on Chi-Naaknigewin.

One community member said he worried how little his fellow residents knew of the federal government and the low voter turnout during election time. "The majority don't vote," he said, "if we all get involved in the vote, and we vote the same, we could have the power."

Ms. Trudeau noted that only 16 percent of eligible voters cast a ballot for chief and council. "When we band together we are very powerful," she added.

One woman asked whether the government would recognize the constitution, or if that even mattered.

"It doesn't matter," Ms. Trudeau responded. "(The government) makes decisions without our recognition anyway."

Another person in the audience questioned the appeals process, asking why this process wasn't already determined. Ms. Trudeau said this would be established in the very near future.

One woman asked about the foundation of Chi-Naaknigewin, "to us as Anishinaabe people." She said she worried that as soon as the document is written down, it would take precedence over Wikwemikong's oral traditions "that are paramount to our community."

Ms. Trudeau referred back to the preamble, which states: "We are Wikwemkoong Anishinaabek. Our home is Odawa Mnis and surrounding islands. Our lands are Unceded."

"We have retained these lands for our future generations so that they can continue to be Anishinaabe. We have not relinquished any of our rights to any of the lands in the Great Lakes Basin to any nation," the preamble continues. "We continue to govern the waters, air, and lands including island, as our ancestors have since time immemorial. The Wikwemikong Gchi-Naaknigewin will ensure the protection of our rights, both as individuals and as a collective."

"Just because it gets voted on doesn't mean it gets shelved," Ms. Trudeau assured. "We're so busy trying to appease the reporting system of our federal government that we're forgetting we're a nation here and this document maintains that."

Another woman questioned the difference between the Wikwemikong Unceded Indian Reserve and the larger territory. Chief Peltier harkened back to the earlier story of his meeting with provincial officials and how they noted to the chief that the community's name had 'Indian Reserve' in it. "We've bought into what has been imposed upon us," he said, "but 'Indian Reserve' has never been part of the name of our community."

Chief Peltier told the audience that, during his visit with the Grade 6 classes, he asked them what it was they were most proud

of. "That I'm an Anishinaabe," they responded.

"We're trying to take our own thought processes, our own intellect, and put them in place," he said, noting that there is very little, if any, reference to Ontario, Canada or the Indian Act in the proposed constitution.

"Our territories include the waters that flow in the Great Lakes," he said, speaking of the community's ancestral trade routes and hence the use of the word 'territories' in Chi-Naaknigewin.

The vote on Chi-Naaknigewin will take place on Saturday, June 14.

...fight for stable chicken prices in Ont.

have an 18 to 25 ratio. Studies have shown that high levels of Omega 3 can cause arthritis, immunodeficiency diseases and allergies, he said. The addition of antibiotics also leads to the creation of antibiotic-resistant super bugs.

Mr. Black's personal flock consists of 100 laying hens and one 'token' meat bird, "just to keep my finger in the pie. Bird regulations are just way too onerous." His eggs are sold at the farm gate.

Should the ministry rule in his favour, "There's an opportunity for over 400,000 additional jobs in Ontario if we're able to just get 10 percent of the market share from the big guys so small flockers can grow and develop," he continued. "And that just comes with the stroke of a pen from the Minister of Agriculture. She has the powers." (The minister of agriculture for the past year has been Premier Kathleen Wynne.)

"The Chicken Farmers of Ontario has filed a motion to dismiss my appeal, saying 'he's a whack job, don't listen to him'."

"It's been a long, lonely struggle," he added, noting that while he has heard from other small operations that they will be at the May 14 hearing, he is doubtful. "It will be me facing one to six rabid Toronto lawyers wanting to eat me alive."

Max Burt of Burt Farms in Ice Lake has faced the appeals tribunal before, also taking the Chicken Farmers of Ontario to task, but for a different reason.

Mr. Burt explained that the Supply Management System began in 1964 because of the low costs of chicken at the time. Prices were so low, he said, that farmers were losing money. "Right now the industry has continued to be built out of southern Ontario by the producer base," he said. "When we need more chicken, the producer base grows." Mr. Burt noted that the industry has lost over 30 producers in a year, but the number of birds remains the same. "Is that the model we need?" he asked, referring to the "consolidated industry."

He spoke of the Excel Foods listeria crisis in Alberta—a plant that saw one third of Canada's beef processed through its doors.

Glenn Black of Providence Bay and his 'token' meat bird.

"That's the problem with allowing huge processors: you just can't shut that facility down because we need it too badly. If I made a big mistake I would be done and out of business, taking on the costs myself, but life would go on for the other producers around me," he continued. Excel may have taken a financial hit for the shutdown in operations, but the brunt was largely passed on.

Mr. Burt said the problem with the Chicken Farmers of Ontario begins with its mandate of meeting consumer demand by creating a high quality product. If Mr. Burt's neighbour wanted to buy chicken from his farm, a high quality product, they can't. "They chose to dig in their heels and say they (the neighbour) can buy chicken anywhere they want to."

Mr. Burt's issue with the Chicken Farmers of Ontario is that the production model requires that he buy a minimum of 14,000 units per year, the equivalent of 70,000 chickens annually, to buy into the system. Two years ago, he said, Northern Ontario producers saw 43,500 chicken processed at five plants—half of what they wanted him to grow.

"There's an attitudinal problem," Mr. Burt added. "We have to think differently if we're going to develop and grow the system. If we do want to expand local food, and I believe the government does, it could be done with the stroke of a pen," he shared Mr. Black's turn of phrase, "at no cost to anyone."

He likened the Chicken Farmers of Ontario to a big shade tree, blocking out the light to allow the young trees to grow and develop.

"I wish Glenn the best of luck," he said.

she said. Good thing too, she had a nice crisp cheque for $1,000 to go with that shiny new gold medal she needed to accessorize.

Although the competition for this year is over (not all provinces hold competitions through the Legion, so there are no nationals to go on to) Ms. French is looking forward to continuing her public speaking career as well. "I have two more years I can compete through the Legion," she said. "I have lots of ideas for next year's competition already running through my head."

But she isn't straying too far from what brought her this far, as among those new clothes from Ottawa is a brand new Big Bang Bazinga T-shirt.

Seven-year-old Patrick McCann of Gore Bay competed in the junior category at the provincials as well, finishing as a respectable runner-up.

He competed against "a whole bunch of people" at the start of the competition, but then it went down to just the three top speakers.

While in Ottawa, the McCann's took in the Science and Technology, Titanic and a canoe museum, as well as the parliament buildings. "We also got to see the prime minister's house," he said. "But we couldn't go in. There was too much construction going on at the bridge."

Young Mr. McCann

brought home the runner up prize of $75 with plenty of years ahead to perfect his delivery. He said he was looking forward to the opportunity to compete again.

...Government to compensate for bee losses

Mr. Kains said that he understands from the Sudbury Beekeeper's Association that there are about 119 beekeepers across Northern Ontario who would qualify for the compensation.

The pollen has started to come into the hives already this spring. "I have seen a little bit coming in," said Mr. Kains. The hives will need to be treated against mites when the temperatures rise consistently above 10 degrees and before the honey flow begins in earnest. Pollen is a key ingredient in the formation of new bees, providing the protein to provide the building blocks for bee larvae to form into bees.

Bees in some parts of Canada began dying in record numbers when the corn planting season began. When the dead bees were collected and tested by Health Canada, 70 percent were found to have traces of neonicotinoids on them.

"Based on the preliminary information evaluated to date, there is an indication that pesticides used on treated corn seeds may have contributed to at least some of the 2012 spring bee losses that occurred in Ontario," reads Health Canada's Ontario Bee Incidents 2012 report.

But the Grain Farmers of Ontario (GFO) does not agree with that assessment.

ranks, with some chiefs, and community members, starting to speak of National Chief Atleo's impeachment.

While Mr. Atleo was elected for a second term, Chief Madahbee said many of the Ontario chiefs did not know the other candidates and the old adage "better the devil you know" applied.

"Don't get me wrong, I think he was a very good leader, but he started listening to "Neonicotinoid seed treatments are an important tool for Ontario's grain farmers," reads the GFO statement. "Without this technology, Grain Farmers of Ontario estimates a significant reduction of yield and loss of income for our farmers. The success of our crops is critical not only to the farmer's bottom line, but also to livestock producers, the food ingredient industry, the renewable fuels industry, the bio-products industry, and many other downstream users. The impact of reduced yield would be felt across the province." Corn is primarily pollinated by wind dispersal.

The likely culprit in neonicotinoid dispersal has been fingered as the dust kicked up in the process of planting and treating corn, possibly lending credence to the GFO assertion that the treated seeds are safe for pollinators, provided proper use and handling guidelines are followed.

The battle lines are drawn however, with Europe already having banned the use of the product and conflicting scientific studies clouding the view forward. Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne has sent a letter to several federal cabinet ministers asking that Health Canada expedite the study of the pesticides to determine the review of the pesticides.

his advisers and lawyers, some of whom were non-Native, instead of the chiefs and most importantly the people," Chief Madahbee said. "I've known Shawn long enough that I believe he had the right intentions, but Harper left him out to dry."

M'Chigeeng Chief Joseph Hare expressed his regrets on the resignation of National Chief Atleo with The Expositor.

Killarney's Herbert Fisheries expands operations

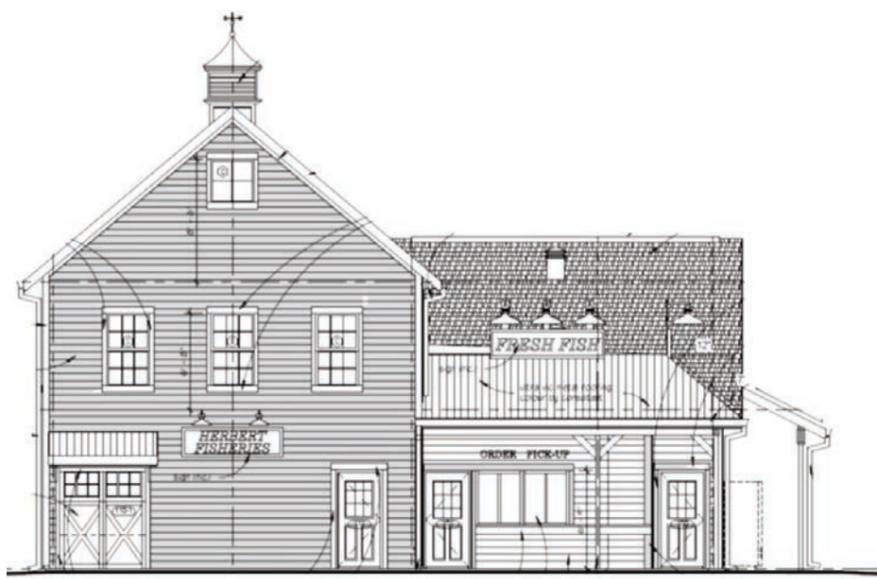

by Alicia McCutcheon
KILLARNEY—Snowmobilers to Killarney this winter were alarmed to find that their beloved Herbert Fisheries fish and chip stand had been torn down, but with nothing replaced in its stead.

Have no fear, boating community, for the world famous fish and chips (so often used by Islanders as an excuse for a trip to Killarney) will be back this summer, bigger and better than ever thanks to $820,000 in government grants for the creation of a new fish processing facility and restaurant on the community's wharf, which will be owned by the municipality and rented to Herbert Fisheries.

In 2012, FedNor announced a $320,000 grant "to help create jobs and support business development and growth."

Morgan Pitfield, mayor of Killarney, explained that the initial grant did not cover the costs of the project and the municipality applied for more funding with great success.

for the 2,583 square foot first floor and 1,593 square foot second floor building has been delayed due to the unseasonably long winter, but cement has been poured, assures Mayor Pitfield. While construction is underway, Coco Paving of Hamilton, which mines quartzite from nearby Badgeley Island, and Herbert Fisheries have come to a working agreement to share the loading dock on the wharf as the new home of the Herbert Fisheries borders on Coco's traditional loading/unloading area.

The mayor said he hopes to see its completion by mid-August.

"In the interim, we will make arrangements with Mr. Herbert to sell fish and chips from somewhere else, such as a trailer or bus. Fish and chips will be operating, but in a temporary structure," he said. "We had to replace it (the trailer)—it was in a sad state of affairs."

"The new building will now house Herbert's and the processing plant and should add five or six major jobs and more job security," he said.

"Islanders will still get their fish and chips," Mayor Pitfield laughed.

The mayor also noted that Coco Paving has also upped its ante at Badgeley Island and has added a few more jobs and equipment to its operations. The quarrying business was for many years owned by Indusmin Ltd.

Trustee Killens and RDSB chair butt heads over role of school councils

by Alicia McCutcheon
MANITOULIN—Rainbow District School Board (RDSB) Trustee Larry Killens said he is worried that high level decisions made at the board level are not first going through the school councils—councils made up of parent representatives found at each of the Rainbow schools.

Mr. Killens explained that school councils are legislated by the Ministry of Education and are to work in concert with school administration "to bring to the table the wishes, concerns and suggestions" from the parents to the board.

Mr. Killens said that anything to do with the "delivery of education" must be made known to the councils by the board, but this, he says, is not happening, and points to motions regarding downsizing, school sizes and curriculum that should all be brought before school councils.

"The new (RDSB) governance manual (which defines the role of the board) did not go before school councils—they had no input and in no way were they consulted," Trustee Killens said. "The director said they were, but they weren't." He also pointed to the announcement by the board that A.B. Ellis Public School would move into the Espanola High School and the lack of consultation in that North Shore school community.

School council meetings are always held with the school's principal and when he raised his concerns with Manitoulin Secondary School Principal Laurie Zhanow, the principal explained that the school council only meets quarterly so information is sometimes not passed on in a timely manner, he said. "With respect to Principal Zhanow, maybe we had better change the amount of times the school councils meet."

"School councils are not just nice to have, they are important to have," he added.

RDSB Chair Doreen Dewar said Mr. Killens has expressed these concerns at board meetings, but she has yet to hear of an actual school council with any concerns. "We have heard from nobody," she said.

In terms of school councils not learning of board motions or other board affairs until after the fact, Ms. Dewar said the trustee is likely correct on this point in that many of the school councils only meet quarterly. As for his concerns with the governance model, the chair said there had been two months between the first reading and the motion that passed the document into policy for anyone to make an objection, adding that the policies contained within the manual "are not carved in stone and can be changed at any time." The policies have been reduced to 16 in number, but there have been no changes, she said. "We reformatted them and refocused them on student learning."

"School councils are there to consult with parents," the chair continued. "If there's a problem, program or endeavour, they would advise the principal. There is no school function that can function without the principal."

"Trustees really don't have a role to play with school councils," Ms. Dewar added. "They are an advisory body mandated by the ministry. Trustees are usually welcomed, but should be working as a liaison between the parents and the principal. Anything they (the school council) want to bring to the board must be done through the principal."

On top of the school councils, there is also a parent involvement committee, usually made up of the heads of each of the school councils that meets once a month in Sudbury, or in Manitoulin's case, via teleconference.

"He (Mr. Killens) is entitled to his opinion," Chair Dewar said, "but it is an opinion of one. It would appear that there is nobody else that is supportive of it."

As for A.B. Ellis, Ms. Dewar said the school councils in that community have been very supportive of the decision. "I even got a letter from the past chair calling it the best possible plan," she said, noting that the RDSB also held public hearings on the matter, with another scheduled for May 15.

"The board of trustees is a democratic process—we're not appointed, we're elected, and people expect you to make decisions for them," the chair said. "Where would we get if we had to hold a public meeting on every decision? At the board level we also vote and democracy weighs in again. The decisions are not made lightly."

Sheshegwaning band member qualifies for provincial bodybuilding competition

by Robin Burrige

SHESEHEGWANING—Bodybuilding champion Celina Cada-Matasawagon, who is originally from Sheshegwaning First Nation, has qualified for the 2014 GNC Ontario Championships (bodybuilding) after placing fifth in the bikini three and masters short divisions at the GNC 26th annual Festival City Championships in Stratford last month.

Though Ms. Cada-Matasawagon qualified for provincials, she has decided to stay her invitation for one year in order to gain more experience and compete next year.

Ms. Cada-Matasawagon has been active throughout her life, both as a champion shawl dancer and a world class hoop dancer, but didn't begin bodybuilding until two years ago, participating in her first competition in July of last year.

"All my life I have always been active in my community, but more importantly trying to live a healthy and good life," explained Ms. Cada-Matasawagon on how she started in the sport. "Through my education I have always been involved in sports in some way or another. I have always promoted a healthy lifestyle by being an example for many. Being an aboriginal dancer and being fit go hand and hand and bodybuilding is something I got started doing just to get in shape. My trainer at the time was the one that thought that I was in really good shape for my age (Ms. Cada-Matasawagon is 46) and who told me about fitness competitions."

The rest is history, and the Kemptville teacher has been training and participating in competitions ever since.

"I feel that at this point in my life I am in the best shape of life and not even close to being done," she said. "Bodybuilding is a lifestyle and something I plan to continue to do for a very long time."

This past fall, Ms. Cada-Matasawagon began working with a new trainer, Emilio Ruiz, with the goal of competing at the GNC annual Festival City Championships.

"I feel honoured and happy to be where I am today, but I could not have done this without the support I got from my trainer," Ms. Cada-Matasawagon commented. "It isn't easy, but what made this happen is my determination and commitment to working towards my goal."

Reaching her personal goals and qualifying for provincials was a great achievement for Ms. Cada-Matasawagon, but she told The Expositor that she has another driving force.

"At the competitions you don't see very many Native people," explained Ms. Cada-Matasawagon. "I think I might have been the only one at Stratford (the GNC Festival City Championships). I have a dream and I am not going to stop until I reach it and being one of the few aboriginal people doing this makes me want to work hard. I am doing this because I love it, but also because I see the health of our people failing. I feel if more people in our communities got more active then some of the health conditions our people suffer from might go away. To me this whole thing fits in with the medicine wheel in so many ways. I want to do whatever I can to make positive changes so that more of our youth will see what exercise and a healthy lifestyle can do."

Ms. Cada-Matasawagon's goal is to place in the top three in future shows and keep improving in addition to continuing as a role model for aboriginal individuals.

the hiring of Mr. Addison. "Michael Addison brings 30 years of demonstrated leadership and a talent for creatively addressing operational issues. His knowledge of our area was gained as a volunteer director of the East Algoma Community Industrial Training Corporation (CITC) and a member of the North Shore Search and Rescue. We are very happy to have him join the LAMBAC team and continue the great work of LAMBAC across this region." Mr. Addison will begin work on June 9, 2014.

LAMBAC, which is funded by Industry Canada through FedNor, has been in existence since 1986, operating under a volunteer board of directors drawn from the communities it serves. In that time it has provided over $7 million in loans to local businesses. It has more than $5 million in active loans currently in its lending portfolio. LAMBAC has also been instrumental in several community development initiatives, including the Manitoulin Island Community Abattoir and the LaCloche Foothills tem has not changed, but they played with the circuit times."

Mr. Bisson said that while a highway may have three hours from the start of a snowfall event to be cleared, that amount of time, during a winter storm, could mean a lot of snow and a treacherous highway.

Mr. Bisson said that part of the NDP's election campaign is a promise to Ontarians that, should his party be elected to form the government at Queen's Park next month, the number of plows on Ontario roads would be increased by 200. This figure came after consultations with the Ontario Roadbuilders' Association. "Two hundred plows would see an increase to maintenance standards closer to what they used to be," he said.

The Expositor requested an interview with Ontario Roadbuilders' Association executive director Jeff Wilkinson, but he declined to comment, explaining that the MTO had asked him not to speak to the media as they are working together on the hot button Northern Ontario issue of winter roads maintenance, which has since become an election issue.

...Island chiefs weigh in on Chief Atleo's resignation

national chief," said Chief Hare. "The chiefs of Canada demanded changes to the original version of the Act, and through Atleo and the government these demands were accommodated. But now the chiefs, how many of them we don't know, have now decided the accommodations were not enough, and led by leaders of the regional organizations, severely criticized the national chief for supporting their initial demands. National Chief Atleo had no choice but to resign."

"There is never enough resources to go around, but as we argue for support guaranteed in treaties, we gain some ground," Chief Hare continued. "We should take what we gain because there will be some improvement and then we will argue another day. The struggle will never be over, but at the same time we have to provide education and skills training to our band members with what we have."

"We have to proceed in this fashion because rejection of the Act will leave us where we are today; the new Act moves us forward and moving forward is what I intend to do," the M'Chigeeng chief continued. "M'Chigeeng will continue to improve its education system and will do so by relying upon the leadership of the chief and council, the leaders of education in his community. We are working to close the gap in education funding and the achievements of our students. The education system we have now is in the top four in Ontario and soon we will be number one."

"If we don't get there, we are not going to blame the national chief; we will blame ourselves," he added.

The AFN met Monday to discuss an interim leader or even elections in July.

"There is a positive in that now is a good time to take a good look at the AFN structure and how it's running, because it's not operating the way it is supposed to," Chief Madahbee said, explaining that the AFN should be there to serve member nations, and not Indian Act reserves.

"I've been in the business for 40 years and it's not the first time we've had challenges," the grand council chief added. "The real true power is in the communities and not the AFN."

End game in sight for Manitoulin craft brewery Split Rail

by Michael Erskine

KAGAWONG—Plans to start up a craft brewery on Manitoulin Island took a massive leap forward with the successful completion of a crowdsourcing campaign on Kickstarter.com by Split Rail Brewery.

This was the second kick at the can for Split Rail Brewery on Kickstarter, as an ambitious first goal of raising $55,000 fell short by about $20,000 in the early spring. The new goal of $20,000 was easily surpassed, however, as by deadline on April 24 the Split Rail Brewery campaign had reached $23,806 from 152 beer aficionados.

Entrepreneurs Andrea Smith and Eleanor Charlton toured a potential temporary waterfront site in Kagawong with an eye to ramping up a small scale operation this year.

"We are amazed by and thankful for all the support of the Split Rail project and its

The Kagawong marina may be Split Rail Brewery's temporary home starting this summer.

KickStarter campaign," said Ms. Smith. "We didn't really know what to expect going into the process but ultimately we are very pleased with the result, not only because it generated a sizeable sum of funding to help us lift Split Rail off the ground, but also because the past few months confirm that there is widespread and genuine support for such a venture on Manitoulin."

Although the final details have not been completely worked out on the startup location, the project appears to be well on its way to reality.

"It is all still up in the air as it is all under negotiation, and they need to jump through a whole bunch of regulatory hoops to get there, but the site they are looking to start up operations is located on the waterfront," admitted Billings Mayor Austin Hunt. "It would be seasonal, at least to start, as it is not a year-round location. We would have to haul the sewage away because it would be too much for our small boater lagoons and they would have to pay for the cost of that too."

A permanent home will require a much larger investment, noted Mayor Hunt. "But they would be looking at starting up a small operation there until they had all the funds lined up for the larger location," he said. "Of course, this is all really up to them."

A number of Billings councillors had indicated during discussion at the council table their interest in attracting the brewery to locate in Kagawong, noting the cache of having a craft brewery located near the waterfront could prove to be a great attraction to their community's waterfront and marina.

"But we will have to discuss what they would be willing to pay and what we would be willing to accept in order to make that work out for everyone," said Mayor Hunt. "That is something that needs to be worked out by our staff and the people who want to build the brewery."

Billings museum seeks historic photos as it gears up for 2014 season

by Michael Erskine

KAGAWONG—Visions of wedding bells and sepia prints are dancing in the heads of Old Mill Heritage Centre (Billings Museum) curator Rick Nelson and the members of the museum committee.

"I am always looking for pictures," said Mr. Nelson in issuing the call for historic photographs of the Billings area. "We have a lot in our archives that haven't been seen in a while, but it would be great to complement that with something new."

He has found a treasure trove of old photographs in the Manitoulin History Facebook site hosted by Now and Then author Petra Wall. "But a lot of that stuff comes out of Little Current and Assiginack," he said. "I am trying to frame things from Billings."

While the family photos are of great interest, "sometimes it is what is in the background that is most interesting to other people," said Mr. Nelson. "What it is they are standing in front of, old stores, an old mill or factory, that historical record shows how previous generations lived and worked."

In addition to pictorial displays, the Old Mill Heritage Centre is once again hosting its very popular historical wedding gowns display for the third time.

Museum committee member Diane Fraser of Kagawong has been working diligently to put the finishing touches on this year's display, building on the success that the display has seen in its last two outings.

"It has been very popular," she said. "People have been thoroughly enjoying it."

Ms. Fraser was drawn into the wedding gown dis-

The 'Old Mill' in the Old Mill Heritage Centre becomes clear in this undated photograph of the Kagawong lumber mill in full swing production. Old photographs contain a wealth of historical information that can inform our understanding of both our history and our environment. The Old Mill Heritage Centre is seeking historic photographs of the Billings area for display at the museum.

play through her own family. "My mom was moving out of her house and I was helping her to get ready to move when I came across her wedding gown and asked her what she planned to do with it," she recalled.

From there she began asking other people about their wedding gowns and if they would lend them to the museum for the season.

The oldest dress to go on display up until now is from 1911 and the display illustrates the changing (and durability) of wedding fashions through the past century on Manitoulin. "Often we have a picture of the bride and groom and the date of the wedding to go with the gown," she said.

"This year's theme is 'Wedding Fashions Through the Decades' and we plan to have eight to nine different dresses on display," she said. She described the wedding gown project as a labour of love. "It is very nice to talk to the people who own the wedding gowns as they look back on a very happy time in their lives," she said. "It is also wonderful for their family and friends to be able to come and share the memories."

The Old Mill Heritage Centre opens unofficially on the Victoria Day weekend when it opens for the weekends, but the seven-day a week schedule begins on July 1.

Self-care symposium focusses on front line mental health and addictions workers

by Alicia McCutcheon

LITTLE CURRENT—Next Wednesday and Thursday, May 14 and 15, the Manitoulin Hotel and Conference Centre will play host to a knowledge symposium titled 'Self Care - A Tool Towards Building Capacity' from the people of the M'Chigeeng Raising the Spirit Mental Wellness Team.

The conference begins on Wednesday morning with a keynote address from Waneek Horn-Miller, a Mohawk from Kahnawake, who, during the 1990 Oka crisis was stabbed by a Canadian soldier's bayonet, causing a turning point in her life. Ms. Horn-Miller is perhaps best known for her 2000 co-captainship of the Canadian Olympic women's water polo team and has since become a First Nations rights activist and acts as the Assembly of First Nations IndigenACTION Ambassador. Following Ms. Horn-Miller's address, attendees have among eight different workshops to choose from among them 'designing workshops that enhance health and wellness,' 'the four needs to a healthy life' and 'laughter yoga' that continue on into the afternoon.

The following day, Thursday, workshops begin again at 10 am and continue until 3:30 pm with keynote speaker for the day Brenda Restoule beginning the day's proceedings. Ms. Restoule is a psychologist who works for the Nipissing First Nation and was instrumental in getting the Raising the Spirit pilot project off the ground.

Carianne Agawa, Raising the Spirit program coordinator, explained that the term self-care is to take care of oneself and let go of things in order to move forward, both for themselves and the people for whom they are caring. The conference, she said, is geared toward front line workers who deal with mental health and addictions.

"We often have unhealthy individuals trying to make other people healthy, but the clients just don't buy it," Ms. Agawa said.

She noted that while the spiritual and mental aspects of care of a patient are number one, physical activity is lacking while it is proven that exercise helps with depression and post-traumatic stress disorder, which a portion of this conference will address.

The symposium will conclude on Thursday evening with entertainment by well-known comedians Ron Kanutski and Patrick Cheechoo and Juno award winning First Nations blues band Digging Roots. All are encouraged to attend with a canned goods collection at the door in lieu of a cover charge.

Children's Community Services to leave Little Current Post Office but stay in town, says org. rep

by Robin Burrige

LITTLE CURRENT—Children's Community Services will be moving from their present Little Current Post Office location soon, but a representative for the organization says the service will remain in Little Current.

"We are in the midst of discussions with the municipality (the Northeast Town)," said Director of Corporate Services for Child and Family Centre Don Malette. "No formal decisions have been made, but the municipality has provided notice that, for their own reasons, they will be seeking our currently occupied office space (in the Little Current Post Office building at 14 Water Street)."

Mr. Malette further explained that although the municipality has provided the organization with notice, they are working with Children's Community Services to help them find a new office space in Little Current.

"The municipality has been actively helping us seek another facility in Little Current," continued Mr. Malette. "Our lease is up mid-May, but the municipality realizes that it may take some time for us to find a new location and is working with us."

The Expositor received an anonymous letter last month which stated, "Town of NEMI (the Northeast Town) does not like children. They have given Children Services six weeks notice to vacate their offices."

In regards to the letter, Mr. Malette responded, "That is certainly not the impression I was left with during my dealings with the municipal contact Dave Williamson."

"We would prefer to stay in our current office, but we understand they require the additional facilities and, as I said, they are working with us to help us find a new office space."

The Northeast Town recently renovated a large portion of the Little Current Post Office, creating the new Artisan Incubator and Technology Centre and town office, moving from its old location on Manitowaning Road.

Town CAO Dave Williamson explained to The Expositor that the municipality needed additional office space in the post office, leading to discussions with Children's Community Services to find a new office.

"We really need the additional office space downstairs (currently occupied by Children's Community Services) to create a space for students or interns and for the artisan incubator centre," said Mr. Williamson. "We also require the additional space upstairs for offices for public works and the events coordinator. It's about improving efficiency and service for the public."

"We have been working with Children's Community Services to find them a new space," continued Mr. Williamson. "They provide a great service and are important to our community. We are currently looking at options."

The Little Current Business Improvement Area (BIA) was pleased to hear that the organization would be remaining in the community, as chair Debby Turner explained that the organization not only provides an integral service, but also foot-traffic to downtown businesses.

Call before you go if you suspect measles, SDHU urges

SUDBURY—One case of confirmed measles is currently being investigated by the Sudbury and District Health Unit (SDHU). This case is the first in the district since 1997. Residents are reminded that measles is a highly contagious disease and the virus that causes it spreads very easily. The SDHU and Health Sciences North are reminding you to consider your health and the health of others before seeking medical attention.

"If you suspect that you or your child has measles, it is very important that you call your health care provider before going to their office, clinic or any hospital emergency department," said Dr. Penny Sutcliffe, Sudbury and District Medical Officer of Health. "Let them know that you suspect measles. The health care provider can then take precautions in their office to prevent the potential spread to others patients." Please do not show up unannounced.

Symptoms of measles include: high fever, cough and runny nose, watery, red, and irritated eyes, sensitivity to light, small white spots in the mouth and a red blotchy rash that starts on the head and face, then spreads to the rest of the body.

Other viruses can cause symptoms that are similar to measles. Most people are vaccinated against measles and are protected. However, if you are unsure of your vaccination status or that of your children, please talk to your health care provider or contact the Health Unit and make sure your immunizations are up to date.

"If you suspect that you may have measles, we'd encourage you to first contact your health care provider to seek medical advice before you consider coming to the Emergency Department," says Dr. Rob LePage, Medical Director of HSN's Emergency Department. "If you do plan to visit a health-care provider, call in advance so that the necessary precautions can be taken. The emergency department does have protocols in place to deal with infectious disease."

People arriving at the ER with symptoms of measles are asked to remain outside the ER, if possible, while the person accompanying them seeks medical personnel to provide an assessment. You are also asked to avoid contact with other patients and visitors.

People who have had two doses of the measles vaccine, or who have had measles in the past, are protected from measles. Most people born before 1970 are likely immune because of previous measles infection.

For more information about measles or immunization, visit www.sdhu.com or call the Health Unit at 705-522-9200. In addition, Telehealth Ontario offers free, confidential health advice or general health information from a Registered Nurse 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 1-866-797-0000.

Central Manitoulin Council Notes

Community Improvement Program applications approved

Two motions to approve applications were brought forward to council from the Community Improvement Plan Evaluation Committee by Councillor Bev Cannard Pearson. A motion to approve an application for an amount of $2,450 (CIP 2013-08), seconded by Councillor Derek Stephens, for North Channel Financial Services and another motion, seconded by Councillor Ted Taylor, to approve an application in the amount of $2,900 (CIP 2013-09) for Westwind Consulting, were carried.

Councillor Patricia MacDonald questioned why the applications were not brought forward in 2013 as indicated by the application number. CAO/Clerk Ruth Frawley indicated that the program funds for 2013 were exhausted and the applications were deferred to the 2014 budget year. "They were made in 2013," she said, "but we had spent all the money."

"How much did we have in the program?" asked Councillor Stephens.

"We had $35,000," confirmed Councillor Cannard Pearson, who noted that the program still has funds.

"I think the program has been very successful," noted Mayor Gerry Strong. "Eventually we get the money back through increased assessments."

"The program was a new thing for us," said Councillor Cannard Pearson. "It is still a learning curve for our community."

The Community Improvement Plan provides relief for businesses that make improvements to their businesses, facades and other upgrades to improve the impression given by the community to visitors and customers with recovery of the reduced taxes anticipated through the taxes assessed collected in future years on the increased value of the properties.

2014 annual council work plan approved

Councillor Patricia MacDonald moved a motion from the Finance and Administration Committee that the 2014 annual council work plan be approved. The motion to accept the work plan was seconded by Councillor Bev Cannard Pearson.

"We had delivered the work plan for discussion before coming up with the final plan," said Councillor MacDonald. "This plan reflects what we wanted to do."

"This has been very good," said Councillor Derek Stephens. "Staff has had their goals and accomplished pretty much everything that the council has wanted to do. I put that down to good leadership," he added, nodding toward Mayor Gerry Strong.

"Thank you, Derek," laughed Mayor Strong, "but the staff has really been the ones that deserve the credit."

"I am happy we are moving ahead with the waste portion of the plan," said Councillor Cannard Pearson. "I hope future councils carry that work forward."

"They will not have any choice with some of it," rejoined Mayor Strong.

Long Term Service Awards approved

Council approved a motion from the Finance and Administration Committee, moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald and seconded by Councillor Ted Taylor, that the municipality approve the Long Service Award Policy.

"We felt that we should be recognizing the long service of our employees and we came up with something that we felt would work," said Councillor MacDonald.

"Who are the oldest, 35 years?" asked Councillor Taylor.

"Plus," replied CAO/Clerk Ruth Frawley. "We have some with 38 years."

"We have to be certain that they don't interpret this as a going away gift," joked Councillor Bev Cannard Pearson.

A second motion moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald, seconded by Councillor Derek Stephens, recommended that in this first year of the awards council present the awards to the qualified staff at a staff appreciation night and then at the second council meeting in June for every year thereafter.

"We did not want to not recognize people just because this is a new program," noted Councillor MacDonald. "We decided to recognize people in five year increments to make sure staff know how much we appreciate their hard work and dedication."

"The success of council and the municipality depends very much on the municipality's staff," said Mayor Gerry Strong. "It is they who keep the roads nice and clean and who collect the taxes so we can pay the bills. This is a way we can show that we appreciate the work that they do."

Providence Bay interpretive centre renamed

A Finance and Administration Committee recommendation to rename the Providence Bay Interpretive Centre the Providence Bay Discovery Centre was moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald and seconded by Councillor Derek Stephens.

"It was suggested during the first meeting of the interpretive centre committee that we move the focus onto the exhibits," said Councillor MacDonald. "There are some fantastic displays going in. They are a more interactive type of display. In keeping with the new model it is fitting for the centre to be renamed the Discovery Centre."

"Hats off to Amanda and the committee," said Councillor Stephens. "It is going to be beautiful. I encourage everyone to go to see the new displays."

The changes will include changing the sign on the building, but the cost will be largely absorbed by the replacement of the current sign, which needed to be refurbished in any event, noted Councillor Gloria Haner.

Council joins push for Planning Board changes

Council passed a motion, moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald and seconded by Councillor Derek Stephens, that the municipality write to the Manitoulin Planning Board to inform them that the municipality would be in favour of using the weighted assessment approach to voting when it is requested to be used, but to otherwise continue with the one vote-one member municipality/unorganized township method otherwise.

"We were asked to consider some kind of resolution with voting," said Councillor MacDonald. "We looked at the various scenarios. For the most part the current system works well, but there are times when you would want weighted assessment."

Volunteer labour policy passed

A Finance and Administration Committee recommendation was moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald and seconded by Councillor Ted Taylor that the municipality pass a policy on volunteer labour on municipal capital projects.

...Central Manitoulin Council Notes

"We often have volunteers coming forward to do work on our buildings," noted Councillor MacDonald. "The policy changes include that there has to be a definite completion date (for the volunteer work project)."

Municipality joins MICA recommendation

A recommendation from the Finance and Administration Committee that the municipality become a member of the Manitoulin Island Cycling Advocates (MICA) bicycling advocacy group was moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald and seconded by Councillor Gloria Haner.

"This was in response to a request from MICA that we would show our support," said Councillor MacDonald. "They said the best way we could do that would be by becoming a member."

The cost of membership was $50.

"I think they are doing a great job," said Councillor Derek Stephens. "They are providing a great service to our community. I know they are working very hard to promote the paved shoulders and bike paths and encouraging people to come to Manitoulin for their cycling tours."

Council donation supports Manitoulin United Fish and Game Club

A Finance and Administration Committee recommendation to donate $200 to the United Fish and Game Clubs of Manitoulin was moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald and seconded by Councillor Gloria Haner.

"We have often donated to this organization," said Councillor MacDonald. "We asked them to send us some information on what it is they do—and they sent us a lot of information. They are almost totally funded through donation. Because we have a strong interest in the health of the sportfishing opportunities in our municipality, as do our businesses as well, we felt it was a good donation to make."

"It is unfortunate that fish and game clubs that do the majority of work with the lakes have to do this work with little or no provincial funding," said Councillor Derek Stephens. "The government comes out with nice graphs and charts, but it is up to private groups and municipalities to stock our lakes. I wish we could give them more money. It gives our tourism industry an incredible lift."

"I agree with you Derek," said Mayor Gerry Strong. "Maybe you will want to make a motion."

"I will make a motion," replied Councillor Stephens. "Thirty-eight bucks for a fishing licence, but none of that money seems to come back to our local lakes."

"They are a very good group and very well supported locally," noted Councillor Bev Cannard Pearson.

"Manitoulin Streams is a fantastic group," added Councillor Stephens. "They do get some support, but I wish they would get more government support."

Cheque register of $596,168.08 approved

Council passed a Finance and Administration Committee recommendation, moved by Councillor Patricia MacDonald and seconded by Councillor Ted Taylor, to approve the cheque register in the amount of $596,168.08, without comment.

Minimum tax rate increased to $40

A Finance and Administration Committee recommendation to increase the minimum property tax rate from $30 to $40 was given its several readings and passed following a motion by Councillor Patricia MacDonald, seconded by Councillor Derek Stephens.

Mayor Gerry Strong objected to the motion. "This is a 25 percent tax increase that targets one particular property owner," he said. "How many properties are there in that package? 2,500?" he asked. "At $10 apiece that is a big annual increase."

"This would be close to what other municipalities charge," said Councillor MacDonald.

"It has been, what, 20 years since the last increase?" asked Councillor Stephens.

"My concern is the administrative costs," noted Councillor Gloria Haner. "How often do we mail the owners of these properties?"

"Usually about twice a year," responded CAO/Clerk Ruth Frawley.

"I think those costs add up," said Councillor Haner. "That is about $20,000 a year."

"There hasn't been an increase in so many years," agreed Councillor Bev Cannard Pearson. "People in the general public don't want to subsidize anyone's tax bill."

Council accepts snowplow tender

A motion from the Public Works Committee to accept a tender of $240,070.76, taxes included, from Cambrian Ford for the supply of a Western Star truck with Viking snowplow equipment was moved by Councillor Ted Taylor and seconded by Councillor Derek Stephens.

"We had seven different pieces of equipment (submitted in the tender)," explained Councillor Taylor. Although the recommended bid was slightly higher than the lowest, he noted that the recommended equipment is the same as that already owned by the municipality and that would result in considerable savings in the parts that had to be kept on hand. "One set of spares would do for all of the plows," he said.

"This is below budget?" queried Mayor Gerry Strong.

"Yes it is," replied CAO/Clerk Ruth Frawley.

"The difference between the lowest bid and the next lowest was about $150," supplied Councillor Patricia MacDonald. "So it is not a large amount."

Sheppard and Son win boat launch contract

A motion from the Public Works Committee to accept a $117,291.40, plus taxes, tender from Sheppard and Son for the construction of the new Monument Road boat launch, with additional unbudgeted amounts coming from the reserves budget, if necessary, was moved by Councillor Ted Taylor and seconded by Councillor Gloria Haner.

"It is nice to see this move forward," said Councillor Taylor.

"Sheppard and Sons were the lowest tender by far," said Councillor Pat MacDonald.

"I have been one of the biggest supporters of getting this boat launch back up and running," said Councillor Derek Stephens.

"This is a safety issue. This will alleviate a lot of problems, possibly save a life." He noted that the tender will come in under the engineering estimates.

Calvin Pearson and Son awarded Noland Drain tender

A recommendation from the Public Works Committee to accept a $41,147.50 tender for the maintenance work on the Noland Drain from Calvin Pearson and Son Excavating and Haulage was moved by Councillor Ted Taylor and seconded by Councillor Gloria Taylor.

The tender was the lowest bid, noted Councillor Taylor.

"One of the things this council has been successful at doing has been to identify the drains that need to have maintenance done," said Councillor Derek Stephens.

"We have a five-year rotation in keeping the drains clear," noted Councillor Haner. "If we maintain them all the time, we will not be hit with some big project later on."

"Calvin Pearson and Son's work history with us has been good too," said Councillor Patricia MacDonald.

Engineering services tender accepted

A recommendation from the Public Works Committee to accept the schedule of rates submitted by Tulluch Engineering for municipal services be accepted was moved by Councillor Ted Taylor and seconded by Councillor Bev Cannard Pearson.

"Their's was the lowest tender for engineering services," said Councillor Taylor. "This may help speed up some projects."

"I think Tulluch Engineering offers a well-rounded suite of engineering services," said Councillor Derek Stephens. "I think we will get a better bang for our buck this way."

Under the motion, the municipality will not tender every engineering service need, referring instead to the company which won the tender and applying the cost of services per their lowest bid in this competition.

Justice for all in Wikwemikong High School Media Literacy

As a part of the new unit covering Media Literacy, the Wikwemikong Grade 8 class visited the satellite courthouse in Wikwemikong to watch the proceedings of a trial and had the opportunity to talk to Justice Villeneuve, two lawyers and the court clerk. The students had completed prior learning about the Canadian Justice System and completed a role play about a mock trial. The students are going to develop a film for media literacy where they will act out a trial with each class member playing a role in the judicial system. Both the lawyers and Justice Villeneuve gave the students an excellent overview of the judicial system and it was an eye-opener for the Grade 8 students that emphasized how important it is to stay in line with the law.

Thank you from the family of Max the beloved four-legged member of the Hoffman family. A dog who I felt was almost human. He was so intelligent and was loved by all who knew him. Unfortunately Max passed away a couple of days after being mauled by another dog. We comfort ourselves now that he is no longer suffering from that traumatic attack and has gone to animal heaven. Thanks to all the wonderful supportive people who left messages on facebook, email and telephone. Thank you for the monetary support, it certainly helped with the veterinary expenses. Thank you from Suzanne and Rachel Hoffman and Ruby Lavigne.

SLOSS--In memory of our Mom, Marina J. Sloss, (December 11, 2009) this Mother's Day. This is our fifth Mother's Day without you Mom. The shock has subsided. The reality has sunk in. The loneliness is as strong as it has always been and the love has only grown stronger with each passing day. There have been so many things we've wanted to tell you, Mom, but most of all we wanted to say thank you. Thank you for being there for us always, even though we didn't always make that easy. Thank you for teaching us how to cook, keep a nice home, knit, sew and all of those other things we took for granted. Most of all Mom, thank you for teaching us to care for others ahead of ourselves, to be kind and compassionate and to respect the people around us. We celebrate you and feel so blessed to have had you as our Mom. We were lucky, even if it wasn't for long enough. We read a quote recently: A raindrop landing on your cheek is a kiss from someone that lives in Heaven and is watching over you...we are counting on it Mom. Love you to the moon and back. Nancy, Debbie, Beverly and families.

Dancing into spring

The Classic School of Dance performs Pinocchio

M'CHIGEENG—This year's Classic School of Dance ballet production of Pinocchio brought the classic story to life with dance and humour.

The performance entertained an audience of over 400 on Sunday, May 4 at Manitoulin Secondary School with a mixture of classical and modern music. Choreographed and directed by ballet teacher Maja Mielonen, the production included over 50 dancers from across Manitoulin, ranging from 3 to 16 years of age. The success of the show represents months of training, planning and preparation by dancers, parents and volunteers.

The classical story about temptation, conscience and dreams coming true was expressed with grace and vitality. Clock figurines come to life, puppets are animated, and children are turned into donkeys. Ultimately, Geppeto and Pinocchio find their happy ending and goodness triumphs.

The costumes, prepared by parents and grandparents, added colour and flare to the familiar plot, unique music, and skilled dancing. Lighting, artwork, set design and musical selections amplified the overall experience of the show thanks to the behind the scenes expertise of Guy Nielen, Blanche Campbell, Dawn Wall, Kyla Young, Bettina Turner, Rachel Hoffman, Brynn Kylie, Daniel Chapman and Laury Cranston.

The full-house audience was impressed by the technical skill and expressiveness of the performers. The company also performed the show for Lakeview Public School, Central Manitoulin Public School, Assiginack Public School, C.C. MacLean Public School, and the Mniidoo Mnising Anishinabek Kinoomaage-gamig Program on Tuesday to bring ballet to younger audiences.

The energy and commitment of everyone involved made the 19th production by the Classic School of Dance a resounding artistic success for Manitoulin Island.

Tekummah Council Notes

Manitoulin Tourism Association presentation

Manitoulin Tourism Association (MTA) President Ron Berti and manager Shelba Millette attended April's council meeting as part of an Island-wide tour to present MTA's new marketing strategy. Mr. Berti talked about travelling through Europe with Deba-jehmujig Theatre Group members and realizing that while everyone knew where the Great Lakes were, they generally hadn't heard of Manitoulin Island. "But it's easy to locate Manitoulin when you see the lakes," he said, unveiling new promotional materials that highlight the Great Lakes. The look is timeless and lush with deep green and jewel tones, and all marketing materials will maintain the same look and feel.

"The reason we're doing this," Mr. Berti said, "changing direction, is to address a larger change towards cultural tourism. Cultural tourism can mean many things, but related to Manitoulin we have two different cultures here. Culture is the way we live our lives. The Island is full of people with knowledge and skills from the past—we really haven't changed that fast, so we still have access to all that knowledge and people are travelling to find that." Mr. Berti explained the MTA strategy as to better define the Island through promotion of four cultural regions. "This is just a framework," he said. "The regions need to be filled in with their history and character. We need to think about where that story is going to be told. We need to bring stories back to give character to the regions." The strategy assumes that travellers will spend more time visiting the four regions, or returning to visit regions they have missed.

Mr. Berti also emphasized the inclusiveness of this new strategy. "We're working on new membership packages, new outreach packages," he said. "We're open to reinterpreting membership categories to include churches, halls, cemeteries."

Funding opportunities for South Baymouth marina and harbour

Fran Nadon from FedNor and Esther Spadzinski from the Ministry of Northern Development and Mines (MNDM) attended Tekummah's April council meeting to provide information about funding opportunities with their respective agencies. Reeve Gary Brown introduced the guests. "We've had many concerns as most townships do after they've completed their asset management plans. Let's start with the harbour project."

Ms. Nadon explained, "What we don't do is invest dollars for core maintenance and municipal infrastructure. We'll look at a broader development plan. The completed project should increase the overall use of the marina. So how can you take what you're going to invest and use that?"

"The municipality needs to be responsible for 10 to 12 percent of the cost," Ms. Spadzinski said. "The project would be limited by municipal resources." The project could occur across multiple years, she explained. "If you look at multiple years, and can spend $20,000 per year, you could leverage $200,000 per year with that."

"Waterfront development has been consistently funded by FedNor," said Ms. Nadon. "You have to come to that conclusion as a community, but there is opportunity." The application is a two-stage process, but it does take some time. A time frame of three or four months is a fast time frame. Stage 1 of the process establishes eligibility but "waterfront development is pretty much a shoo-in," said Ms. Spadzinski.

The programs work well together, they said. FedNor can provide advances and NOHFC pays on costs incurred.

"Our other issues are a shortfall for the Government Road bridge and infrastructure," Mr. Brown said. "We have seven bridges, trucks to upgrade."

"That's the reality across Canada," said Ms. Nadon.

Neither guest anticipated any announcement for new capital funding any time soon.

Tekummah Triangle Seniors

The Tekummah Triangle Seniors received some grant money to assist with insulation, doors, and the floor of the community hall.

Museum

Dick Bowerman, Hank Hyyatianen and Lori Thompson were added as Little Schoolhouse and Museum board members.

Asset Management Issues

Council will take time to think about earlier discussions with FedNor and MNDM representatives regarding potential marina project funding before looking at an application. Councillors Eric Russell and Paul Bowerman were concerned about costs for the Government Road bridge project and whether it should be a priority. Costs have already been incurred for an environmental assessment and legal fees. There will be another meeting on the bridge project when all financial information is available.

Seized Property Management Directorate refused meeting

Danielle Pilon, case officer with the Seized Property Management Directorate, refused a meeting with council as the issue is still under court review. She would be "uncomfortable" with a meeting at this time, she said. The Directorate was appointed to control the property that contains the Michael's Bay cemetery.

Canada Post Response to Petition

A petition signed by 151 residents protesting the reduction in hours at the post offices in Tekummah and South Baymouth received a response from Canada Post Corporation's Dale Ratelle, Local Area Superintendent, Sault Ste. Marie. Mr. Ratelle wrote, "A careful review of our operations confirmed that very few people use the Tekummah Post Office on Saturday, and we are modifying our retail network across the country—in rural and urban areas alike—to reflect current traffic volumes."

"We have a mandate to provide affordable and universal postal service to all Canadians while remaining financially self-sustaining. As an organization that operates solely on the revenue generated by the sale of our products and services, we need to look at our costs. We need to make smart choices to maintain local service without becoming a burden on taxpayers."

Councillor Paul Bowerman expressed concern about changes in summer usage with the influx of seasonal residents. "There is no comparison," he said.

Council moved to "participate in the process to preserve our Tekummah and South Baymouth Post Offices should they be affected by Canada Post proposed reduction of hours per week."

Fire Chief's Report

There were no fire calls in March. There were two practices with an average attendance of 13 members. Training is moving along nicely, with 12 members signed off on the forcible entry module and 13 members on the size up module. SPI Health and Safety began the fire extinguisher inspection for the township, but due to weather and road conditions the inspector arrived too late in the day to complete all of the necessary buildings. He will return at a later date. Several units were taken to Sudbury to be hydro tested, one required recharging, and several more units will need to be replaced. Several members attended a Manitoulin Fire Fighters Association meeting in Gore Bay and signed up to be called if there is a need for an Honour Guard service on the Island. Fire Chief Jeff Wilson addressed council's concern about parking in front of fire hydrants in South Baymouth. He suggested residents be given pamphlets they could place on offending vehicles as a way to educate people about parking in front of hydrants.

Council passed a resolution to have signage installed on the fire hydrants at issue.

4th Annual Manitoulin Passage Ride

Council approved a request for support for the 4th annual Manitoulin Passage Ride.

Georgian Bay Cycling Route

Council moved to provide support to the Georgian Bay Cycling Route for the addition of the 10th Sideroad and the Government Road as part of this trail route.

Manitoulin Injury Prevention Coalition

Council approved a $150 donation towards towels to be distributed to township children who attend swimming lessons in Tekummah.

District Services Board

Council agreed that affordable housing and the lack of a national housing strategy are of concern and provided a resolution of support for the Manitoulin-Sudbury District Services Board (DSB) in writing to the Honourable Jason Kenney, Minister of Employment and Social Development, "to stress that it is imperative the federal government come back to the table and sit down with provincial/territorial housing ministers to work on a long-term plan that addresses the need for housing across the country."

A copy of the resolution and accompanying letter will also be shared with the Honourable Linda Jeffrey, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, Michael Mantha, MPP Algoma-Manitoulin, Carol Hughes, MP Algoma-Manitoulin-Kapusking, Federation of Canadian Municipalities, Federation of Northern Ontario Municipalities, Northern Ontario Service Deliverers Association, Ontario Municipal Social Services Association and DSB member municipalities.

Quilt Show kicks off Kagawong Daffodil Festival

by Sharon Jackson
KAGAWONG—It won't be long now until the lovely yellow daffodils will be in full bloom along the roadside and boardwalk leading into Ontario's Prettiest Village of Kagawong.

Members of the Economic Development Committee and other volunteers in the community planted hundreds of bulbs three years ago. When Sharon Alkenbrack, chair of EDC, approached the Happy Quilters to see if they would be interested in having a show, a partnership was born.

Dozens of lovely quilts were on display at the Park Centre this past weekend, the oldest made by Nellie Hilliard back in 1950 as a gift for Candy Tracy.

Throughout the weekend visitors were able to see a lap quilt in progress as several ladies put stitches into the fabric. The lucky recipient of the creation is Barb Bright's son who makes his home in England.

Ms. Bright, Jan Bainbridge and Charlene Chambers' daffodil wall quilt, designed for this event, hung on the doors for all to see as they entered the room. Quilts adorned the walls and tables during the two-day event.

Many varieties were on display: some embroidered, tied, appliqued or hand stitched while others were done by machine. Ms. Chambers, who has been quilting for 35 years, greeted visitors and showed them the many quilts created by talented seamstresses on the Island.

As members of the Happy Quilters, shared Jacquie Gordon, "we work on our own quilts and also make them for charity or to be given to cancer patients in the community."

Pat Pepper, whose quilt was raffled off at Christmas in Kagawong last November (among other items generously donated by members of the Happy Quilters), creates her keepsakes on a hoop and has made among others a 'Story of the Underground Railroad,' which was one of the many quilts on display.

Attendance at the show was very good with viewers coming by right up until 4 pm on Saturday and more on Sunday. "Proceeds from the show will go towards the purchase of daffodils to plant in the fall," shared Ms. Alkenbrack.

Ms. Chambers said she was "very pleased" with the number of people who came to admire the handiwork of the many talented quilters on the Island.

Members of EDC include Anna Aelick, Sharon Alkenbrack, Jenna Carter, Austin Hunt, Anita Lalonde, Roger Lloyd, Brian Parker (Council representative), Rick Rusk and

Manitoulin will not be guaranteed 40 Jobs for Youth positions

by Alicia McCutcheon

MANITOULIN—The subject of the Jobs for Youth program, which pairs youth in at-risk communities with summer employment, was again brought forward at the April meeting of the Manitoulin-Sudbury District Services Board (DSB) with Manitoulin not being granted special favour.

Donna Moroso, director of integrated social services with the DSB, explained to the board by way of background that the Jobs for Youth program had its beginnings in Ontario's Youth Strategy, launched in 2006. The strategy was in response to "government concern regarding the escalating rate of youth violence in urban communities," Ms. Moroso explained. "The research pointed to diminished economic opportunity, early school leaving rates, youth unemployment rates and a variety of neighbourhood-level factors, including low community participation and socially disorganized neighbourhoods all as risk factors for youth violence."

Ms. Moroso told the board that two years later, in 2008, the government introduced the Summer Jobs for Youth program as part of the provincial government's Poverty Reduction Strategy, which she defined as "helping youth to overcome economic disadvantages and reach their potential by supporting them as they gain confidence, new skills and work constructively within their communities." The funding is delivered the Ministry of Child and Youth Services.

The strategy, she added, recognizes four populations of disadvantaged youth: youth living in underserved/at-risk communities (the category Manitoulin falls under); youth at risk of conflict with the law; youth at risk of re-offending; and youth who face identified barriers to employment.

The Jobs for Youth program was launched on Manitoulin, identified as an underserved/at-risk community, in 2009. The program was also delivered in Sudbury North, Sudbury East and LaCloche, but was administered by the Sudbury YMCA, she explained.

After hearing from some of the DSB's member municipalities where the program was administered through the YMCA, where a change was requested that the DSB act as administrator of the 40 allotted positions in these areas, the ministry agreed.

"The YMCA, the ministry and DSB have agreed that 40 student placements with an allocation funding totaling $165,985 would be adequate for the Sudbury East, Sudbury North and LaCloche areas based on the current limited ministry funding allocations," she said. "The Manitoulin Island numbers and funding allocation will not change as a result of this decision." This brings the total number of Jobs for Youth positions in the DSB to 80.

"As part of this transition, the YMCA and the DSB staff have worked cooperatively together to ensure that there is a work plan put in place for the smooth transition of the program from one service delivery agent to another," DSB CAO Fern Dominelli said. "The YMCA has been more than helpful with the DSB staff to ensure the shift is as seamless as possible."

While there was discussion of keeping Manitoulin Island's allotment of positions at 40, as it was in the past, DSB CAO explained that the 80 placements would now be distributed among the entire DSB area.

"We always placed children on the Island based on the child's priority," Mr. Dominelli said. "All applications will be based on the needs of that child, not where they live."

Miss Manitoulin Brooke Debassige shines at Miss North Ontario Pageant

by Robin Burrige

SUDBURY—Miss Manitoulin 2013 Brooke Debassige represented the Island at the 2014 Miss North Ontario Pageant this past weekend in Sudbury, and although Ms. Debassige wasn't crowned Miss North Ontario, she shined onstage and represented Manitoulin Island proudly.

"Miss North Ontario was a truly amazing experience," Ms. Debassige told The Expositor on Monday following the pageant. "I am very happy that I had the opportunity to attend and proudly represent Manitoulin Island. I would definitely recommend this pageant to any girl who wants to explore their own self-identity. I gained a new sense of confidence because Miss North isn't about beauty, it's about self-development and learning to accept and love your true self."

"Pageant President Cheryl Koza is an inspirational woman for putting this wondrous event together and I am very grateful for all of the new friends I have made," continued Ms. Debassige.

Jessie Must of Sudbury District was crowned Miss North Ontario last Saturday night, after beating out 45 other girls from across the North who were judged on their volunteer and community work, personal interview with judges, public speaking, eveningwear and talent.

Ariana Kingerski of Lake Laurentian was named the first runner up, while second runner up was Mercedes Burrowes of Lockerby and third runner up was Hannah Simard of Wawa.

Through this year's pageant the Miss North Ontario 2014 delegates and the Miss North Ontario pageant committee raised $41,000 for the Northern Ontario Families of Children with Cancer (NOFCC), making the pageant's annual contributions to the charity since 2006 over $170,000.

Ms. Debassige grew up in M'Chigeeng, eventually moving to Hanmer with her family, but still calls Manitoulin home.

She has just completed her first year at Carleton

University studying Criminology and Criminal Justice and will possibly be working in Ottawa for the summer for the federal government.

She plans to conclude her reign as Miss Manitoulin by helping to raise funds for the NOFCC and making it out to lots of Manitoulin events this summer.

Little Current junior activists join Monarch crusade

by Michael Erskine

LITTLE CURRENT—Little Current Public School early childhood educator Janet McCarville and her Kindergarten charges gathered before the Little Current Public School student body assembly recently to bring the plight of the monarch butterfly to the fore.

Monarch butterflies have been under tremendous stress in recent years as the combination of pesticides and a relentless war on the milkweed pod, the key to the iconic butterfly's amazing migration from Mexico to Manitoulin and beyond, have brought the once ubiquitous brightly coloured insect to the brink of disaster.

Ms. McCarville's class raised a pair of monarch butterflies from eggs garnered by the educator during an expedition to Providence Bay and hatched in the classroom terrarium, through the spinning of a chrysalis, to bidding the intrepid continental travellers safe flight to Mexico from the schoolyard last fall.

In studying the insects, the young students learned of the threats facing their tiny friends. With images displayed on a screen in the school gym, their tiny voices implored their older compatriots to do their part in helping the insects survive into the new millennium. The student's address to the assembly can be seen in its entirety online at The Expositor website www.manitoulin.ca. The plight of the monarch is being highlighted at Ontario Science Centres and in similar institutions across Canada in a film called 'The Flight of the Butterflies,' a trailer for which can be found at www.flightofthebutterflies.com.

I let Mum beat me a couple after the game!

Well since I jotted these few lines a heck of a busy time has passed. On Thursday Mum needed to shop and get some pills. We lunched at the Happy Moose. Not too long home when Sherry phoned. They were going to Mum's in Mindemoya for supper. Derek, Jodi and Tristin had arrived. On their journey to us they had spent time with their family, Tory, Amelia and Desmond and Declan. Also visited at Kim and Kathy's. The grandsons touching base again. Later that evening I visited with them at Sherry and Dave's. Friday Jodi, Sherry and I shopped the second hand spots and a yard sale. Had our supper at Carol's and Earl's Restaurant. The guys had gone visiting and to the camp. Shortly after six we all met at Lori's and Rick's for a celebration of her 50th birthday. Good music by Lori and Tristen after the birthday cake. A lovely visit with family and friends Elaine, Heather, Colleen, Reegan, Val, Bob, Judy, Cal, Susan and Simon. On Saturday we went to Sherry and Dave's for a ham and turkey dinner. Another full house. Lots of music, songs, cribbage games.

I had made stuff for the bake sale and our supper. I took in the Back Roads country music afternoon. Lots of dancers at this one, bid on some silent auction items (got a couple).

Sunday morning I helped a bit at the hall. The kitchen was busy and buzzing. Mum and I off to church. Our sermon was "I will follow Him." (Did you ever see Sister Act?) Great sermons and interaction always.

Well what a huge crowd at the hall to celebrate Brian Gleason's life. Some lovely tributes by family members and friends. It was nice to speak with the family. Mum and I sat with Loretta and Eleanor. Ben Lentir joined us until he had to sing his very beautiful songs. Derek and Tristin joined us. The tables were full.

Mum and I went to Sherry and Dave's. Cribbage again and again, after Derek, Jodi and Tris went to Colleen and John's. They had just returned from Petawawa. Sherry, Mum and I had some very exciting games. Sherry made a fifteen for eight, and a thirty for thirteen points and I still won. Some game! She had been a mile back.

Anyway, it's 11:10 and I've got most of this written up while stretched out in bed with an orange cat on top of me.

Hey, y'all, don't forget the Mother's Day Tea this Wednesday at 7 pm at the hall. They always have nice surprises for us all.

It was just beautiful the sky, a million glittering stars and a moon on its back (probably full of rain)

Monday morning—Frosty morning once again but clear. Looks like we're going to get sun!

I don't understand how everyone knows who I am? Met Vicky Griggs in Mindemoya, another of my readers. I always appreciate the positive comments. Thank you!

Laverna is back in town. She's the sweetest girl! Summer it is, I guess?

Darrel and Marlene winter holidayed, Lynn and Fred had been walking on a beach? Ours I think are still a mite on the icy side. Officially spring. I heard the Chi-Cheemaun floated in past the icebergs! Happy spring South Baymouth!

More sticks from the wind fell in the yards.

Daisy and Robert, what a beautiful job, the flower beds and all at the hall!

I should get going, much yard yet to rake. I did get more garbage/brush burned Friday morning. A truck load awaits yet! Burned and injured myself too. (sob)

Hello Vivian!

Have a great week all!

Providence Bay News and Notes

The pancake breakfast at the Coffee Club in Prov was a great success with a good turn out last Thursday. Harold and Shirley Dewar brought in some real maple syrup. Thank you.

Harold Arnold is now home from the hospital after surgery. Pat McFarlane is now transferred to Manitoulin Centennial Manor. Linda Gilchrist and Sharon Dewar visited with her before she was transferred and had a good time.

Grant Lewis from Sault Ste Marie was down for a visit and opened up his cottage for the summer. Harold Kirk has been transferred to Manitoulin Lodge.

We all hope Robbie McAllister is starting to feel better.

This Friday the Community of Christ Church in Providence Bay will be hosting their fourth annual youth dance. The dance is from 7 to 9 pm. All are welcome and a light lunch will be provided. Admission is free. Tell your friend about this dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Coe of Sault Ste Marie and the Slash area are here on the Island. Son Charles has been seriously ill. We hope he feels better soon. Please remember our seniors and veterans this week and have fun getting your gardens ready now that spring is finally here.

If you have any news please call me, Gloria, at 705-377-4449.

Spring Bay Rural Route

MAY 5—Today, Monday, is a very sunny day.

Happy Mother's Day to all mothers. I hope they all have a good day.

The Twilight Club held their April meeting on April 28 in the seniors' room at Providence Bay. After a delicious potluck noon meal, we had the roll call and discussed the June meeting. They decided to have a barbecue at the Popwich home in Lonely Bay.

They live straight south of my home.

Get well wishes to Harold Arnold. He is home now after having surgery in Sudbury.

The Dewars and others were out to Gore Bay on Tuesday to entertain at the nursing home. I was sorry I was unable to go as it was a nasty rainy day.

May is here and I hope it brings us better weather.

A lot of the snowbirds are back and it's nice to see them all.

Sheila and Ken Maeck were in Sudbury this weekend.

Thanks to all for the visits, phone calls, cards, and treats since I was in the hospital and coming home. Also thanks for the care I received while there. It was much appreciated. Erma McAllister.
