Rainbow Lodge at Wiikwemkoong breaks ground for new $5.9 million recovery centre

by Michael Erskine
WIKWEMKOONG—The smiles outshone the late summer sun as members of the Wiikwemkoong Unceded Territory gathered for a ground-breaking in preparation for the Seven Generations Healing Lodge. The healing lodge is the culmination of a vision that first began 24 years ago in response to a survey of community needs and was a result of collaborative efforts between a number of community services and programs.

The Seven Generations Healing Lodge will offer cultural programming, counselling supports and will support community members and families to deal with the impacts of trauma, but the final MINDEMOYA—Members of the Manitoulin North Shore Naval Veterans Association (MNSNVA) visited Mindemoya resident Allan Tustian recently to present him with a plaque celebrating his 100th birthday and the 35th anniversary of the organization.

The MNSNVA was formed in 1984 by a group of naval veterans from WWII, including Mr. Tustian, and peacetime. The organization is a unit of the Royal Canadian Naval Association and was named Club of the Year in 2008. Mr. Tustian had fallen at home and broken his collarbone and was therefore temporarily stationed at the Mindemoya Hospital, but that wasn't going to stop these gentlemen from honouring their comrade. The members present were President Bryan Chapelle, Vice-President-Island Roy Eaton and Secretary-Treasurer Bill Ranich.

Members of Mr. Tustian's family were on hand for the ceremony including his wife Alma, and daughter Marilyn of Mindemoya, as well as Mark of Calgary, John of Brooklin and grandson Mason. Another daughter, Jeanne Lefebvre of Massey, and Doug of Thunder Bay and Mike of Fenelon Falls round out the immediate family.

Marilyn shared a bit of the family's history, saying, "We get together every year for two weeks for the past 25 years. We were here for mom's 90th birthday. There were 35 of us here this year and we celebrate at Treasure Island, where we grew up."

Mr. Tustian is well-known for his naval service, but also for the outstanding work he has done over the years for those who have

Central council repairing Mindemoya arena, planning for new recreation centre

by Michael Erskine
CENTRAL MANITOULIN—A motion to move ahead with $30,000 in repairs to the Mindemoya arena was hotly debated in front of a standing room only audience gathered at the September 12 meeting of municipal council.

At issue were a number of factors, including the cost of the repairs, the future of the Mindemoya arena, the placement of a new chiller unit and a proposal to proceed with the planning of a new recreational complex to be cited in Mindemoya.

First up on the docket was the acceptance of a structural inspection report on the J.H. Burt Memorial Arena conducted by Tulloch Engineering dated August 13.

"It is a good report that outlines the do's and not's," said Mayor Richard Stephens, but he added that it was not highly detailed.

Councillor Derek Stephens

countered that the report was "not as detailed as I would have liked" but that the report was fairly detailed and "did steer us in the right direction as far as I could see."

The motion, moved by Council-

Social media is all abuzz with rumours of Tim Hortons but LC developer only confirms talks with two off-Island outlets

by Warren Schlote
LITTLE CURRENT—The internet rumour mill was in full production last week when a Facebook user submitted a post in the popular 'What's Doin on the Manitoulin' Facebook group about comments allegedly made by an employee at a Sudbury Tim Hortons.

"Was in Tim Hortons in Sudbury and heard the waitress say 'it's my last day. I'm going to be working at the new Tim Hortons in (Little Current). I thought she said February. I asked her where. She said near The Beer Store. So it must be a go," wrote group member Roslyn Taylor.

When contacted by The Expositor, Ms. Taylor expressed her hope that this story would fall out of public discussion. She said it brought out a lot of anger and aggression toward people that did not accomplish much, and said she felt a certain degree of poster's remorse because stirring up such discussion was not her

Council decides to maintain ownership of Wagg's Wood

by Michael Erskine

CENTRAL MANITOULIN—Council moved to affirm that it would retain ownership of the greenspace known as Wagg's Wood and further, that the municipality move forward with investigating how to develop and preserve the property. The motion was moved by Councillor Angela Johnston and seconded by Councillor Al Tribinevicius.

"There was an offer to council for a 99-year lease on that property," said Councillor Derek Stephens. "What happened with that? Would this impact the status quo?"

"Even if the property were to be leased, we would still own the property," said CAO Ruth Frawley.

Councillor Steve Shaffer questioned the use of the word "greenspace" in the motion, asking if the current zoning was residential hamlet.

"In the new Official Plan it is designated as 'open space'," said Mayor Richard Stephens. "It could still have a development plan, but that would need to accord with the Official Plan."

The motion then passed unopposed.

Nature Conservancy okay with careful Cockburn Garlon use

by Warren Schlote

COCKBURN ISLAND—Hydro One has announced that it will be applying herbicide along its right-of-way on Cockburn Island to control brush, with the spraying having begun earlier this week and running until the end of next week.

"On Cockburn Island, highly-trained technicians will be applying the product to select vegetation that could become hazardous and compromise system reliability and safety, largely along Hydro One corridors. Garlon is not applied near waterways and is contained to the site of application," read a statement from Hydro One spokesperson Richard Francella.

An ad placed in this newspaper starting last week stated that Hydro One was seeking to manage its non-compatible vegetation (woody brush) in the Township of Cockburn Island using brush saws, backpack sprayers containing Garlon RTU and off-road tracked vehicles that will minimize the brush's ability to regrow.

The ad also stated that crews would make every effort to preserve 'compatible' low-growing vegetation to help reduce future maintenance. This time of year was chosen so crews could ensure the lines remain reliable in advance of the winter season.

Earlier this year, the Nature Conservancy of Canada purchased an additional 1,400 acres of land in the heart of Cockburn Island, bringing its sum of protected land on that island up to 26,514 acres (10,730 hectares). Its ownership of more than 60 percent of Cockburn Island is intended in part to protect one of the largest in-tact hardwood forest ecosystems in Ontario.

Although herbicide use might at first glance appear to conflict with the conservancy's efforts to keep the land pristine, the organization said it can actually complement its conservation work.

"We prefer that any invasive species like buckthorn is taken out. We actively take it out on our property and we hope they do as well," said Vince Deschamps, program director for Midwestern Ontario with the Nature Conser-

MSS 50th-anniversary makeover well underway

by Warren Schlote

M'CHIGEENG—The main-floor halls of Manitoulin Secondary School (MSS) are in many ways unrecognizable due to a number of renovations that have either transformed or are in the process of transforming the 50-year-old school into a refreshed learning environment that reflects some modern trends.

"It's a two- to three-year renovation project and the first year has three or four phases. We're currently in phase three," said MSS principal Jamie Mohamed as he led The Expositor on a tour of some of his school's revamped spaces. The main office of the school has switched places with the adjacent guidance office and received a face-lift as part of the project.

The first stop on the tour sits immediately next to the main doors of the school, a bright gymnasium that has received all-new hardwood flooring, upgraded mounting infrastructure and a paint scheme that matches the school's scheme of black and gold. Even the lines on the gym floor speak to the school's colour scheme.

The centrepiece of the space is a massive mustang head, painted in a deep black and best viewed from the exercise space and balcony above the gym.

Out in the main hall lies a considerable amount of wood hoarding. This is where the third phase of the first-year project is taking place and the wood is serving as a safety barrier to protect the students and staff from the demolition taking place beyond.

This space undergoing construction is a three-part transparent room that is designed to enhance the student experience. The first room will be a designated space for smudging and holding small Anishinaabe ceremonies.

Behind it will be a large multipurpose community room that is up for the use of students, staff and community members. It will have a lounge-type feel and offer spaces to host meetings and presentations as well as being a place in which students can work on assignments.

To its rear will be a student resource centre that hosts staff members who are present to aid students with their academics.

Mr. Mohamed said the new three-part space will hopefully be completed by Christmas, in time for the school's annual awards night which takes place near the end of the calendar year. The awards night is typ-

The ongoing work is evident in places of the school but Mr. Mohamed said crews have diligently sealed off the work zones for the health and safety of staff and students.

Sean Ashby will be performing his original music at 7 pm Friday at the Park Centre.

Elemental Festival draws a star-studded lineup out to Kagawong

KAGAWONG—Next week marks the 2019 edition of the Elemental Festival in Kagawong, hosted by 4elements Living Arts, and with it a star-studded list of acts throughout the four-day event.

The festival will kick off on the evening of Thursday, September 26 at the Old Church on the Hill at 7 pm with opening ceremonies featuring the M'Chigeeng Ladies' Drum Group and featuring a concert by Ansley Simpson, a Toronto-based Anishinaabe singer-songwriter. Ms. Simpson has been nominated for two 2018 Indigenous Music Awards and won in the category of "Best New Artist." Her music has been described as having "lilting vocals, clear melodic sensibility, and intricate guitar playing."

On Friday, September 27, the Elemental Festival gets underway at the Park Centre with a Manitoulin Writers' Circle workshop with Ella Jane Myers of the Northern Initiative for Social Action which includes a guided walk of the Billings Connection Sculpture Trail. The trail includes six juried sculptures, which can be seen in the vicinity of the Bridal Veil Falls trail, and 32 historical plaques found throughout Billings Township.

The energy will continue into the night with Sean Ashby who will be bringing his eight guitars on stage for an evening of his original music starting at 7 pm, also at the Park Centre. Mr. Ashby's musical CV spans decades, and as one of North America's go-to guitarists for in-studio recording and touring bands, readers have probably heard him play already on their radios without ever knowing his name.

Saturday, September 28 is a busy day at the Kagawong Park Centre. The Festival begins at 10 am with a kids' turtle art work-

First Nations lead in tackling addictions and mental health issues

Addictions and the issues surrounding mental health and wellness do not recognize boundaries defined by race or religion, although it has been well established that some communities are more systemically challenged by root causes associated with those issues: poverty, isolation and discrimination.

But when it comes to proactively tackling addictions and mental health issues, First Nations communities and organizations are miles ahead of their non-Native counterparts, at least here on Manitoulin Island.

While there may be good works taking place behind closed doors in other communities, much of that work seems to be focussed more on conversations and networking between agencies, rather than concrete proactive action. Occasionally the doors are opened and a report slips out into the wild, but little concrete action to stem the tide seems to be taking place.

One example that springs readily to mind is the placement of sharps or needle disposal sites. Although needles are being found in parks and pathways across the region, needle collection sites appear to be largely confined to First Nation communities—the need for such facilities is far more pervasive than that.

The recent pushback witnessed against the location of addictions facilities within communities may be playing a role, as NIMBYism combines with a three monkey approach to the issue to impede concrete action. Currently, those who are non-Native and attempting to battle addictions (often through no fault of their own, thanks to big pharma's opioid campaign) on Manitoulin have to travel to Little Current, or beyond, to receive treatment.

Thanks to the insightful and proactive leadership in the First Nations, most Natives in the same struggle can access such services within their own communities. Certainly there have been pockets of funding accessible to Indigenous communities as the nation seeks to reconcile and ameliorate historical wrongs associated with the residential and day school systems and a colonial system rife with instances of systemic racism—but as noted above, the opioid crisis is not limited to one defined community.

We are most certainly not suggesting that the distribution of resources to combat addictions and mental health issues is unfair, or that less should be applied in First Nations communities. Rather, we must, as a just and civil society, recognize that the issues of addictions and mental health must be tackled effectively and with determination.

This is not to be limited to just addictions. By raw numbers, Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder impacts more non-Native families than Native families, but the issue seems to be invisible to the non-Native community. The health services leadership in First Nations communities make sure the dangers of alcohol in pregnancy is front and centre and quite in your face. In non-Native communities it is still not uncommon to hear the advice to pregnant mothers from well-meaning older family members that a beer now and then can "help build your milk" or that all the negative fuss about having a few drinks is overblown. It isn't. It has clearly been established that there is no "safe" amount of alcohol during pregnancy.

The ravages and social damage caused by addictions and mental health issues impact all of society. There are pragmatic and cold blooded economic reasons that we should deal with these issues in an effective manner. The social cost is enormous, but so is the economic impact. No matter where you fall on the partisan political divide there are solid arguments to be made that we cannot sit idly by in the hopes that the current crisis will run its course.

We, as a society, should take a page from the Indigenous communities' playbook and get serious about tackling addictions and mental health. It is not only the right thing to do—when the balance sheet is tallied it becomes clear, we simply cannot afford the cost of inaction.

Some sobering statistics on the cost of a new sports complex in Mindemoya

To the Expositor:

Anytime the urge comes over any one of you to destroy the Mindemoya Hall, the historical consolidated school (Mindemoya Old School) and the Mindemoya arena to build a sports complex, check these figures:

Thirty-five years ago the Little Current-Howland sports complex (recreation centre) cost six million dollars to build.

It costs approximately $700,000 to operate it for one year.

Three years ago, it cost $680,000 to replace the roof.

So as Mrs. Anning said at the last public meeting—bring the places up to standards. Spend thousands not muliti-millions.

Sincerely
 Lyle Dewar

Humane societies deliver crucial animal wellness resources to pets in Wiikwemkoong

MANITOULIN—The Niagara SPCA and Humane Society and the Ontario SPCA and Humane Society recently teamed up to bring much-needed resources to animals in the community of Wiikwemkoong, performing 95 spay/neuter procedures and close to 200 animal wellness examinations during their visit.

The Niagara SPCA and Humane Society's Mobile Animal Wellness Services Unit were in the community on Manitoulin Island from September 9 to 11. The two state-of-the-art mobile units were stationed at the Wiikwemkoong arena for the three-day event where they offered wellness services side-by-side with the Niagara SPCA and Humane Society, also providing spay/neuter surgeries.

The Niagara SPCA and Humane Society, which was formed last year when the Welland and District SPCA and the Niagara Falls Humane Society amalgamated, has a long history of working with the community of Wiikwemkoong. The Ontario SPCA was able to lend its support to double efforts in the community after launching its own mobile wellness trailer in June thanks to a grant provided by the Pet Valu family of stores through its Giving Back Project.

The mobile units have been travelling across the province this summer in a collaborative effort to reduce pet overpopulation and reach underserved pet owners

"We are pleased our friends from the Ontario SPCA are joining us this year on the Island as we work with our friends from (Wiikwemkoong) to provide spay/neuter and wellness services to the community," said John Greer, executive director of the Niagara SPCA and Humane Society. "Together we are making a difference in the lives of many animals. We are also making a difference in the communities we visit, as healthy animals make for healthier communities overall. It is great to see the impact we are having as we work together to reduce pet overpopulation and improve pet health."

"We were honoured to be invited to the community to work alongside the Niagara SPCA and Humane Society," said Daryl Vaillancourt, chief of Humane Programs and Community Outreach at the Ontario SPCA and Humane Society. "Helping with pet overpopulation and offering animal wellness services to communities across the province is why this partnership is so impactful."

Artist's latest works informed by Truth and Reconciliation

by Michael Erskine

SOUTH BAYMOUTH—Artist Jane Woodbury is a self-identified transplanted Brit who grew up in Valley East, but she has always felt a deep affinity to Manitoulin Island, even working for The Expositor in the past for a bit (we won't go into how long ago that was) before moving onto a gig with the Debajehmujig Theatre Group under the legendary Larry E. Lewis, where she developed an even stronger attachment to Anishinaabe culture.

Ms. Woodbury's latest works have been strongly influenced by the findings and recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

The artist describes her life as being infused with creativity from conception to the present. "My mother was an art teacher," she confides, sitting down with The Expositor at the South Bay Gallery to discuss her latest projects. "Mother started a recreation program in 1967 and was chair of the Valley East Recreation Committee. She taught arts and crafts for children and youth."

Ms. Woodbury has two degrees in the arts—a Fine Arts degree from London's Fanshawe College and, most recently, an honours degree in English from Laurentian University in 2005. "Yes, you could say that I am an advocate of lifelong learning," she laughs. She has become deeply involved in the Women in Art program in Thunder Bay and has studied women in popular culture, including film production. "It has expanded my knowledge so much," she said.

Although she started out her professional artistic career in the traditional forms of drawing, painting, printmaking and performance art, Ms. Woodbury's repertoire reflects her approach as something of a Renaissance woman in art, including creations in exhibition art, conceptual art and performance art. "Don't try to pigeon-hole me," she laughs. Lately she has been turning her hand to sculpture—with a major show in the offing for 2020. "It's early stages just yet," she confides. "We are still working out the details."

Artist Jane Woodbury stands outside the South Bay Gallery in South Baymouth. Ms. Woodbury's recent work was chosen as the Manitoulin Fine Arts Association submission to the Northern Ontario Fine Arts Association travelling exhibit.

Ms. Woodbury's work 'Church and Reconciliation' has been recently chosen as the Manitoulin Fine Arts Association entry in the Northern Ontario Arts Association juried show and the piece reflects her latest creative muse flowing from the TRC recommendations. The exhibit will tour Northern Ontario for one year.

"When the TRC report came out with its 94 calls to action I had begun work on a solo show," she said. The theme revolves around the two aspects of grief: personal loss and the loss of health and then the reactive depression to the social position you are in."

While at Debaj in 1989, she began building her knowledge of Anishinaabe Culture, which she describes as "inspirational." Working with folks such as Carl Beam, who provided pottery workshops, and Maime Migwans, whose quillwork creations set the bar high.

"The new show's title is 'Sorry M'am'," she said. "It is an anagram of missing and murdered. The victim aspect of the missing and murdered affects all of us deeply."

"The TRC calls to action ignited my passion for doing a show that described how I felt as a 'settler'," she said.

"This time last year I had just finished a film with (videographer) Warren Rudd that focussed on the families of three missing Tla-o-qui-aht hunters," she said.

There was a bit of a homecoming in exhibiting with the MFAA at the Centennial Museum of Sheguiandah for Ms. Woodbury. "I was the first person to exhibit in the gallery there," she recalled. "I remember saying to Linda Kelly, the curator at the time, that the light in what became the gallery space was wonderful."

Ms. Woodbury recently presented a plan for an art facility to the Central Manitoulin Old School Repurposing Committee that included an art gallery and space for workshops, individual studios and arts and crafts sessions, all spearheaded by seniors. This year she has worked on the big head sign for the Central Manitoulin Community Garden.

One of the pieces completed for her new show illustrates the connection to the TRC calls to action and the commission findings. Entitled 'Alberta,' the piece utilizes the image of a murdered Indigenous woman, 20-year-old Alannah Jemima Cardinal, along with roses and barbed wire. "The piece uses the provincial flower and then expands upon it," said Ms. Woodbury. Ms. Cardinal went missing on July 16, 2016 in the Goodfish Lake area, located about 185 kilometres northeast of Edmonton.

Ms. Woodbury is cautious in her work to avoid appropriation or misusing cultural and sacred images. "It's not illegal," she notes, "but it is definitely not cool."

She hopes her work will provide something of a bridge in the cultural divide between cultures, the Indigenous and the settler.

Swiss family Duquette rides out on an epic world adventure

by Michael Erskine

LITTLE CURRENT—A five-member cycling team from the tiny hamlet of Panex, Switzerland (population about 150) stopped for dinner at Soldiers' Park in Little Current last week. The cyclists are all members of the Duquette family and parents Jonathan (41) and Virginie (38) are in the process of creating memories that will act as souvenirs for their three children Nelson (12), Jimmy (11) and Catilou (9) as they travel across North America.

The family set out from Seattle, Washington on the west coast of the US several weeks ago and have since traversed several American states before making their way up into Canada. The family expects to arrive at their destination in Montreal, Quebec in a couple of weeks. Mr. Duquette has family in Montreal that they are hoping to connect with as they end their trek.

"We come from a very small village in Switzerland, less than 150 people," said Ms. Duquette. "We wanted our children to discover that there is a much larger world out there with much to discover."

Mr. Duquette had just completed a seven-year apprenticeship as a master roofer specializing in metalwork and the timing seemed right to take on the adventure of a lifetime. "We said to ourselves 'let's do something with the children that they will keep with them for the rest of their lives,'" said Ms. Duquette. The couple settled on a cross continental journey of North America. "With part of Jon's family from Montreal, we decided to come to North America."

Although they have cycled across the states of Washington, Idaho, Montana and North Dakota, they decided to switch to a

Jonathan and Virginie Duquette are on a modern Swiss family adventure with their three children Nelson, Jimmy and Catilou. train in North Dakota due to safety reasons. "There is a lot of mining, oil well activity in that area and the roads are filled with big trucks," explained Mr. Duquette. "So we took a train from Glacier National Park and jumped out in Minot, North Dakota."

"We have travelled 3,600 kilometres on our bikes," said Ms. Duquette. "We travel around 50 to 60 kilometres a day. Our bikes are very heavy."

How do their children react to this regimen? "They are not tired," laughed Ms. Duquette. "When we stop for the day they are up jumping around the playgrounds, going swimming and staying very busy."

During the interview with The Expositor Ms. Duquette's words were demonstrated proven as the youngest members of the team scampered over the concrete steps and barriers below the cenotaph in an exuberant display of pent up energy. Their bright smiles and eyes spoke volumes about how they were feeling about the journey.

Growing up in the multi-lingual country of Switzerland (where French, Italian, German and Romansh are widely spoken) the Duquette children speak largely French, but were clearly comfortable communicating in fluent English as well.

"Living in a small country like Switzerland in the middle of Europe, you must learn to speak many languages," smiled Ms. Duquette.

Asked what their favourite part of their journey has been so far, the Duquettes seemed a bit nonplussed by the question at first, but one of the children quickly supplied the answer from a bit outside the box. "The people."

"The people," agreed Ms. Duquette. "Everyone we have met, in the United States, in Canada, all of them have been so nice, so helpful, so friendly. I did not know they would be so hospitable." It is far too easy to get a warped impression of the citizens of the United States and Canada if all you know is what you see on the evening news.

The couple had come expecting to see incredible landscapes, and that has in fact proven to be the case, but the greatest delight and surprise on this trip has been the discovery of the human dimension. "I did not know it would be such a human discovery," said Ms. Duquette.

After a short lesson about the Anishinaabe whose traditional territories they were travelling through, and a basic introduction to greetings in Anishinabemowin, the family prepared to restart their journey.

With pots, dishes and cutlery safely tucked away in the plethora of packs strapped to their bicycles, the Duquette family slowly pedaled their way past Expositor Square, making short work of the hill on Manitowaning Road headed for Highway 6 and the swing bridge crossing the North Channel to collect many more memories.

Police are seeking assistance to find the origins of this burned out car found in Dawson-Robinson last week.

The incident allegedly started as a disagreement between two parties and escalated to an assault. The investigation led police to determine that a 29-year-old female from M'Chigeeng was responsible.

UCCM Police have arrested and charged a 29-year-old female with assault with a weapon and

More than Full Value Fitness!

The Balfe experience may be perceived differently by observers and participants alike! With an emphasis focused on personal improvement and the requisite positive attitude, there was no way not to come away from this amazing, functional fitness opportunity without an optimistic experience! Notwithstanding anybody's previous "bad taste" after competing against the gym monsters of the Island, the idea with Full Value Fitness is on self-improvement.

With such an amazing inaugural event it was encouraging that participation increased by 22 people to track a total number of 86 athletes! On top of that, the Balfe crew is (was) also offering another chance to improve their personal fitness levels. Albeit after press time yesterday, (Tuesday) Jon was actually offering to allow athletes to compete in a second competition to hockey players and others not able to attend the main event.

Jon Balfe reports that lots of people were beating their scores from last year and because they keep the data so participants can have a goal for the next year. With all funds raised going to local not for profit initiatives that impact the entire Island it is a definite win-win.

The way it worked is that everyone does the same events but there are different weights or heights you can do. If you do a higher level of difficulty you get a deduction off the number of seconds that it took you to complete the course. That said, if you step up in weight but it slows you down more than the deduction grant, it is likely not worth it, in regard to getting a better score. The idea is to encourage people to keep moving up yet not over doing it. For us veteran "athletes," Jon plans on making some changes next year in regard to better accessibility for older participants.

Off their Rock, hockey!

Over the last number of days, Countryside arena (Sudbury) was home to some of the best AAA Peewee and Bantam players in Northern Ontario. The highly anticipated start of the Northern Ontario Hockey League (NOHL) AAA season opened with this showcase-style event and even attracted long time hockey aficionados Gayle and Mike Payette who were seen in the rinks all weekend.

Greyson Case and Kohyn Eshkawkogan, Manitoulin D-Men, helped stifle the Minor Peewee opponents this past weekend. Their Nickel City Sons' team had just three goals scored against them in as many games.

Kohyn, incidentally, was also interviewed and was one of the featured players for a recent SudburySports.com column. The youngster had a couple of key goals and one MVP accolade in the Sons' recent Ottawa Fall Classic in Kanata. Although the Sons lost in the semi-finals, their strong, defensive, team-play had them within striking distance in every single game.

Their strong D contributed to topping the 2019 OHF Provincial Champions, the Sault Ste Marie Jr. Greyhounds, by a score of 5-1. The Minor Peewee Sons finished the weekend with a 3-0-0 record outscoring their opponents 14-3.

Another Minor Peewee, Ashton Pitawanakwat, who has ties to Wiikwemkoong, was very strong offensively for his Minor Peewee Sudbury Wolves and had a hat trick in his final game of the weekend.

In the Major Bantam division, Billy Biedermann of Little Current was a big contributor to the 1-0-2 record of the Major Bantam Nickel City Sons AAA team.

Jaden Shawana is another Island kid playing elite hockey over Sudbury way. Jaden like his dad (Eddie) is an upper echelon defenseman. He and his AAA Wolves picked up the Silver medals in an Early-Bird tournament in Richmond Hill last weekend.

Greg Trudeau-Paquet was the first star in a weekend overtime win over Timmins in which he scored the winning goal for his NOJHL Powasson Voodoos side! That makes it three stars in three consecutive games. Great job, Gregory.

Caydence Webkamigad (mother Colleen) accomplished an amazing athletic feat last week. Already an elite female hockey player, she was able to earn a spot on the perennially-strong St. Charles College Cardinals boys' football team of the SSHSA high school league!

Good luck all, to your seasons!

shop with Mishiikeh Kwe followed by Play, Learn Think! art and science activities with Pierre Harrison at 11:30 am until 1:30 pm.

Saturday afternoon marks a musical showcase at the Old Church on the Hill beginning at 1:30 pm with a magic show by Manitou Magic, Ashley Manitowabi, followed by the musical stylings of Duncan Cameron, Robbie Shawana and Evangeline Gentle.

The main event for at the Park Centre stage on Saturday night is Fagroongala, a trio from Sudbury playing Celtic and French-Canadian music. They also draw inspiration from classical music, funk, and other popular styles. Fagroongala's songs, many of which predate Canadian confederation, are adapted with modern instrumentation, rhythms and harmony.

The next day, Sunday, September 29, the Elemental Festival will be hosting an all ages art workshop and drum performance with Veronica Johnny from 10 am to noon.

At 12:30 pm, the all ages vocal workshop will be offered by Everett Levi Morrison. Both workshops will take place at the Park Centre.

The fun then moves to the Old Church on the Hill at 1:30 pm with another musical showcase featuring the talented Ethan Theijsemeijer, Everett Levi Morrison and Voices North with young singing phenom Ellie Maxwell.

...conservancy okays careful Garlon use on Cockburn

vancy of Canada.

"Given the remoteness of the island, it's almost preferable that they would go in and spray like that, rather than bringing in heavy machinery. Because then the invasive species risk is higher because seeds from other sites on the island or other islands can lead to the introduction of garlic mustard, buckthorn, phragmites or other toxic invasive species that spread quickly," he added.

Although the ad stated that Hydro One would be using off-road tracked vehicles, Mr. Deschamps said he understood that the transmission line right of way is quite wide and mostly has an established trail for off-road vehicles. Therefore, they would not have to cross through any pristine sites.

"Hydro One has always been a good neighbour. We always look forward to working with them and all our neighbours on Cockburn Island. All the projects are vetted through the community. The Cockburn Island Sports and Conservation Club are incredible partners with us, as are the residents. We keep looking forward to doing what we do together in joint success," said Mr. Deschamps.

Several Manitoulin municipalities have previously objected to entities such as Hydro One and the Ontario

Ministry of Transportation (MTO) using herbicides such as Garlon and ClearView, including Assiginack, Tehkummah and Central Manitoulin. Others, such as the Northeast Town, Billings and M'Chigeeng have cleared its usage in past applications.

A group of Manitoulin residents has been vocal against the use of these such herbicides, a group that includes Little Current's Zak Nicholls. When contacted by The Expositor he said his main concerns were whether any work would be done at the Manitoulin-based Wolsey Lake feeder station because he was unsure that Cockburn Island was connected to that station. He was still waiting on contact from Hydro One to address that question by press time.

He also said he has asked Hydro One to provide a schedule of upcoming spraying on its rights of way, but never received a response.

Careful pesticide use has proven to be effective and relatively safe in other brush control projects, such as the Manitoulin Phragmites Project which uses the measured application of Roundup Weathermax to control the aggressive and extremely invasive phragmites plant in an effort to manage the species and cause a net benefit for the Island.

Hydro One is required to follow provincial and federal guidelines that apply to the application of herbicides.

CMPS Fall Fair emanates excellent exhibition entries

by Warren Schlote

MINDEMOYA—Scores of people attended this year's Central Manitoulin Public School (CMPS) Fall Fair, celebrating 107 years and relishing its title as the last-remaining agricultural school fair in the province.

"This year, our (exhibit) entries were up. I'm very pleased because we were working very hard to generate interest in the fair. All that hard work has paid off," said fair committee member and CMPS teacher Ellen Ferguson, who played a significant role in getting the event together.

"It's really become a community tradition in every way," said CMPS principal David Wiwchar. "We're grateful for all the help of so many people to help make it happen."

The fair began in 1912 and has since been named an honorary member of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies. Every year on the second Monday and Tuesday of September, the students and staff of CMPS invite the public to peruse some of the best work created by their students which they have entered into one of more than 100 categories.

There are also 11 categories reserved for 'friends of the fair,' which includes teachers, parents, alumni, volunteers and community members. Ms. Ferguson said that although no students are required to enter their creations and each is done on a voluntary basis, the number of entrants this year was extremely high—nearly every one of the categories saw an entry.

Monday evening features a social gathering and the dog show. The next morning is when the parade and exhibit hall go on offer, followed by the fall feast at the school during the lunch hour.

During the feast it was impossible to scan around the room and not find a beaming smile, whether it was borne upon the face of a child enjoying some tasty treats, a parent offering supervision or a teacher helping to ensure the buffet table was well-stocked.

"It brings our community together," said Ms. Ferguson. "We're really lucky to have the fair."

The CMPS Fall Fair was a walk down memory lane for some community members, such as Long Bay's Darlene Orford who recalled when the schools in Mills, Grimesthorpe, Perivale and Spring Bay came together for a school fair when she was attending them in the 1940s. She helped out as a judge for this year's CMPS Fall Fair.

...veterans honour Allan Tustian as he reaches 100

served in Canada's navy during wartime and those who are in it today. He collaborated with author Wayne Neal on a memoir about his wartime experiences, 'Allan Tustian and the Battle of the Atlantic,' complete with historical photos, about his life

He started his naval career in 1941 and was honourably discharged on October 1, 1945. Mr. Tustian was originally in the army but became a member of the navy in 1942, which is where he wanted to be. Along with the training in torpedoes and gunnery that all naval personnel take, Mr. Tustian, when asked what specialty he would like to take, chose radio directional finding. He explained that this is the radar used to find ships on the surface. Later, he also took the training for the increasingly crucial sonar, necessary for finding the enemy submarines that played havoc on supply ships from Canada and the United States to Britain.

Mr. Tustian certainly saw a lot of water during his time in the navy. He served on the Arctic, Atlantic and Pacific oceans, as well as the Mediterranean Sea and his ships were Her Majesty's Canadian Ships (HMCS) St. Francis, Timmins and Waskesiu, in order a destroyer, corvette and frigate.

He was present for the Battle of the Atlantic, which lasted almost six years. It not only included the Atlantic Ocean, but many other spots including the Arctic Ocean, the Labrador Sea and the Gulf of St. Lawrence. This action saw the death of just over 72,000 sailors and merchant seaman. Mr. Tustian was also present for D-Day, the Allied Invasion of Europe, which led to the defeat of the Germans and the end of the war. The naval veteran saw a staggering 43 convoys across the North Atlantic.

Mr. Tustian returned home to Manitoulin and settled on Treasure Island where he met his wife Alma and where his children were raised. Over the years, he worked for naval veterans and was actively involved in the construction of the Manitoulin District Cenotaph Park and the naval merchant marine monument. He was also a part of the construction of the naval monument in Memorial Park in Sudbury.

"I joined in '93," Mr. Ranich said of the MNSNVA. "Allan was a well-spoken gentleman with lots of wartime stories to tell us. He always had us in stitches, but he also told you of the rough times. He was also instrumental in the formation of the Manitoulin Sea Cadet Corps. He said, 'if Sudbury can have it, why can't we?'" And probably unknown to a lot of people, Mr. Tustian was responsible for the formation of the Island's first all-female hockey team. And if one is wondering about the longevity of this man, perhaps it is because, as Marilyn put it, he went swimming twice a day from May 24 until September 30. He also went ice and rod fishing until he turned 97 and also golfed until three years ago."

In June of this year, Mr. Tustian was honoured by the Sudbury Shrine Club with a message that said, "The Shrine Club is very privileged to have one of its longest-serving members, veteran Allan Tustian. Thank you Noble Allan Tustian for your service to our country."

The MNSNVA members also gave their thanks to Allan and noted that he will be featured in next month's report. Each month, the photo of a young person goes in and the readers have to guess who it is. They also noted that Mr. Tustian has been put in for "Member of the Year" at the National Convention, which takes place in Brantford on September 28 to 30 and Mr. Chapelle has talked with the provincial president about this.

The visit ended with Mr. Eaton saying, "It is an honour and a privilege to be here today. Thank you for your support."

The naval veterans then went to the Grill and Chill restaurant, along with their spouses, to celebrate their anniversary and to reminisce about the remarkable Allan Tustian.

Mr. Tustian will be celebrating his 100th birthday this Sunday, October 22.

Get well soon, Allan, and Happy Birthday!

...Central council repairing Mindemoya arena

lor Steve Shaffer and seconded by Councillor Al Tribinevicius passed.

The next motion dealing with the arena was a recommendation from the Property Committee that the town's municipal supervisor utilize the report recommendations regarding snow removal from the roof as outlined in the inspection report.

"I think we were looking for an indication of how to instruct our staff to proceed," said Mayor Stephens. "This gives us the information on how to go ahead."

The motion, moved by Councillor Tribinevicius and seconded by Councillor Shaffer, passed.

Council then moved onto one of the key motions regarding the fate of the arena, a motion by Steve Shaffer and Linda Farquhar on a recommendation from the Property Committee to proceed immediately with the repairs to the J.H. Burt Memorial Arena recommended by the Tulloch Engineering report. Those repairs totalling $30,000 were: repair roof leak (to be carried out by staff); clean and paint the arch frame bases, including applying preservative to the bases ($4,000); reinforce the roof beam at the ice resurfacer room (the largest item estimated at $20,000); point cracks in masonry at refrigeration and ice resurfacer rooms ($1,000); clean and point masonry at east wall near south end and west wall ($2,500); and repair roof at valley flashing ($2,500).

"I wasn't in favour of this motion last time and I am not in favour of it now," said Councillor Stephens. "At some point we have to bite the bullet. This is just a short term fix. The foundations are starting to go. This is just throwing good money after bad—at some point we have to start looking after our aging infrastructure."

"I must respectfully disagree with my fellow councillor," said Councillor Shaffer. He went on to point out that the Mindemoya arena is a "critical piece of infrastructure" and that to close the arena at this point would be "a disservice to our youth. Councillor Stephens is correct in that there is no guarantee, but $30,000 is not something that will break council's back."

Councillor Angela Johnston noted that "I generally agreed with most of (Councillor Stephens') facts." She noted that although the Providence Bay ice surface is slightly smaller, the arena itself is in better shape, but then went on to say that she would support the motion, this time, but she is "drawing a line in the sand. This is it, no more throwing money at a building we are going to replace." She went on to note that the community would eventually be moving to one complex, whether renovated or new, but that community members were concerned that there was not enough notice provided. "From my point of view, this is notice."

"I agree with Steve, everything he says," said Councillor Farquhar. "We can be of service to our taxpayers or we can accumulate money in our account. Tulloch didn't say (the arena) was going to give out in a year—they said they would come back in five years. We can assume it is safe or they would be saying they would be coming back next year."

Mayor Stephens said that he was not going to offer an opinion at this time, but went on to say that "we are not investing in a building, we are investing in our community. A building that is not only for our children but for many parents as well. The arena in Mindemoya is the one that has been used the most." In the end, he said, "we will follow the will of the community."

Councillor Shaffer called for a recorded vote. Councillor Stephens cast the only negative vote, with Councillors Johnston, Farquhar, Shaffer, Tribinevicius and Mayor Stephens voting in favour of the motion to proceed with the repairs.

The decision generated applause from those attending the meeting in the audience.

A motion to revisit the decision to replace the chiller in the Providence Bay arena instead of the Mindemoya facility engendered a lively debate, with Councillor Shaffer maintaining that the original motion was procedurally incorrect.

Mayor Stephens ruled the original motion to place the

...Autumn Peltier nominated for international honour

dren's Peace Prize is awarded annually to a child who "fights courageously for children's rights."

According to the website of KidsRights, the award's founder, the nominees of 2019 "demonstrate that children are changemakers." The winner of this year's award will be announced on September 30.

KidsRights works with children to create a world in which their rights are guaranteed and they are enabled to realize their great potential. KidsRights said that it's organization is "convinced that realizing children's rights more effectively calls for the perspective, experience and authority of children themselves."

That is the reason KidsRights first established the International Children's Peace Prize. According to the organization "Each year's winner has, in his or her own way, demonstrated "tremendous commitment to combating problems that millions of children face. KidsRights believes that children who make a difference in the world should be recognized, awarded and motivated in their incredible effort to improve children's rights."

Autumn's citation reads that she "is an Indigenous girl and a passionate water ambassador. She is fighting for the right of Indigenous Canadian peoples and children to have access to clean water while at the same time acting as the voice for all against the abuse of clean water as our most important natural resource. She has been invited to several leadership meetings council meetings and committee meetings to share her wisdom and thoughts about the water and what can be done. Autumn has stood in solidarity with Standing Rock and raised awareness by having a peaceful protest where she made a North American call out to block highways for one hour to create awareness about the water crisis and support Standing Rock. They blocked the highways. She has also been invited to World Water Day to be a keynote speaker at the UN where she told world leaders to "Warrior Up" for water and for the planet."

chiller in Providence Bay was valid. "It was done and said and it is there," he said. "We are not going to go back and change history. Unless Angela (Councillor Johnston), Derek (Councillor Stephens) or Al (Councillor Tribinevicius) put the motion on the table for discussion." Mayor Stephens was referring to a procedural policy that requires one of the councillors who voted in favour of the originally passed motion to bring it back for discussion. Councillor Shaffer and Councillor Dale Scott were not present for the original motion.

The three councillors declined to bring the motion back. Councillor Johnston said that "in hindsight, I wish we had never purchased it (the chiller originally purchased for the Mindemoya arena that is now slated for the Providence Bay arena)." Councillor Tribinevicius noted that once the repairs were completed on the Mindemoya arena, both it and the Providence Bay arena would be fully functioning.

"The good and the bad of it is that both will be open this winter," said Mayor Stephens. He then asked when the chiller would be installed and if the town had received it yet. CAO Ruth Frawley noted that the chiller would arrive in "about a week" and that both current chillers are roughly the same age, "20 or 21 years."

Councillor Shaffer noted that during the capital budget debate it was decided to purchase one chiller this year and the second one in the next budget cycle. "The arena that is used the most is the most logical service area," he said, going on to once again assert that the motion to move the chiller to Providence Bay was "made improperly."

Discussion then moved on to the acceptance of the Recreation Centre Feasibility Committee Report and further that the municipality develop plans for a new recreation centre in Mindemoya, moved by committee chair Councillor Johnston and seconded by Councillor Stephens. Councillor Stephens commended Councillor Johnston and her committee for the work they accomplished on the concept.

"It is the first time (the feasibility of building a new modern recreation centre) has got out to committee," he said. "Support is there for the facility and Mindemoya is the logical location with water and sewer."

Councillor Stephens went on to say "I am not a proponent of grants" and suggesting that the current provincial atmosphere is not likely to be conducive to providing grants for facilities.

"I do think the committee did a good job," said Councillor Shaffer. "I will support the motion but I would have preferred if we had supported it in principle. There are still a lot of unanswered questions."

"One step at a time," said Mayor Stephens, who also went on the thank Councillor Johnston and her committee.

Councillor Farquhar said that she too was unhappy with the wording of the motion, but that the committee had done an outstanding job. She suggested that there should be a public meeting about the issue. Councillor Tribinevicius also thanked Councillor Johnston. "A new sports/community centre will be good for Mindemoya in the future," he said. "There will be a lot of spin-offs." "There is a lot that remains to be done, the municipal development plan, financial plan, organizational timing, location—we know there is an awful lot of work around questions, but it is a major step in the direction," said Mayor Stephens.

Council then passed a motion from Councillor Tribinevicius, seconded by Councillor Stephens, that followed a recommendation from the Finance and Administration Committee to apply to the Investing in Canada Infrastructure Program: Community, Culture and Recreation Stream.

Since municipal staff do not have the available time and resources to complete the application, the preparation of the application would go to the municipal engineering firm, Tulloch Engineering, and will cost between $25,000 and $50,000.

"I am sure we can come up with the money," said Councillor Stephens, adding that he did not think it likely that the municipality would get the federal funding in the first round, but that by being in the first round they would automatically be in the running during the second round.

Councillor Shaffer suggested the motion should be split into two separate motions for clarity. Mayor Stephens agreed and the motion was passed as two separate items, one proceeding with the application and the second assigning the work to Tulloch.

Councillor Tribinevicius expressed the hope that Councillor Johnston and her committee would continue to work on the file, a sentiment endorsed by Mayor Stephens. Councillor Johnston said that she could not speak for the whole committee, but that she would be "happy to provide input."

Robinson-Huron gathering, arts festival join forces for event

Wiikwemkoong Arts and Music Festival ignites 'Burning Man' tribute

by Warren Schlote
WIKWEMKOONG—The Robinson-Huron Treaty Gathering (RHTG) and Wiikwemkoong Arts and Music Festival (WAMF) proved to be a popular pairing of events judging by the healthy turnout to the joint celebrations held this past weekend at Thunderbird Park and the Thunderdome Arena in Wiikwemkoong.

Thursday evening marked the beginning of the RHTG schedule with a comedy show at the Thunderdome Arena that included hometown talents Lena Recollet and Stephanie Pangowish. Ms. Pangowish also emceed the music festival and interspersed a number of jokes between acts for the benefit of her fans and those who couldn't attend the Thursday show.

Each morning of the RHTG began with a sunrise ceremony and prayer followed by breakfast. Friday also featured opening ceremonies, including the lighting of the sacred fire, a welcoming song and introductions of the key players of the gathering.

The Robinson-Huron Treaty of 1850 includes individuals now residing in 21 First Nations in Ontario including the seven in the District of Manitoulin. It set up reserves, entrenched hunting and fishing rights and established treaty annuity payments.

In September 2014, the 21 First Nations began legal action against Canada and Ontario for long-standing treaty violations. The treaty annuity had been frozen at $4 since 1874 and the First Nations won the case last December where a judge ruled that the amounts should have risen over time.

Ontario has appealed that ruling and, for the time being, not much has changed. The Robinson-Huron Treaty legal team offered an update to beneficiaries Saturday afternoon as to what the next steps would be. Most of the discussions were protected under solicitor-client privilege but the team did announce the next stage of trial will be starting soon.

Stage two of the three phases in the trial involves setting the liability of the province and country. This will take place from October 15 to 25 in Sudbury and it will be open to the public.

The third and final stage will deal with the final compensation that will be owed to First Nations. These dates are set for April 5 to June 30, 2021.

A highlight of the meeting for many gathered was a keynote by University of Toronto professor Heidi Bohaker, delivered on Saturday morning.

Ms. Bohaker has done considerable research and teaching in the field of Anishinaabe political history near the Great Lakes. She has also focused on Native American writing, communication systems and material culture as sources for history, treaty relationships, federal government policies toward Indigenous peoples in Canada and digital history.

The discussion also explored how Anishinaabe leaders used doodems (clans) to form alliances when making councils. A series of marriages and alliances between council fires had interacted to create a linked system of interdependency between doodems which shared governance roles, leading to a stable, flexible and effective system.

There was a portion on the importance of the gift economy, the role of women in historic governance structures and how new models changed the role of those women under the umbrella of the Indian Act.

After her talk, she fielded a question-and-answers session where attendees asked questions ranging from the repatriation of Indigenous artifacts to the Anishinaabe understanding of the worth of money in the time when these treaties were signed.

Throughout the weekend were breakout sessions including cooking demonstrations, tea-making and an interactive station where attendees were invited to try their hand at skinning a beaver (known in Anishinaabemowin as amik) to prepare its pelt. On Saturday there was also an opportunity to try eating amik.

The musical offerings of the WAMF in the evening were tough to beat. Friday evening saw acoustic musician Leslie Neshkiwe open the list of performers, a list that included Wiikwemkoong favourites Elijah and the Back Burners, the Wiky Three and Pat Peltier.

On Saturday, Leland Bell and Dave Miner began with some Anishinaabe-themed music, followed by Keegan Jacko who played some originals and covers such as a mashup of contemporary songs that began with the year's hottest country rap crossover, 'Old Town Road.'

Guelph-based "forward-looking folk" duo Tragedy Ann went up next and deftly switched back and forth between instruments including guitar, accordion and ukulele.

Brothers Wilde took over the stage next, bringing their high-energy act that netted them the 2019 International New Country Duo of the Year award from the North American Country Music Association. By now, the attendance numbers were growing as the headlining acts drew ever closer.

An extra addition to the lineup came after the brothers when MC Sage had a brief feature. He performed a slam poetry ode in tribute to Manitoulin Island and Rainbow Lodge, of which he is currently a resident undergoing treatment.

When Crystal Shawanda began singing after MC Sage, all eyes were fixed on the impassioned notes ringing from her vocal chords above the masterful jams being laid down by the other musicians on stage.

At the end of her set, the grounds lighting shut off and a group of four performers from Debajehmujig Storytellers walked in front decision on what form those programs and supports will take will be up to the community itself, noted Ogimaa Duke Peltier.

Ogimaa Peltier went on to outline some of the intensive lobbying efforts and history that went into bringing the healing lodge into reality. "This facility will go forward with the recommendations from a 1995 report on how to deal with family violence," he said. "I don't think I need to go into the issues faced by the community at that time, but we see the physical facility our leadership has "essentially out of the blue during an August 12 conference call. The first thing they said was 'we have $5.9 million to construct a healing lodge.'"

Ogimaa Peltier recalled the barely contained excitement expressed by Ngwaagan Gamig Recovery Centre Executive Director Rolanda Manitowabi. "She couldn't wait to tell her staff," he said. "I told her 'yes, you can tell your staff and you can share the news with our community.' Whatever services we need in the community; you can find in this facility."

Bill Assinewai, Wiik-

Kennedy spoke for the committee, which included Darren Trudeau Peltier, Hank Mandamin, James Manitowabi, Gordie Odjig and Stuart Assinewai. "I am all excited right now," she said. "Happy and excited." She recalled how she returned to the community in 1995 to begin working on Aboriginal Health and Healing, but was dismayed at the title she was given: sexual abuse co-ordinator. "I didn't like the title," she said. "They said 'how about family violence co-ordinator?' I didn't like that title either. They said, 'well why don't you get some people together and "I don't believe in doing anything by myself," she said, so she set about consulting the community on what needed to be done. The survey indicated the high numbers of people who knew the violence taking place in the community "especially youth and elders. That's probably why I stuck it out," she said. The prospect of a Manitoulin Tim Hortons is among the most divisive issues among Islanders, well up in the ranks alongside the fate of the swing bridge.

Within two days, the post had amassed well over 300 comments from people who were either for, against, or relatively impartial to the whole concept. By the end of the week, the comment total far surpassed 400.

The Expositor searched a number of job posting websites, including the in-house Tim Hortons site, and no job postings surfaced for anywhere on Manitoulin Island. One posting on job site Indeed had a job available in 'Greater Sudbury' but did not specify a more discrete region.

Based on past comments made by the Ontario Ministry of Transportation and Blake Street also expected to hold a new business in the future. Land owner Jim McBane of Streetwise Holdings Inc.

(MTO) and motions made by Northeast Town council, the location the employee allegedly mentioned of "by The Beer Store" may cast doubt on the employee's alleged story.

MTO has completed a traffic study at the location next to The Beer Store. It stated that any development in that space would require roadway upgrades costing upwards of $500,000. MTO would require a third traffic lane with a tapered turning lane, an environmental study and another engineering study in order to give it its blessing to proceed.

However, another property in Little Current is also slated for development, with the triangular plot at the corner of Manitowaning Road and Blake Street also expected to hold a new business in the future. Land owner Jim McBane of Streetwise Holdings Inc.

Kapuskasung and she expressed her pleasure at being able "to play a small part in bringing that funding to you."

Ms. Hughes noted the lateral damage caused to families by addictions and violence. "It affects families, it affects communities," she said.

Chuck Peltier, business development and lease property manager at Enaadmaagehjik (Wikwemikong Development Commission) spoke on behalf of Nikki Manitowabi and relayed how proud the organization is to have played a part in the planning for the project.

Finally, Ngwaagan Gamig president Chris Johnson came to the microphone to offer his thoughts. "I am really proud of how far I have come," he said, referencing his youth growing up in Toronto. "I had nowhere to go," he said. "Then I came here, then I met all of the wonderful people here and discovered so much positivism in the community—and it's growing."

Following the speeches, community members gathered for a celebratory feast catered by Hiawatha Catering.

Ogimaa Peltier noted that the band will be consulting the community on programming and services and that the plans for the building originally submitted for the funding application will be fully costed before the shovels actually go into the ground. "We only have so much money," he said. "We have to make sure we get the best use out of it for the community."

...CMPS Fall Fair sees excellent community support

"I hope the kids can see that it doesn't matter if you get first place or not; what matters is that you took part," said Ms. Orford.

The feast came with the soundtrack of The Islanders, a four-piece band playing classic country tunes. As the children finished eating, they could not help but begin swaying and whirling to the music.

Ms. Ferguson added that the fair, in addition to offering family-friendly fun and fabulous festivities, allows children to express their natural talents in numerous forms.

"Kids get to share their abilities in different ways. It's not just the usual sports, which are still important, but also agriculture and the arts," she said.

Those who entered exhibits were also physically rewarded for their efforts. All first-place finishes netted the students $1.75 and six points. In the beginner to Grade 3 division and Grade 4 to Grade 8 division, one boy and girl with the highest and second-highest number of points received a cash prize, with the four top-place finishers also receiving an inscribed plaque.

Mr. Wiwchar said the fair serves as an important tool by which to show the students where their food comes from and to better appreciate how valuable it is. He invited the students to pause and reflect on this as they ate.

Due to morning rains, organizers had to cancel this year's parade. This came as a disappointment to many who had been eagerly anticipating its arrival but Mr. Wiwchar and Ms. Ferguson both expressed hope that it would be rescheduled for later in the year, with plans coming together for a make-up date closer to Thanksgiving. No date has been finalized as of press time.

Human Rights Tribunal ruling a step towards justice for First Nations children and families: Anishinabek Nation

ANISHINABEK NATION—Anishinabek Nation Grand Council Chief Glen Hare says that the recent Canadian Human Rights Tribunal (CHRT) ruling ordering the federal government to pay compensation to First Nation children, youth and families is a step forward towards justice for Anishinabek children and their families.

Grand Council Chief Glen Hare

“Our youth are the future – they need to be supported within their communities and their families. In this era of truth and reconciliation, Canada must step forward and fulfill their obligation to the many First Nation children and families who suffered and continue to suffer because of colonization, racism and discrimination,” states Anishinabek Nation Grand Council Chief Glen Hare in a press release. “Equal access to the funding needed for essential prevention services, like counselling and housing, was not provided to prevent the unnecessary removal of our children from their homes or to help our families before their children were taken. While in out-of-home care, some of our children lost their families forever and some have even lost their lives. Nothing can undo this pain and suffering experienced by our children and families.”

The recent CHRT ruling is the latest ruling in a historic human rights case filed in 2007 by the First Nations Child and Family Caring Society of Canada and the Assembly of First Nations. In 2016, the CHRT found the federal government willfully and recklessly discriminating against First Nations through the inequitable funding of child and family services and through failure to fully implement Jordan’s Principle. Canada was immediately ordered to cease its discriminatory conduct.

“Every First Nation child who was needlessly taken into out-of-home care receiving the maximum compensation amount allowed under the Canadian Human Rights Act is a step towards justice for our children and families,” Grand Council Chief Glen Hare adds.

The CHRT has ordered Canada to provide $40,000 in compensation to the victims of its discriminatory practices. The ruling applies to all First Nation children who were unnecessarily placed into care from January 1, 2006, to a date that is to be determined by the CHRT. Parents or guardians of children who were unnecessarily placed into out-of-home care may also be eligible for compensation. A culturally informed, child-focused process is to be put into place to determine eligibility and individual compensation.

acknowledged that development discussions were underway, though he stopped short of identifying what the property may hold.

“I have entertained numerous businesses from out of town for that property. Nothing is in writing yet with any one of them, although I am working more closely with two of them. A final decision and/or agreement has not been made yet,” said Mr. McBane, whose holding company has owned the property for the past six to seven years.

“I’m not saying it’s Tim Hortons at all. Even if it was, it wouldn’t be my place to announce it—it would be Tim Hortons or any company who would have to announce it,” he said. “If something does happen and I get permission from whomever is involved, I will share that whenever it comes.”

Based on the feedback on the viral Facebook post, roughly 72 percent of respondents who expressed an opinion on a Tim Hortons locating on Manitoulin felt negatively about the prospect. Some 28 percent who expressed a definite opinion were in favour of the idea. Many more comments were either back-and-forth discussions or satirical takes on the debate.

The Expositor could not make contact with Espanola, McKerrow and Blind River Tim Hortons franchise owner Denis Lefebvre by press time. He had previously signed an agreement with Island developer Rob Sheppard for the property closer to the swing bridge before MTO released its list of road redesign stipulations.

ically held in the cafetorium, the next space to have received an overhaul.

Its stage has been painted flat black and the skirt at the front of the stage is being redone with new fabric.

The cafetorium has also embraced more of a lounge feel and includes conventional tables and chairs (no more bench table seating units), curved couches with coffee tables and higher bar-style tables and chairs. All of the chairs in the space also follow the MSS colour palette—black, gray and gold—and the tabletops are a light-coloured wood finish. The couches add a splash of colour with earth tones of light green and light blue.

“We’re incorporating a lot of colours that we found through consultation with the community, staff and students,” said Mr. Mohamed. “The wood, green and blue ties into the idea of connectedness with the Earth.”

The curtains have been cleaned and fire-treated. There are also two flat-screen televisions mounted midway up the two side walls that are currently being used to show a visual slideshow of the morning announcements. A singular television in the library also shows this feed.

The renovations on the main floor spill out into all of the halls.

“The whole main floor has been painted. All the ceiling tiles came down (the old four-by-two tiles have been replaced with square two-by-two tiles), all the infrastructure has been redone—the old plumbing is out and replacements have been installed,” said Mr. Mohamed.

Along with the infrastructure is a new PA intercom system and phones in each class, a new bell system, an all-new fire system and an all-new lockdown system. Both have a visual and audible component to them so their warnings can be heeded by more students with accessibility needs.

Lockers have been repainted in a uniform shade of blue and many have actually been removed from the ground floor. Mr. Mohamed said this was because the school’s intended capacity of 1,000 students vastly outnumbers its current enrolment of just over 400 students.

The former locker spaces are being used in a variety of ways. Some have been turned into wood-finish bench areas and one will be used as a display case for works produced in the inquiry-based learning project room (commonly known as a ‘maker space’).

A staff room has been redone and a second accessible water bottle fill station has been installed on the main floor. There is also a brand-new all-gender, accessible washroom on the main floor. The school’s power plant and wiring was redone last summer and all lights in the renovation zone have been converted to energy-saving LEDs.

The library, with its old location being gutted for the three-part room, has moved to a new home in the north part of the school. It has all-new flooring, similar seating to the cafetorium and, like the caf, a new projector and screen which is tensioned so it will not flex or blow in a draft and distort a presentation.

Finally, to the rear of the school, two new student leadership rooms are expected to reach completion imminently. They share a vestibule with a kitchen and one of the inner rooms will be for the school’s Anishinaabe Three Fires Confederacy group while its neighbour will be a space for the school’s parliament.

Mr. Mohamed said he has been hearing positive feedback from students who are relishing the fresh look of the redone spaces.

“Students are very excited about mainly the caf and the gym. They’re excited to be able to show (the gym) off when we have teams visiting,” he said.

Consultations with stakeholders netted suggestions of additions such as switching the guidance and main offices and the addition of a student leadership space, things Mr. Mohamed said contributed to the project being somewhat behind schedule. However, he praised the quality of work and noted attention to small details such as sealing off seams in the construction hoarding to prevent dust from leaking into the main school area.

“We’re very happy with the quality of work from all the contractors,” he said.

The renovation project began near the beginning of the last school year when Rainbow District School Board (RDSB) approached the school to build off its existing electrical infrastructure work from that summer.

“Any time you have things that are new it gives the opportunity to shift the culture and put the school in a direction where everyone feels inclusive and cared for,” said Mr. Mohamed. “Then the kids want to be here and engage in all the things we have to offer, from academics to extra-curricular activities.”

On the day The Expositor toured the renovation progress, the entrance sign read ‘every day is a new beginning.’ It was a fitting message for MSS as it enters its 50th year of existence and gets freshened up to continue serving its feeder communities for decades more.

The main office and guidance office have switched places and received bright new colours and lighting.

Students have been taking full advantage of the revamped seating options in the cafetorium.

The caf stage has received a fresh coat of paint. The chairs match the colours of the school and new TVs share school information.

The library has moved to a new home and also received upgraded flooring and seating. There is a new projector and screen and a TV.

Some of the removed locker banks have been converted into wood-finished bench seating areas.

...Robinson-Huron gathering, arts festival join forces for weekend celebration

...continued from page 11 of the stage and breathed life into the evening. They came armed with torches and propellants to breathe the massive fireballs from their mouths to the delight of spectators of all ages.

The fire-breathers invited the masses to follow them to the baseball field, where a massive wooden guitar stood that had been constructed by Debaj crews earlier. They slowly approached alongside a legion of kids with glow-stick-adorned bicycles and then the fire-breathers entered the fence and circled the guitar.

They moved ever closer and directed their flames at the effigy until it caught flame and soon erupted into an inferno while the scores of people gathered around the fence let out a cheer.

As this was all taking place, blues guitar legend Micki Free went up to the stage and began rocking with Crystal Shawanda's band. The fire-watchers slowly rejoined the music fans who had turned their attention to the stage for the final act of the night.

The RHTG then wrapped up the next day after a few presentations and a closing ceremony. At the end of the RHTG programming on Saturday, Wiikwemkoong Ojima Duke Peltier thanked all for attending and attentively listening to the presentations.

"It's important to get an understanding of what our rights are and what our responsibilities are," he said.

Ogima Peltier also noted that in discussions with the other ogimaak who had come to represent their communities, that they had expressed interest in meeting more regularly to discuss commonalities between their peoples and ways they could work together more closely.

"We do have a ways to go yet, there's a lot of discussion that needs to happen," he said.

Dewayne Strobel lights into a facemelter of a solo as his wife Crystal Shawanda takes a break from her energy-filled vocal performance.

Mnaamodzawin language, culture camp has strong second year

by Warren Schlote

AUNDECK OMNI KANING—Mnaamodzawin Health Services has run its innovative language and culture camp for the second year now, offering an opportunity for its staff to improve their skills in Anishinaabemowin and work on teambuilding at the same time.

“It’s all-around language immersion, so the games we were playing were not that important (in themselves), but the games were translated into the language and they had to use the language to take part in the game,” said Mnaamodzawin Health Services executive director Craig Abotossaway.

For two days, staff members convened at the powwow grounds in Aundeck Omni Kaning for the camp. Last year’s event was three days in length, but based on feedback and the mentally taxing nature of language learning, it was scaled back to two.

Mr. Abotossaway said this camp is a crucial part of building the skills that

Each activity featured a dedicated elder who was present to help answer questions and encourage the growth of the employees’ language skill sets. At this station, the workers learned basic phrases in the language.

“Why Mnaamodzawin came into fruition 20-plus years ago was to provide culturally based health services that meet the needs of First Nations communities on the Island,” said Mr. Abotossaway.

Mnaamodzawin relies heavily on Anishinaabe teachings to cement its purpose and service delivery. It applies the Seven Grandfather Teachings as its guide to shape how it interacts with its five First Nation client communities.

“Language retention and cultural competencies are built-in policies at Mnaamodzawin (which state) that staff need to be progressing in those areas because they’re health service providers that work only with First Nations communities,” said Mr. Abotossaway.

To foster that continual growth, the health centre offers Anishinaabemowin classes every two weeks during the lunch hour and might host a one-day refresher event mid-way through the year.

The centre’s policy to continually develop language and cultural knowledge is entrenched in its professional development plan. It places the responsibility for these outcomes on the employees themselves. They are implored to seek out reading material and online courses on their own time to continually be building up their strengths in these areas.

At the camp, the staff broke up into three groups that circulated to the various stations. Two stations would be hosting games and a third would involve a cultural teaching session. One of the game stations featured Anishinaabemowin darts—whatever number the players hit,

Tehkummah Talk and Times

The most popular game in my snack bar was the $0.05 pinball machine. The machines were installed and cared for by a couple of nice guys named Pete and Repete! I was always happy when the percentage of our share came our way. At that time, we paid our hydro every three months and the $0.05 machine always covered that. We usually had one other game, probably a dime, and the juke box, three or five for a quarter. (My memory is starting to fail) and I didn't think $30 for three months' hydro was a lot. We also sold gas at that time. Oh, there were lots of other games, too. The cooler months, rummy games would go on into the wee small hours of the morning; no one would give anything up. I'm sure the young teens who "hung out" at that time have a lot of fond memories. I certainly do!

Who can say each day where the road might lead you? It was a long and winding road, but, it led to a very enjoyable evening. Well, it all started quite a bit earlier in the day. Betty Jean was hosting the monthly Sr. U.C.W. meeting and a lovely afternoon it was. We all get along so well together. Afterwards, a delicious lunch was served up. We are not supposed to do so much anymore, but, as usual I was the last man standing (put a WO in front of that. We talked of the corn boil in Sandfield (well heck, I'm footloose and fancy free.) She made a couple of phone calls, looked up the time in the paper and plans got bigger. My first corn boil, really enjoyable, corn delicious, too. Here's where we changed vehicles and off to Rockville to play euchre with Dorothy Cronk (I never would have gotten there!), but they recruited Lori Gordon too, so we were the four musketeers? What a fun evening, what a lovely little hall. I was so impressed with their well over $1,000 worth of houses. They are gorgeous. Lovely photos, lovely flowers, lovely people. We did ride home with a winner! Good coffee/sweets. Ladies' high, Marjorie; ladies' lone hands, Sandra; men's high, Ken and lones, too; ladies' low, Lori; men's low, Don.

Back down the long and winding road and home with lots of new impressions to ponder. I think a very good day,

Well, Wednesday wasn't so bad, either. When I closed up the door after cribbage my son was waiting for me. I had talked to him earlier in the day and said I would take him out to supper. Well, we tried to find a spot in South Baymouth. We tried K.M.R and tried Loco Beanz. By golly, I didn't realize my side of the Island had folded up already. It's only mid-September. I know the weather feels like it. The leaves are turning like "speedy," autumn shades. So much for global warming and furnaces everywhere are doing their thing!

Anyway, to make a short story longer, like I always do, we ended up at Green Acres, Derek had to do a lot of back tracking but I did have a great visit with my son and we had a good meal. I'm so glad Wade has given up telling jokes. Derek and Wade were friends when they lived in Cambridge.

Our cribbage had eight tables and enough food to feed a threshing crew. Two birthday cakes, three birthday people. Dorothy Allard brought a happy birthday to me cake, but Joy made her one as well. Dorothy, Glenda and Hugh all got a candle! High hand, Ruth McGregor, 24; first, Shirley and Kathy, 94; second, Glenda and Beverly, 937; third, Laura and Patrysha, 934; low, Gib and Florence, 849; door prizes, Beverly, Glenn and me! 14 teams today over 900s, yay.

I went around to euchre and waited. The tables came out right, so I came home with luck. I'll get birthday cake later? Euchre tournament September.

Yes, I did get my cake! Everyone was so busy yawning, Tara had worked, Sherry, Dave and Roy, too. Skylar passed her bedtime was ready to stay up. I felt unnecessarily like "here's your hat, what's your hurry," stuff. I was tired, too, just slower moving! Jacob had spent his day at Providence Bay. It sounded like his aunt was there, too; he had a busy day as well. Sherry had him a year older than his actual. Well, he is new into his 20th year.

Euchre results: men's high, Hank, 78; men's lone hands, John, 5; men's low, Dave N., 45; ladies' high, Beth, 84; ladies' lone hands, Beth, 4; ladies' low, Annette, 53; door, Reg Hall. Back home in my Layzee Girl chair. The family events we all agree don't last as long as when Mum was on the scene. A couple of cribbage games at each end of Sherry's long table. Our end, Derek and I defeating Lori and Pauline three. The other end players were Tristen and Rick against Susan and Sherry. This was of course after the surprise birthday dinner. The delicious potluck style to celebrate Derek's 65th birthday. Dinner started the minute Ray and I got there. He was cooking. Of course, it always ends with the birthday cake, a pineapple upside down with 65 candle décor and song. The house had helium balloons and stars and banners, noting 65 as well! Susan created a bag full of fun gifts to open, whoope cushion and such things an older person may have use for. Including a John C. Hall date book from the John Deere era in 1957 (I think). Some cute and wonderful cards with nice gifts inside. Tara brought me home with food for tomorrow's lunch.

Other party goers, Jodi, Skylar, Tara, Tavis and Alicia, Dave (his house) and Wayne. 17 of us in all. Another fun family function.

It was Tory's birthday on the 15th, Derek, Jodi and Tristen will see him in Ottawa this week and have a close encounter with third grandchild Derek for the first time, except by Skype. Tristen, too, is heading home to Alberta.

Do you know if you put overripe bananas or banana skins outside it attracts and feeds the butterflies? Today an admiral and a mourning cloak fed as I watched and also an oversized fly, 1 1/4" at least. It looked crossed eyed as its huge eyes joined in the middle? A new species? Also, a skinny black bee kind of with a long four jointed tail that bends when it is stopped and extends when flying, about 5" long. Interesting?

Susan stopped in on her way home from Heritage Day, bringing a hamburger to me, thanks! I forgot about it, didn't wake up the second time until 11:30 am, too late to go to church. I need time to get mobile in the morning. These parties are wearing me down. Did soak up some sun, though.

by Dr. Janice Mitchell

September brings with it back to school vibes and the onset of a new season. Learning and excitement. As with any profession, ongoing education is important in the veterinary field as there are always new developments and updates. This article is inspired by my recent attendance at an international bee conference, and thus learning something completely new as it pertains to the veterinary world. Bring on apitherapy.

Apitherapy: the definition being the use of products derived from bees as medicine, including honey, propolis, pollen, royal jelly and venom. As in a prior article, it had been discussed that the use of honey, either unpasteurized or the highly coveted Manuka honey, was excellent in wound care as it had antibacterial and tissue regenerative properties. At our clinic, we have had some wonderful success using a commercially made medical Manuka honey (Medi-honey) in the treatment of superficial wounds, and the same results achieved recently using unpasteurized local honey (in a bull nonetheless!). Again, this anecdotal success has been documented by other veterinarians and doctors in other countries, and by our own teaching college, the Ontario Veterinary College.

What is new, however, is the addition of propolis, pollen, royal jelly and venom. I will start with propolis.

Propolis is a sticky resin that bees collect from tree buds and bark. It is what bees use to line the insides of their colonies to seal up any cracks or crevices to keep their home airtight. It is what I joke as being 'bee glue.' The amazing thing about propolis, as I learned, is that it has numerous actions including being an antibacterial, antiviral, antioxidant, anti-fungal, anti-inflammatory and immunostimulant compound. Wow! As such, I learned how two separate veterinarians in both France and Italy were using a combination of honey and propolis products to treat an array of illnesses such as chronic ear infections, eye ulcers, allergies and oral infections.

Pollen was also mentioned at this conference. Pollen, the male seed of a plant, is the primary source of dietary protein for bees. Bees collect pollen to make "beebread" by mixing it with honey or with nectar and adding enzymes that prevent the pollen from germinating. It has become a popular energy-enhancing nutritional supplement because it is about 25 percent protein and contains all the essential amino acids and vitamins and minerals as needed by humans, except Vitamin B12. Pollen is a good source of enzymes and also has high anti-oxidant activity. Pollen has been documented into being used as a desensitization treatment, similar to allergy 'shots,' and may aid in the management of environmental allergies.

Royal jelly is a milky substance that worker female bees produce from glands in their head. They feed this substance to their larva and for those larva that selectively receive extra feedings, these become queens—the difference between a normal worker female bee and a queen bee is four or five years of longevity and an ability to lay and produce fertile eggs. One can see why then royal jelly has become a popular supplement, especially in China, to consume for the hopes of a longer, healthier life. In fact, the Chinese have selectively bred for a bee that produces a high amount of royal jelly, dubbed "the Royal Jelly Bee."

While there is still much to be learned about royal jelly, there are many recent studies from Europe and Asia which show how useful it can be. A Japanese study found that royal jelly has an anti-fatigue effect in exercising mice. In China and Russia, royal jelly was effective in treating chronic viral and bacterial infections, anorexia, varicose veins, and stomach ulcers. During a flu epidemic in Yugoslavia, it was noted that those who consumed royal jelly daily were less likely to get the flu. Royal jelly also helps promote collagen synthesis and is beginning to be found in many topical dermatologic products.

Last on the list, bee venom, or 'the sting.' Bee-venom therapy has been used for treating conditions including arthritis and multiple sclerosis. The theory behind the treatment is that bee stings cause inflammation leading to an anti-inflammatory response by the immune system. On a personal note, this last one makes me a little nervous as I know at one point or another most veterinarians have had emergency calls of a dog or cat that develops hives or facial swelling or even life threatening respiratory difficulties after being accidentally stung by a winged insect. I also know how much variation can occur between a human's reaction to a sting as I hardly react to a sting when I work with my bees and my husband puffs right up.

All in all, I learned that much more is to be learned about this science. It seems that other countries have much more experience in this field than we do in North America where we rely more on Western Medicine and the pharmaceutical companies. I did learn one thing in particular however and the take home message is that the bee is an amazing creature and we humans and animals can only continue to benefit as long as we take care of the environment of the bees so that they may continue to share their gifts with us.

Auxiliary News

The first meeting of 2019-2020 was held on September 10 in the Multi Purpose Room. President Dawn Orr welcomed all and reflected on events held from May to September.

The mandate of the Manitoulin Health Centre Auxiliary is to enhance patient services; and to assist the Manitoulin Health Centre in every way possible in the interests of the best patient care. This necessitates fundraising! Our objective is to fundraise to provide the best for all patients. Our main contributions include free TV, equipment purchases, tuck cart services and care bags.

We thank the Rainbow Country Cruisers for their support. A cheque for $2,666.75 from the car show was presented on behalf of all Cruiser members. A sincere thank you to all involved. The auxiliary has been invited to be a partner in the auction to be held at the car show in 2020. We would be responsible for providing 12 items and three workers to assist in the auction. The auxiliary would benefit from the proceeds of the auction. More details will follow.

The auxiliary had a booth at Summer Fest in Manitowaning. Sales netted over $1,000. Book sales are over $1,000. The coin box collection continues to be a source of funds. Nearly $900 since May! Over nine years, donations have surpassed $10,000. Sincere thanks to the members who organized and volunteered at Summerfest and to Dave Sylvester for spearheading and continuing the supervision of the coin box collection.

Donations to the In Memoriam Fund and purchases at the tuck cart and lottery continued throughout the summer. More time will be spent at the next meeting to plan upcoming events.

The Hospital Equipment Project for People Lottery is now fully staffed. We apologize for the sporadic opening at the Tuck Cart Room over the past few months. Here are the happy folks to greet you from 11 am to 1 pm, Monday to Friday. Monday, Dawn Orr; Tuesday, Laila Kiviahio; Wednesday, Carmelita Genereux; and Thursday, Ken Ferguson. Welcome on board, Ken! On Friday we have a rotary schedule so each person does one shift a month. Ann Slaght, Shirley McGregor, Dave Sylvester and Marilee Hore will take their turns. Marilee is also the chairperson of the lottery. Thanks for doing this for many years.

When you're buying tickets or snacks, don't forget to take home a book or two from the tuck cart. All books on the cart are free.

There are only four Saturday Farmers' Market days left. Pick up a stock of books to read over the winter months. Support the MHC auxiliary!

Make sure you give of yourself to build up others on your life's journey. Giving builds you up too. Give time to the Manitoulin Health Centre auxiliary. It's membership month. For $2 a year you can be an active member or a supporter. Surprise membership chair Leona Sylvester at 705-368-1709. Come to the next meeting on October 10 at 7 pm in the board room. We need more members. All are welcome.

Recipes from Rose's Kitchen

by Rose Diebolt
rjdiebolt@hotmail.com

Baking gluten free without lots of sugar can be challenging. Texture and taste is a big change from using regular flour and processed white sugar but very adaptable. The following recipe works and tastes great.

Date Sweetened Pumpkin Bread

I switched the pumpkin to unsweetened applesauce. I made this recipe two times. The first time I used sorghum flour and the second time the coconut flour. They both worked. The loaf is much softer in texture (than using regular flour) so it cuts much better when it is cooled completely in the fridge. Use parchment paper because it is much easier to lift out the loaf, from the pan, to let it cool.

- 1/2 cup almond or coconut milk
- 1 cup pitted dates (I use the Parnoosh because they are softer)
- 1 1/2 cups pumpkin puree or applesauce
- 1 1/2 cups almond flour
- 1/2 cup coconut flour
- 2 tsp cinnamon
- 1 tsp ginger
- 1/2 tsp nutmeg
- 1 tsp baking soda
- 1/2 tsp salt
- 2 eggs
- 1 tsp vanilla

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Line the loaf pan with parchment paper. If the parchment paper is stiff, a trick: I will take the cut piece and hold it under my kitchen tap until it is wet. I then squish it, to get rid of the extra water, and then place it in the loaf pan. Much easier to work with and the parchment paper will lie in the pan instead of trying to pop out! It won't effect your baking.
  2. Heat the milk until warm and then add the dates. Let them soak for about five minutes.
  3. In a food processor, blend pumpkin with dates and milk until well blended. Set aside.
  4. In a large bowl, mix flours, dry spices, baking soda, and salt.
  5. In a small bowl, whisk eggs and vanilla. Add the pumpkin-date mixture and mix gently together. Add the wet mixture to the dry ingredients, stirring gently.
  6. Pour into prepared pan and bake for 45 to 50 minutes or until set in the centre.
  7. Remove from oven and cool completely before slicing.
- *This loaf is not very sweet. If you must, spread slices with honey or maple syrup.

Fourteen kilometres of Killarney's Hartley Bay Road to be rehabilitated for improved safety

KILLARNEY—Last month, Marc Serré, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Rural Economic Development, the Honourable Bernadette Jordan, Minister of Rural Economic Development and Member of Parliament for Nickel Belt announced funding for the rehabilitation of 14 kilometres of Hartley Bay Road in Killarney.

The project will include the realignment of an estimated 175 metres of road to remove blind curves, replacement of three culverts, installation of approximately 550 feet of guardrail, and posting of additional safety signs along sharp curves.

The rehabilitation of Hartley Bay Road will improve road conditions and driver safety, and ensure the longevity of the road.

The Government of Canada is investing over $1.3 million in this project through the Rural and Northern Communities Infrastructure Stream. The Government of Ontario is contributing over $762,000 and the Municipality of Killarney is providing over $398,000 towards this project.

The Killarney region has already received nearly $370,000 in federal infrastructure investments since 2016 which has allowed the municipality to undertake road, landfill and waste water infrastructure projects that have positively benefited the area.

"Improving transportation infrastructure helps ensure that Canadians have more time to spend with their families," Mr. Serré said. "Once complete, the Hartley Bay Road rehabilitation will result in a safer and more efficient roadway for residents and visitors. This investment will help stimulate economic development for local businesses and enhance tourism so that many more can safely visit the beautiful Nickel Belt - Greater Sudbury region!"

"The municipality is pleased to be the recipient of an Investing in Canada Infrastructure Grant that will be used to improve Hartley Bay Road in Ward 2, and to address safety concerns for our residents, tourists and local businesses," Virginia Rook, mayor of the Municipality of Killarney.
