MSS legacy so much more than a fight

Fifty years ago from this moment, the groundwork was being laid for the new school that would open in one year's time, Manitoulin Secondary School. In a year's time, our MSS will be celebrating 50 years of secondary school education for Manitoulin Island, a tradition that began in September, 1969.

As the old local school boards were amalgamated into one Island-wide board as part of the centralizing process, the new school in the planning stages 50 years ago was being hailed as a model "integrated school" where the young people from Manitoulin's two cultures would all learn together.

And so it has been.

This past week saw an unfortunate incident take place at Manitoulin Secondary School that could shake any progress toward unity between communities that the school was originally intended to forge.

While the pundits of social media were quick to spin the incident as racially motivated, there is little evidence from what has so far been revealed that this is in fact the case. It seems to have originated in some less than ideal interactions that took place between a female and a male student that quickly spiralled out of control and degenerated into a series of scuffles in which some students took sides, some students attempted to intervene and separate the combatants resulting in a number of assaults and physical altercations.

Regardless of the personal issues from which these incidents sprang, and of course the quite natural concerns of parents for the safety of the students attending the school, it is the reactions within the wider community that should actually concern us all the most.

Social media quickly upped the ante on the situation by repeating rumours that shots had been fired at the school (apparently there were firecrackers involved at some point)—and none of this did anything to aid the situation. The social media contagion quickly spread to neighbouring Espanola, and the Espanola police feel the MSS incident led to a secure and hold order at Espanola schools. (The Espanola incident stemmed from a threat issued against the school anonymously.)

Schoolyard fights are hardly anything new under the sun, and Friday's fight, like most such altercations between students, apparently originally took place outside MSS. But the fact the violence spread so quickly to so many young people, and that such incidents took place over a short period of time at all, points clearly to tensions that are in place and need to be resolved within the school community.

None of these issues will be resolved through reactionary social media posts—put simply, you aren't helping people if you communicate possibly inflammatory opinions to the general public.

Manitoulin Island has largely been something of a poster child for reconciliation and good relations between communities. This is something that many Islanders, particularly those of previous generations, have taken great pride in. Not perfect, to be sure, but certainly there are a great many bonds and friendships that have been formed on the ice and playing fields, in the classrooms and in the playgrounds on this Island. Many older Native and non-Native parents look upon the current situation that has unfolded with horrified disbelief—and well they should. This is not who we want to be. This is not who we want our children to be.

The original slight that engendered this latest outburst of violence will pass from the memories of those not directly involved relatively quickly. But these incidents should be taken for what they are, a canary in the coal mine that we must not ignore or bury away as something too unpleasant to examine.

In a year's time, we'll be celebrating a half century of MSS as Manitoulin's central school.

It's important that Friday's incident not be seen to mar what has been a generally successful educational experience.

As parents, we must be careful of what we say to our children. As parents, we must be vigilant about what our children are saying about others.

We know how to behave civilly. It's common sense and Friday's response to a boy-girl squabble by an initially small cadre of students was anything but common sense.

As a community of concerned parents, caregivers and teachers we must come together to heal the rifts that are clearly developing and to find a way to remove the stresses that can cause such outbreaks to occur. Nothing will be gained by taking one side or another. There is only one side, that is the side that cares about all of our children, their safety, their mental health and their education.

We must set aside any blame or retribution, leaving it in the hands of the courts, both legal and academic, to deal with offences such as assault or breaches of conduct. Instead of hurling epithets or insults, we must reach out to each other to find solutions and reconciliation to the underlying causes of the behaviours and retake the noble aspirations of our school.

Manitoulin Secondary School is an institution that we all can justifiably take pride in. Let us not let a handful of reactionary social media posts derail us from the path of unity originally set out by the founders of MSS, for at the end of the day, we are all Mustangs.

MSS student brawl leads to six charges

Additional charges likely in unprecedented event

by Alicia McCutcheon

M'CHIGEENG—Last Friday marked an unprecedented and disturbing event at Manitoulin Secondary School (MSS), when an all out brawl involving 50 or more students, both boys and girls, suddenly erupted. The event, students report, had a decidedly racial overtone.

Three Grade 10 girls, of both First Nation and Caucasian descent, spoke anonymously with The Expositor over the weekend, all saying they were deeply disturbed by what had transpired on Friday, September 14.

The girls said the morning started off uneasily when a very public argument broke out between a girl and a boy, both students at MSS. From there the fight escalated, becoming racially charged and bringing hordes of students outside to the side parking lot, near the back of the school. The Grade 10 students told The Expositor that two lines had

Edmonton woman wins Wiky's 'Chase the Ace'

$1.3 million purse after 42 weeks

WIKWEMKOONG—Congratulations are pouring in from all points for the winner of the Wikwemkoong Chase the Ace draw.

Kerry Kaboni (48) of Edmonton and who is originally from Wikwemkoong held the winning ticket for the 42th draw, taking home a cool $1,377,707.80 in total prize money. That's $91,543 in weekly prize money and $1,286,163 in progressive jackpot cash. Ms. Kaboni said her win came as a surprise.

"I would hope," she laughed, but she hardly dared dream. "It still hasn't sunk in. I bought a book a week from my cousin Ashley. I figured it wasn't that much and even if I didn't win anything, it was going to a good cause."

In fact, in many ways the biggest beneficiaries of the draw will be the

Wiikwemikong Tribal Police, OPP bust grow-op, net $300K worth of pot

WIKWEMKOONG—In the early morning hours of September 12, members of the Wiikwemikong Tribal Police Service, in cooperation with the Ontario Provincial Police Tactical Response Unit, executed a controlled drugs and substances search warrant on a residence in the rural areas of Wiikwemkoong Unceded Territory and dismantled an illegal outdoor marijuana grow operation after receiving anonymous information identifying its size and location.

As a result of the investigation and collected information, officers have seized over 200 marijuana plants (of varying size) and the items associated to offences related to the manufacturing and cultivation of cannabis marijuana. Each plant has the potential to produce approximately $1,000 worth of marijuana. In addition, there was a quantity of cannabis oil and dried plants that were seized, including firearms and ammunitions. The total estimated street value of the seized drugs is valued over $300,000. As a result of the investigation, an arrest warrant has been issued for David Bradley Shawanda, age 38, of Wiikwemkoong who has been charged with the following: discharge a firearm into or at a place in a reckless manner; produce a Schedule II substance (cannabis marijuana), possession of a Schedule II substance for the purpose of trafficking over 3 kg, produce a Schedule II substance (other than marijuana), possession of a Schedule II substance for the purpose of trafficking over 3 kg, unauthorized possession of a firearm and careless storage of a firearm, weapon, prohibited device or ammunition. "The public is reminded that cannabis is still illegal to possess, sell and or grow in any quantity, without a medical prescription," states Chief of Police Terry McCaffrey. Little Current family pushing for public drug coverage seek support in review period

Medication to support boy with cystic fibrosis can cost nearly $250,000

by Warren Schlote
LITTLE CURRENT—Ben Buzzell can only breathe at two-thirds the capacity of his other Grade 5 classmates. He carries around a slate of pills, inhalers and what is called a PEP machine, a tool he uses to clear mucus from his lungs. He has been living with this condition for his whole 10-year-old life, though he only received a diagnosis at the age of three.

Ben has cystic fibrosis. Cystic fibrosis is a condition that affects over 4,200 Canadians, with a majority of patients being adults. However, one baby per week is diagnosed with the disease. Unfortunately, mandatory screenings for cystic fibrosis were implemented just two months after he was born, so he went three years before being diagnosed with the condition with which he was living.

"It's pretty annoying when people tease me about being so short and skinny," says Ben. He adds that the condition impedes his ability to participate in cross country running and other activities he would otherwise enjoy. "When I do sports, I usually end up coughing a lot," he says. "I get headaches easily, and when I go swimming I can get cold pretty easy."

"It's stressful, it interrupts one's lifestyle, and it's just in the way," says his dad Zak Nicholls, adding that Ben has to attend four blood clinics per year to undergo tests.

There are drugs available to help manage the condition, but they come at a cost: about $249,000 per year for each person who uses them. That's the price for a drug called Orkambi, produced by Boston-based Vertex Pharmaceuticals.

According to an information flyer by Cystic Fibrosis Canada and provided to The Expositor, a blind drug test of Orkambi resulted in improved lung function, fewer lung infections, fewer hospitalizations and increases in Body Mass Index, which, it says, increases survival rates.

Orkambi is the second generation of cystic fibrosis drugs by Vertex. The first version, Kalydeco, is already available publicly in Ontario under the exceptional access program (EAP). EAP is a program to which patients can apply in the hopes of getting special consideration to cover their drug costs.

The problem with cystic fibrosis drugs is their limited effectiveness on different strains – drugs only work on the specific mutation of the disease for which they were designed. The problem lies with the fact that cystic fibrosis

Doric Lodge ceremony celebrates Second World War vets' 70th year as a Mason

by Michael Erskine
LITTLE CURRENT—Freemasonry enjoys a storied and mysterious reputation, thanks in large part to the private nature of the fraternal organization, but on Tuesday, September 11 the Doric Lodge in Little Current opened its doors to The Expositor in order to celebrate the accomplishment of one of its own.

Blair Sullivan of Providence Bay was being honoured with a 70-year pin and being presented with a plaque noting his singular accomplishment as a Masonic member whose service spans seven decades.

John Hodder, whose duty that night was as "Tyler," the individual who sits guard upon the door, a drawn sword near to hand in symbolic nod to his charge of guarding the inner sanctum of the temple, as the initial business of the Doric Lodge and its members was dealt with prior to admitting a non-member to help record the historic occasion.

A series of distinct knocks alerted the Tyler (sometimes spelled Tiler) that the members of the Lodge were ready for the ceremony and ritual of the presentation of the pin.

Mr. Sullivan, a decorated war veteran and long-time education administrator who retired to the Island in the early 1980s, was led to the western side of the central altar in the Lodge, facing east and toward the Worshipful Master of the Doric Lodge (worshipful in the archaic sense of very respected, not literally worshipped), Dan Clarke, where the citation of his membership was read out in solemn ritual.

Moving to stand in front of the eastern wall, Mr. Sullivan was duly pinned with the insignia of his 70 years as a member of the Masonic Order by Sudbury Manitoulin District Deputy Grand Master Paavo Liukko.

Following the presentation, Mr. Sullivan was invited to address the assembly of the Lodge. Mr. Sullivan expressed his gratitude for the recognition and spoke about his experiences serving in the military during

Wiikwemkoong's WDC plants fruit tree orchard on Manitowaning property

by Giselle Aiabens
WIKWEMKOONG—Enaadmaagehjik (Wiikwemikong Development Commission) held a community tree-planting event on Thursday, August 30 in which 74 different fruit trees, hardy to zone 3 and 4, including apple, pear, cherry and plum were planted at the Old Mitchell Farm in Manitowaning.

Enaadmaagehjik was successful in its application to Trees Canada to develop a community training fruit orchard allowing community members to develop skills while also supporting local food sharing initiatives.

According to Marc Hébert, professor/coordinator in the School of Trades and Applied Technologies at Collège Boréal in Sudbury and Trees Canada representative at the tree-planting event, "Trees Canada is the leading tree-planting charity in Canada, dedicated to improving the lives of Canadians by planting and nurturing trees." In an address to the staff and volunteers at the event, Mr.

Hébert said that the charity has assisted with planting "more than 80 million trees, greened more than 600 schoolyards, helped restore places hit by natural disasters and brought together urban forestry experts greening cities all across Canada."

Mr. Hébert heralded the training fruit orchard as one of the initiatives that Trees Canada is proud to support

Assiginack student Jocelyn Kuntsi appointed as an Ontario legislative page

by Michael Erskine
QUEEN'S PARK—An Assiginack Public School Grade 8 student is embarking on the adventure of a lifetime as she takes up her duties as a legislative page today (Wednesday, September 19). Jocelyn Kuntsi will be serving in her capacity for a month of the fall session of the legislature.

Jocelyn Kuntsi, centre, stands in front of the Speaker's Chair at Queen's Park as she prepares for her duties as a legislative page with other students from across Ontario.

"I have been selected to serve as a legislative page at the Legislative Assembly of Ontario in Toronto from Wednesday September 19 until October 4," said Ms. Kuntsi. "I will serve as a messenger on the floor of the Legislative Chamber; meet parliamentary figures and learn about Ontario's parliamentary system of government."

Ms. Kuntsi admits to being pretty excited about her upcoming duties, but there has been plenty of homework leading up to standing with the Speaker in the legislature.

"I earned my spot in the program by submitting an application that included an essay outlining my achievements, involvements and suitability for the program," she supplied. "I especially highlighted my ballet, theatre, piano and working with Me to We. Since I was accepted into the program, I have had to study and learn the faces, names and locations of the 107 MPPs before they arrived at Queen's Park for their first day."

Ms. Kuntsi will likely be making some new friends over the next month. "We all come from across the province to be together at Queen's Park," she said. "We will develop long lasting friendships and meet fellow students with similar interests as they participate in this unique educational program. It will be very interesting and rewarding to work with other people from around Ontario."

"During a typical day in the program, I will arrive at Queen's Park at approximately 8 am, dress in my uniform and then prepare the Legislative Chamber for the morning's debates. As the day progresses, I will be involved in a

October 7 tribute to Austin Hunt will celebrate a remarkable man

An elder statesman who will be able to pick the time of his own retirement

To the Expositor:

On October 7, Thanksgiving weekend, the Municipality of Billings will pay tribute to a community leader, Austin Hunt, a major influence here for more than 50 years. Speeches will list his many achievements, but as a political groupie I am aware of one less obvious, but most significant point. Aus will be joining a rare group of career politicians able to pick the time and manner of their retirement. Others, with even more recognizable names, were less fortunate.

The name Jean Chretien comes to mind, since the Notwithstanding Clause he, together with Roy Romanow and Roy McMurtry, created to end the deadlock on the Charter is dominating the news currently. I was in the Toronto Convention Centre in November 2003 when Prime Minister Jean Chretien "retired" except it was clear he was pushed by members of his own party. I was in Sheila Copps' suite that night with many of her friends. I'm sure Sheila thought that a generous concession speech would heal the wounds of the party and re-unite it, and she would live to fight another day. Yet weeks later, I was a scrutineer for Sheila in a nomination battle for a seat. Sheila had signed up 6,600 people only to find the Martin forces had sold 7,000 for their man, Tony Valeri (in total, the year-round population of Manitoulin). She remains "nobody's baby" but didn't get to pick the date of her retirement!

Aus will have the opportunity to play elder statesman over the next few years, much as Jean Chretien has been doing over the last few days. Billings, and the Island as a whole, has challenges going forward. We've seen over the last few years with Rainbow District School Board antics, we are getting marginalized. We collect taxes for the school boards, but apparently they don't want our input on how they spend those tax revenues. On the Island, we now have two planning boards, since NEMI struck out on its own. We have the MMA for informal discussions, but it has no legal standing for representing Manitoulin as a whole. We have to find ways to punch above our weight.

Recent events have raised questions about political family dynasties. The Fords in Toronto, the Trumps in Washington have not been positive role models, and the jury is still out on the Trudeau in Ottawa. Remains to be seen what happens to the Hunt dynasty in Billings. One thing for sure, Aus will be a hard act to follow! Congratulations, Mayor Hunt! May you enjoy your personally selected retirement!

If renewables are cheap, why is electricity so expensive?

The letter writing debate continues

To the Expositor:

The following comments are made in response to a letter submitted to this paper September 5, 2018 'Writer disputes validity of green energy costs sources.'

"If solar and wind are so cheap, why are they making electricity so expensive" is the title of a May 16, 2018 paper written by Michael Shellenberger. He is the founder and president of Environmental Progress, 2018 candidate for Governor of California, an environmental policy expert and winner of a 2008 Green Book Award.

He noticed that there is a lot of confusion in the media regarding the cost of renewable energy, and in spite of the hype that this particular source of energy enjoys in the press, it tends to drive up the cost of power.

He has had a look around the world where renewables have assumed significant portions of electrical generation. Here is a brief summary of the information: the full report with supporting information can be found online.

Electricity prices increased by: 51 percent in Germany during its expansion of solar and wind energy from 2006 to 2016; 24 percent in California during its solar energy build-out from 2011 to 2017; and over 100 percent in Denmark since 1995 when it began deploying renewables in earnest.

He then looked at other sources to see if costs moved in the same manner. Natural gas decreased by 50 percent to 70 percent and nuclear and coal remained flat.

Regarding nuclear power, the energy leaders in this area are Illinois, France, Sweden and South Korea. They enjoy some of the cheapest energy in the world. For example, France is 45 percent lower than Germany and Illinois is 42 percent lower than California.

Denmark and Germany have the first and second most expensive electricity in Europe.

These bits of information from Mr. Shellenberger would seem to support the contention that renewables are also the cause of high electrical energy costs here in Ontario and his summary falls in line with other sources. The issue is the unreliable nature of renewable energy. For every megawatt of installed wind generation for example, the same capacity must also be installed as reserve to be used when the wind doesn't blow and the sun doesn't shine. Where natural gas is available, this is the preferred back-up. Where it is not, coal is used for spinning reserve and Germany is again a good example which is why, in spite of the push to renewables, CO2 emissions there are not declining. Another problem is the need to off-load when it is generated and not required. Typically, this results in selling at a loss as it is here in Ontario.

Mr. Shellenberger is certainly not on the right of the political spectrum but it seems that even he, on the left of the story can appreciate what is going on.

And now to Naomi Klein. When her book, 'The Shock Doctrine: The Rise of Disaster Capitalism' was released, The Economist magazine published a series of reviews and I summarize a few of the reviews as follows:

"Probably the most effective brand of emotional nonfiction to be published this year. But when it comes to the underlying message, and the standards of evidence used to support it, "The Shock Doctrine" is a true economics disaster."

(a comment from the same magazine from a few years prior) "Ms Klein's harshest critics must allow that, for an angry adolescent, she writes rather well. It takes journalistic skill of a high order to write page after page of engaging blather, so totally devoid of substance. What a pity she has turned her talents as a writer to a cause that can only harm the people she claims to care most about.

And my favourite used in a previous submission to The Expositor. "Ms. Klein is to serious social thought what a dog is to dancing."

It would seem that the critics of the book in question are not quite as enamored as her followers are with the work.

For someone to declare (fact based) that The Auditor General of Ontario has been lying to the people of Ontario is a mind-numbing bit of silliness that perhaps should be included and expanded for Ms. Klein's next publication.

As for Milton Friedman, his legacy is secure as is his Nobel Prize for Economic Sciences awarded to him in 1976 for his achievements in the fields of consumption analysis, monetary history and theory, and for his demonstration of the complexity of stabilization policy. The Fraser Institute is a source of information appreciated by many, probably because the organization understands the meaning of the words "fact" and "evidence."

History of racism at Manitoulin Secondary School recalled

"People make other people feel small because they feel small"

To the Expositor:

I am not a parent of a student currently at MSS, but I attended the school in 1985. It was the first and only place that I've ever been called a 'squaw.'

It didn't bug me too much, because I knew at the time how ignorant people can be. I just said, "yep!" and kept walking. It did shock me, though, that my first experience with outright racism, was on my home ground, and I'd lived in Boulder, Montana, one of the whitest areas I've ever been in.

Racism is a blight on the Island that nobody chooses to combat against publicly.

I grew up with white people, and when they would say something about someone's skin colour I would remind them about my skin colour, and they would say, "But you're like us, so it doesn't matter."

I believe I was representing what the settlers wanted—to kill the Indian, save the woman.

I didn't feel comfortable in my own skin until I learned about my heritage, and my roots in my community. Now I am proud of who I am.

I've known all kinds of people, all over this continent. People make other people feel small because they feel small. People who are proud of who they are, try to lift others up, and help them out, not squash them!

Maybe the problem is not what's on the outside of the body, maybe it's what's inside.

Maybe the staff needs to take a look at what they're doing, and the message they're portraying.

The Little Current swing bridge is an icon of our community

Never mind the wait, kick back and enjoy that which surrounds you

To the Expositor:

We've got to keep the swing bridge. From one North American to another, it is one of the premier icons of our community. It is an integral part of our heritage and we should do everything we can to keep it as it is! Spend an average of $600,000 a year on its "maintenance." If we tear it down and start over? There is naught "progress" there at any level.

I heard from a friend that what's driving the recent debate over its fate is the "complaints" and whinging from locals and American tourists alike about "the wait." Whether, God forbid, to let boats get through or to let vehicles come through from "the other direction" which is confirmed by the recent spate of drivers who have started running the only red light in town.

"Slow", my young friend Nicholas chimed in one day as we looked out on our tiny portion of paradise. My advice? Breathe deep. Smell the air. Listen to the wind. Watch the sky. Admire the art in the rock and the water that sustain us, and wait until its your turn.

Thanks for listening,
Thanks for all you do! I love especially your first-rate editorial page! As I've said elsewhere, you often rival the New York Times.

Central Manitoulin candidates square off in Providence Bay

by Michael Erskine

PROVIDENCE BAY—Moderator Alex Baran (a Central Manitoulin councillor who is not running in the October 22 municipal election) gave a brief outline of the voting procedure in Central Manitoulin before introducing the candidates taking part in an all-candidates meeting held 7 pm at the Providence Bay Community Centre on Wednesday, September 12.

Mayor Richard Stephens was in attendance, but as he is acclaimed in his position, he did not take part in the debate. There are three wards in Central Manitoulin and two councillors are elected in each. Councillor Linda Farquhar has been acclaimed and there is one vacancy in Ward 3 which will be likely be appointed by council following the election. In each of Ward 1 and Ward 2 there are three people running for the two available seats.

Councillor Baran noted that the Municipality of Central Manitoulin utilizes a mail-in ballot system, but that if someone does not receive their ballot, electors can go into the municipal office. “You will need photo ID with your name on it as well as your address,” he noted.

In addition to the Central Manitoulin candidates, candidates for Rainbow District School Board were also invited to the session. Linda Erskine was in attendance, but Margaret Stringer was unable to attend. Ms. Stringer sent a representative to the meeting to speak on her behalf. Former Central Manitoulin principal Fern Patterson read a statement from Ms. Stringer. See this Friday’s Recorder for a report on the trustee portion of the meeting.

There are three candidates running in each of Wards 1 and 2.

The first candidate to speak was David Gilchrist of Spring Bay who is running for Ward 2 (Campbell) councillor. Mr. Gilchrist relayed his strong military experience as where he obtained his straightforward approach and noted the electrical tickets he obtained from his time in the service.

Mr. Gilchrist said he is committed to bringing the electors’ concerns to council and said he was looking to the community to “direct where you want me to go.” The candidate noted that his phone number is in the phone book and he invited electors to “phone me anytime with your concerns.”

Incumbent Ward 1 councillor Dale Scott, a retired veterinarian, thanked the audience for coming out and noted that he has been honoured to serve the community as a councillor over the last four years. “I have enjoyed it very much,” he said.

Married with four grown daughters, Mr. Scott said that his experience as a family man and the operator of a small business, as well as his time on volunteer boards and as a member of the Lions Club, have been great assets in conducting his duties.

Mr. Scott’s priorities include a passion for assisted living. “So many of our elderly need assisted living,” he said. “Some have had to move away from the community.” While the seniors’ housing in the community is a start, Mr. Scott said much more needs to be done. He also listed the landfill situation in the community as a concern that will need to be dealt with and cited the need to create efficiencies in municipal operations—a process the current council has already started with the hiring of a specialized company to assess town assets. “We also need to keep taxation under control,” he said. “I ask myself ‘is it good for the community and is it worthwhile to spend taxpayers’ money on?’” He said that he makes it a policy to not let his own feelings take precedence over those of his constituents.

Ward 2 candidate Angela Johnston (nee McDonald) was born and raised in Central Manitoulin but moved away for school and work, living in Guelph until returning to the Island in 2011. She said she believes her experience of living in other communities helps her to understand different ways of doing things.

Married with two sons, Ms. Johnston said she believes she would bring the voice of a parent with young children to the council table, a demographic she believes would be an important asset.

Ward 2 candidate John Bissailon has been a resident of Providence Bay for the past four years, but has spent many summers over the past 37-odd years in the community where his five children have enjoyed their summer breaks.

“I know Providence Bay and the local interests,” he assured the audience, noting that he was very familiar with Mindemoya as well. “I intend to better our communities,” said Mr. Bissailon, adding that both Providence Bay and Mindemoya have important and complementary roles to play in the well-being of Central Manitoulin—“both at the same time.”

Mr. Bissailon has worked in the construction industry and he said that he felt that his experience will serve well in dealing with important infrastructure, citing such efficiencies as LED lighting as examples. “There is a better way of doing things,” he asserted. “I can offer my experience to make things better.”

He cited a “home for the elderly” as a priority, noting that the community has an aging population. “It is something we have to address,” said Mr. Bissailon. Another pressing priority is the town’s infrastructure. “Roads and infrastructure,” he said. “You have expressed a lot of issues about roads to me.”

But Mr. Bissailon noted that he wanted to acknowledge “what you can and can’t do with the tax dollars. It is costly to upgrade a road.”

Ward 2 incumbent Derek Stephens said that “it is good to see a good crowd coming out tonight. I want to say thank you to the folks running for councillor. It is a challenging position.”

Mr. Stephens cited his 27 years on the local fire department and his work in the long-term care industry. “I decided I wanted to represent my community,” he said. “As a council we have tried and tried to bring assisted living to the community,” he said. “Far too many people in the North are in nursing homes that don’t need to be there (if there were more supports in place to live at home). We do have irons in the fire, hopefully we will soon see something come to fruition.”

“I look forward to serving the municipality for another term,” he concluded.

Ward 2 candidate Steve Shaffer and his wife Lise live in the community and have “five children and six grandchildren” between them. Mr. Shaffer was raised in Spring Bay and went to school in the old Providence Bay school as well as the Mindemoya Old School.

Although many people may know Mr. Shaffer as the post master, he notes that he has retired from that position. But he pointed to his experience as a senior administrator, serving five years in Ottawa as a senior manager involved in process simplification.

He has also been very involved in minor hockey.

Mr. Shaffer admitted that he has been a vocal member of the community, often challenging decisions that have been made and that he would like an opportunity to be the voice of the people.

A key part of his platform involves simplification of communication and making things easier for businesses to prosper in the community. “We need to be fiscally responsible,” noted Mr. Shaffer.

straints and that the timeframe for this election had passed.

When Mr. Gilchrist asked why questions are not placed routinely on the ballot Councillor Stephens rejoined “because it would take four years to make a decision.”

Jan McQuay asked about the candidates’ concept of the future of Wagg’s Wood.

Mr. Bissailon noted that he had the opportunity to discuss the question at length at the Farmers’ Market. He responded that he believed that the community should have parks. “I come from a community with a lot of parks,” he said. He noted that Wagg’s Wood is “relatively pristine” and that “you have to maintain what you have got.”

Mr. Bissailon noted that some things must be covered out of the public purse because of the value they have for the community, using arenas as an example.

One gentleman identified as “Steve” suggested that council should lobby the federal government for a Canadian Coast Guard facility in Providence Bay, noting that while money has been spent on the east and west coasts, there has been virtually nothing spent on the Great Lakes.

“Good question,” responded Councillor Stephens. “I don’t think it has ever been thought of before. There was a plan many years ago that looked at the benefits of a port here, but nothing has really been talked about since.”

Ms. McQuay brought up the question of affordable housing in general for lower income families.

Mr. Bissailon noted that neither Providence Bay nor Spring Bay have the infrastructure that would tend to support an assisted living facility, but Mindemoya was better suited. “There is nothing the matter with Mindemoya being the centre,” he suggested.

An audience member referred to as Roxanne wanted to know if the candidates favoured “going forward or going backwards.”

Mr. Gilchrist said that he did not “want to re-invent the wheel.” He noted that he had seen a lot of new lieutenants come into a unit in the military and “want to drop everything.”

Mr. Bissailon said that he wanted to “take a different slant” to the question. He noted that most of the construction work that he had been involved in during his career was municipal in origin. He noted that there is a lot of balancing that must take place in making decisions as to what infrastructure work gets done. But he added that a lot of the concerns that he had heard in his canvassing of the community centred around very small projects that mean a lot to the local neighbourhood.

Lyle Dewar noted that Blue Road and Monument Road were in terrible shape and that with the poor work done to the highway by the Ministry of Transportation many more people were using those roads in order to avoid the highway.

“I have been a major proponent of Blue Road and Monument Road,” said Councillor Stephens, joking that if it were not for being where the mayor lived the work would have been long complete. “There are plans to get Blue Road done,” Councillor Stephens assured Mr. Dewar, adding that he was in favour of getting the work on Monument Road done as well.

Maja Mielonen, the driving force behind Manitoulin Island Cycling Associates brought up the poor condition of the tar and chip, noting that 6,000 cycling tourists make the trip to the Island each year. It was generally agreed that the materials need to be improved.

Questions were then raised about the emergency measures in the community, noting that many seniors could not drive to the warming shelters set up by the municipality.

Councillor Scott agreed that it was an issue and Mr. Shaffer said that emergency planning was “one of my interests.”

Challenged to bring a sense of vision to the meeting by Ms. Mielonen, Councillor Stephens noted that he would like to see both the Old School and the Community Centre in Mindemoya replaced by an energy efficient accessible building that could better meet the needs of the community.

Following a couple of statements by audience members on what they would like to see in the community, each of the candidates gave a closing statement that reiterated their main campaign approach.

In the question period following the candidate statements, former Central Manitoulin reeve Perry Anglin was first out of the gate with a question concerning the fate of the Mindemoya Old School building. Mr. Anglin distributed a copy of the question to the media when it was determined that the format did not fit that of the debate.

Following a preamble that describes the Mindemoya Old School as “a part of our local history and was important in the history of education in Ontario” and noting that council has applied for federal funding, Mr. Anglin’s question was: “Whether you will promise to keep the Old School if it can pay for itself with perhaps a minimal support from the township such as covering its insurance?” Mr. Anglin’s question continued on to note that another option for council “is to designate it as a heritage building and putting it up for sale on condition that it not be torn down. “Will you promise to support one of those options, or would you rather have council level the Old School and use the ground to build some modern facility in Mindemoya?”

Councillor Stephens noted that his concern over the Old School building is that there are “too many repairs needed to go on” and that those costs were pegged in the range of “about a million dollars.”

But Councillor Stephens did note that the current council has set up a committee to try and find a way forward and said that he would support any fiscally sound and sustainable solution found by the committee.

Mr. Gilchrist wondered if it was in the council’s power to dispose of the property.

Mr. Bissailon noted that he had been “caught at the Farmers’ Market” on that issue. He noted that as an “elevated building” it would be difficult to repurpose the building in a cost effective manner. He voiced a preference to have the private sector find a solution “rather than the taxpayer.” The alternative, he noted, would likely be to tear the building down and replace it with a modern facility.

Mr. Gilchrist noted that selling the building would bring in tax dollars to the municipality.

A question aimed at Councillor Scott asked about the form any “efficiencies” would take that council might find.

Councillor Scott noted that any major decision would likely be foreshadowed by a public meeting, but that he did not see a single move, rather a series of actions that would see more cost effective operations.

“I have always been an advocate of town hall meetings,” interjected Councillor Stephens. He cautioned that if the new Ontario government takes a page out of the former Harris government, municipalities may find any grants few and far between, while downloading may once again become a serious concern for municipalities.

Mr. Gilchrist suggested putting questions directly to the electors on a ballot.

Councillor Baran explained that putting questions on a ballot has serious time con-

M'Chigeeng's Lakeview School aims to be 'best in Ontario'

by Lori Thompson

M'CHIGEENG—There are new initiatives underway at Lakeview School in M'Chigeeng First Nation (MFN). Principal Gayle Payette provided an overview of their unique programs and successes but the biggest surprise may be in their vision statement. "Our vision statement," said Ms. Payette, "is becoming the premier elementary school in Ontario."

"Usually when people hear this, their mouths drop and they ask, 'why?'" she continued. "What people think is that we think highly of ourselves, but it's really that we think highly of our students and what they're capable of. We want the students to become successful in whatever endeavour they choose to go after, whether it's academic, cultural or language. We want them to use their own voice."

Lakeview School encompasses a full elementary program from kindergarten through to Grade 8. There is a core Ojibwe program from Grades 4 through 8 and the Anishinabe Revival Program (ARP) begins in Junior Kindergarten and runs through Grade 3. Staff include a newly appointed full-time school-based wellness worker and a literacy teacher that supports the Confident Learners program. There is a numeracy resource teacher, a physical education teacher and a special education resource teacher.

Last year they incorporated a cultural awareness instructor. In previous years a music teacher was there two days per week. "We switched that up to include cultural awareness where we had a gentleman from the community come in and do drumming and teachings about our culture," said Ms. Payette.

Another first last year was the addition of a school-based therapy dog named Bear, whose handler happened to be the literacy resource teacher. Bear is trained and insured to be at the school full-time; what Bear does is provide an opportunity for students to be comfortable or comforted. Bear attends three days a week and is well-loved throughout the school. Initially there were students who were terrified of dogs but after several months of watching other children interact with the dog they were able to increase their levels of comfort and interact with Bear themselves.

"At Lakeview School we went through a paradigm shift, from teaching to learning," Ms. Payette said. The experience begins at the earliest level. Full-day Kindergarten is enquiry based. Stations are set up and incorporate many outdoor based enquiries. Lakeview follows part of the curriculum in terms of the Confident Learners program but is more focused on letting the students take the lead with student-led activities, then taking the learning from them and incorporating it into the curriculum wherever they can. An example of this is when students were so impacted through learning about the importance of water last year that the Grade 1 class hosted a water walk. It was their own idea and was entirely student-led.

"The Confident Learners initiative is to ensure that all students are fluent readers and confident learners by the

Keep an eye out for school buses

The Manitoulin-Espanola Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) would like to remind motorists that school buses are back on our roads. Motorists should also be aware of the expected increase of pedestrians and cyclists and give themselves plenty of time to get to their destination.

In accordance with the Highway Traffic Act, motorists encountering a stopped school bus that has its overhead red signal-lights flashing shall stop before reaching the bus and shall not proceed until the bus moves or the overhead red signal-lights have stopped flashing. The minimum fine for failing to stop for a school bus is $400 and six demerit points. This applies whether you are meeting or following a school bus, and includes multi-lane roads. The only exception is when driving on a road with a median. Traffic coming from the opposite direction is not required to stop.

Motorists should also be prepared to yield to student pedestrians and cyclists. Parents of students who will be walking or cycling to school are encouraged to speak with their children about the rules of the road that apply to them.

Drivers are encouraged to: Take extra care when driving by parked cars, be aware of school zones and reduce your speed, travel through intersections slowly, be patient as children cross the road, obey crossing guard instructions; make eye contact with the children wanting to cross at the intersection, obey all bus signals and never try to pass when they are stopped and give yourself extra travel time.

When crossing the road, students are encouraged to: Look both ways before crossing; be aware of traffic by seeing and listening; walk, don't run; when possible, cross at a location where there is a crossing guard, or with a parent or a buddy; when biking, always follow the rules of the road and wear proper safety equipment.

The Manitoulin-Espanola OPP want drivers and students to have a safe and enjoyable 2018-2019 school year.

ONTARIO ENERGY BOARD NOTICE ONTARIO POWER GENERATION INC.

Ontario Power Generation Inc. has applied to recover certain account balances and to raise its payment amounts.

Learn more. Have your say.

Ontario Power Generation Inc. has applied to the Ontario Energy Board for approval to recover, over a three-year period, the 2017 year-end balances in certain deferral and variance accounts related to its nuclear generating facilities and most of its hydroelectric generating facilities beginning on January 1, 2019.

Ontario Power Generation Inc. has also applied to increase the amount it charges for the output of most of its hydroelectric generating facilities for 2019 using an Ontario Energy Board-approved formula that is tied to inflation and other factors intended to promote efficiency.

If the application is approved as filed, Ontario Power Generation Inc. has calculated that the monthly bill for a typical residential customer would increase by $1.39 in 2019 and by $0.06 in 2020, and decrease by $0.29 in 2021. These amounts do not reflect any impact of the Fair Hydro Plan. Other customers, including businesses, will also be affected. The balances in some deferral and variance accounts will continue to be recovered in future years but the recovery mechanism will be determined in a future proceeding.

THE ONTARIO ENERGY BOARD WILL HOLD A PUBLIC HEARING

The Ontario Energy Board (OEB) will hold a public hearing to consider Ontario Power Generation Inc.'s request. We will determine whether the company has used the applicable formulas required by the OEB and whether to approve Ontario Power Generation Inc.'s request to recover the balances in the deferral and variance accounts. We will also hear questions and arguments from individuals and groups that represent consumers of electricity. At the end of this hearing, the OEB will decide what, if any, increase will be allowed.

The OEB is an independent and impartial public agency. We make decisions that serve the public interest. Our goal is to promote a financially viable and efficient energy sector that provides you with reliable energy services at a reasonable cost.

BE INFORMED AND HAVE YOUR SAY

You have the right to information regarding this application and to be involved in the process.

- You can review Ontario Power Generation Inc.'s application on the OEB's website now.

Island Ref moving up the ranks!
 Providence Bay's Michael Niven has shot up from reffing Manitoulin Minor House League. He put away some university money, cringing through Manitoulin men's sportsmen tournaments and away at university, by steadily increasing the level of competition he could don the vertical stripes.

This summer he once again attended an upper level clinic where hundreds of hopefuls try out but only 15 make it through. He is now able to ref Tier II Junior A. He also had the chance this summer to line OHL tryout games. These games have many players on the bubble, who may not have the total skills needed to make the "O" with offensive or defensive skills. They hope to be noticed by their coaches for being able to throw down with the goon on the other side. Good luck, Michael. You will make it!

Island Alumni shining on post-secondary varsity stage!
Joseph Maxwell, once a top under-18 shot put and discus thrower in Canada, and among the top five for under-18 worldwide, is currently on a scholarship at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. Joseph recently posted "Attention athletes! I'm proud to announce I'll be interning with a company called Athlete Network this semester. Athlete Network is designed to connect you with companies and other like-minded people to help with your career after sports. We've partnered with over 400 companies and we host a network of over one million current and former athletes." Good job, Joseph!

Additionally, Sandfield's Hanna Hutchinson is on the Ottawa University rowing team. Hailing from Evansville and Joseph's brother, Jacob Maxwell, is on the University of Guelph, Western riding team while Little Current's Bronwyn Cooper is leaping for their English riding team.

The card of Big Lake, Greg Doane has just made it onto the Cambrian College's varsity men's volleyball team. Greg started by placing 2nd at NOSSA in Grade 10. Then in his fourth and fifth year at Manitoulin Secondary, won NSSSA, NOSSA, made it to OFSAA as the Mustang's captain.

Greg was always the collegial athlete. He could bring a bunch of players out of the doldrums to rise to their individual and team's potential. When asked if he had some advice to younger athletes who hope to play post-secondary volleyball classic, Greg advised, "If you love the game and you're willing to put the time and effort in, the skills will come. Don't get discouraged if you're not the tallest person out there. What matters most is that you're the hardest worker! I didn't think I could play this level due to my height of 5'10" but I went with a good attitude and put 110% into tryouts and earned a spot on the team." You have earned everything, Greg. Keep up that effort and attitude.

Full Value Fitness!

Next Saturday, September 29th a unique fitness challenge will take place. Manitoulin Secondary teacher Jonathan Balfe, a tireless promoter of healthy eating and fitness has developed an amazing and unique fundraiser for two Manitoulin Panther teams.

The event will take place up on the Manitoulin Secondary track in M'Chigeeng. The timed event will have people go through eleven different sections for time. Mr. Balfe will be setting up a schedule so that you can book the most convenient time for your Saturday anywhere from 9:30 AM to 3:30 PM so you can get your time and then go on your merry way if you would prefer.

The events are all very functional skills that you would normally have to perform on any given day as you go about the 11 tasks on your schedule as officials record your times. Jon is a huge proponent of self-improvement and not feel a huge pressure to finish faster than anyone else. It is all about you becoming healthier.

Jon has created an amazing trailer of what his course will look like, complete with very cool drone footage of the location and his own children performing most of the tasks.  LITTLE CURRENT—This year's Terry Fox walk/run brought 34 runners and 12 volunteers out to Low Island on the hot, sunny afternoon this past Sunday, September 16.

At the start of the event, organizer Joanna Rosenbaum addressed the gathered crowd and thanked all her volunteers for helping with the event, including the Manitoulin Amateur Radio Club (MARC) which had its members around the course to assist in navigation and making sure all runners were accounted for.

She had a special announcement of her own, too: This was to be her last year organizing the event, a

Efforts to manage invasive grass carp an international affair

Part III of a series on grass carp in the Great Lakes and the threat they pose to Lake Huron's wetland ecosystems

by Warren Schlote
GREAT LAKES—The threat of Asian carp seems to be a large, daunting challenge, but agencies on both sides of the border have agreed to work together to break up the heavy workload. Although many are approaching the invasive grass carp issue in their own ways, they still collaborate to be more effective in their management and eradication attempts, wherever possible.

International commitments

Several agencies have agreed to collaborate on managing these invasive species. The Lake Erie Committee is a part of the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, the latter of which ensures cross-border collaboration to foster healthy native fish populations. Environmental groups from the Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Michigan and Ontario governments (such as the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources and Forestry (MNRF)) have representatives on the Lake Erie Committee.

For Lake Huron, the Ontario MNRF and Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) collaborate on fishery management along with the Chippewa-Ottawa Resource Authority. On a higher level, Fisheries and Oceans Canada (DFO), the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) and U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) are partners in Asian carp management across the Great Lakes—grass carp are one of four subspecies of invasive Asian carp.

At the state and provincial level, regions that border the Great Lakes have signed what is called a mutual aid agreement. If an emergency response effort is required in any jurisdiction, the signatories have all agreed to send crews to help the home agency. Although no grass carp emergency measures have been called for since the agreement was signed in 2014 (Illinois signed in 2015), there have been a few binational gatherings to conduct eradication efforts in the spirit of the agreement.

Commercial cooperation

Seth Herbst, aquatic invasive species coordinator for the Michigan DNR, says there is another major partner in capturing these fish in the waters of the Great Lakes: commercial fisheries. Mr. Herbst says commercial fishing operations capture a much higher amount of fish compared to his agency, simply because they are on the water every day.

"Since 2013, roughly 116 grass carp have been removed by commercial fishers," says Mr. Herbst, a number that he calls "quite a bit more than our agency."

When commercial fishers catch grass carp in their gear, they often send those fish to an agency such as the Michigan DNR to conduct tests. The agency will be able to determine whether the fish is diploid (fertile) or triploid (sterile) through its ploidy testing. Statistics on commercial catches are kept and added to a growing body of knowledge about Asian carp.

As a way of incentivizing commercial fishers to continue capturing and sending in Asian carp, the Michigan DNR has introduced a bounty program—commercial fishers receive $75 for every Asian carp they send into the DNR. Mr. Herbst also says his agency informs fishers of places where Asian carp are known to congregate in the hopes that they will be able to fish in the area and remove more individuals from the system.

Broader collaborations

Commercial fishers are only one group that Michigan partners with—Mr. Herbst says his agency is starting to partner with recreational bowfishers in the hunt for grass carp. These recreational anglers mainly hunt at night, armed with a bow and arrows that have a rope attached to them. Since carp tend to congregate in shallow water, they are a favourite target for bowfishers.

That has created business opportunities, too. Numerous companies operate around the Great Lakes states and beyond that offer bowfishing charters. Gene Hobbes owns Bowfishing Madness, a Georgia-based charter company. He says in his area, grass carp populations tend to fluctuate on a year-to-year basis which makes them difficult to target.

While bowfishing seems like a novel way of managing invasive species—numerous tournaments have started, especially in Illinois where Asian carp are prevalent—Mr. Hobbes is less optimistic about the impact of bowfishers.

"It definitely helps but when you run into things like the Asian carp that are reproducing so fast, I don't even think bowfishers can put a dent in those," he says.

Nick Anthony, who owns Rooster Ranch, south of Bad Axe, Michigan, says bowfishers should be receptive to a partnership.

"A lot of the sportsmen are looking for something to do in that spring timeframe. A lot of the other seasons are closed; it's something to get out there and enjoy the outdoors," says Mr. Anthony.

Conversely, western Michigan's Bulls Eye Bowfishing and Archery owner Scott Hodges says that, although he has not heard of any incentives to catch grass carp, he would probably only participate in those programs if they were local or could offer a significant reward for helping out.

A unified effort

Keeping so many stakeholders organized and working together is no small task. To help decide on the best course of action for grass carp, a number of the agencies have implemented a structured decision-making (SDM) process sponsored by Michigan State University (MSU). Michael Jones is the head of the SDM process at MSU; he has worked with a number of agencies around the basin in the past and had been approached to take on the grass carp issue as well.

He works closely with Kelly Robinson, an assistant professor in the department of fisheries and wildlife at MSU, who helps to facilitate SDM. She says the process helps to define the core problem at hand, a key first step.

"One of the biggest issues in resource management, from the start, is when there's confusion about the problem you're working on," says Ms. Robinson. "The fact that we have everyone coming together to discuss how actions played out this fall is a benefit to everyone in the system."

Although SDM provides a great deal of clarity, some say it has major flaws in the speed at which it operates. Nick Mandrak, a researcher at University of Toronto, says the process is overly linear. He says participants will attempt one technique, wait to see how it fares, and then start planning for their next steps.

"Eradication responses should happen immediately. While that's happening, plans should be developed for longer-term management for species if the eradication fails," says Mr. Mandrak. "We should not wait to hear an effort has failed to determine the tools we need."

job she has done since she took over in 2009.

"I hope the new team will make it bigger and better," said Ms. Rosenbaum. There are normally two runs every year, one in Little Current and the other in Silver Water. This year, the Little Current event was the only one to take place.

Runners could choose between one, two, five and 10 kilometre routes based off two templates: A one-kilometre loop around Low Island could be completed twice to reach two kilometres, and the on-road route out to North Channel Drive had a short extension past the five kilometre marker to turn it into a 10 kilometre loop.

The grand total raised in Little Current between 1981 and 2017 was $85,754.55. This year added about $2,500 to that total.

MARC members were stationed along the route to keep an eye on the participants and make sure there were no emergencies that went undetected.

"It is always a load off my mind," said Ms. Rosenbaum.

Participants noted the extreme heat, especially on North Channel Drive, which concerned the organizers and MARC members. However, every-east Town councillor for Ward 3, thanked the town grocery stores for donating ice and water to keep runners cool and hydrated. He was present to represent the town as well as walk along the route.

...Little Current family pushing for public drug coverage

can be caused by one of over 2,000 genetic mutations. Kalydeco does not treat Ben's condition, known as "F508del."

Fortunately for Ben, though, F508del is the most common cystic fibrosis-causing genetic mutation, and the same mutation that Orkambi treats with success. Over half of Canadians with cystic fibrosis—nearly 2,100—have two copies of the F508del gene. Mr. Nicholls says about 700 Ontarians have that particular mutation. However, without the financial support to cover Orkambi, it remains out of reach for the average family.

For the time being, Ben is dealing with the condition as best he can, although it means carrying around a small box of pills and inhalers. One of the pills is an enzyme to help Ben's body break down food – he has to take one pill for every five grams of fat he eats. Cystic fibrosis not only fills the lungs with mucus but also the pancreas, which normally produces the enzymes needed in digestion. With no way of those reaching the digestive tract, Ben's body is seriously restricted in what it can digest.

Ben also has a nose spray to reduce polyps in his nose. Those are caused by the excess mucus levels and can be uncomfortable and block the airway. They also interfere with Ben's sense of smell, something he says he misses. Ben has had to travel to Toronto for surgery in the past to remove the polyps, but they are starting to grow back.

One of his inhalers treats pseudomonas, lung infections that Mr. Nicholls refers to as "similar to mold," toxins his lungs cannot remove themselves. He also takes heartburn and appetite medications to keep his weight up, as cystic fibrosis patients often have problems maintaining a healthy weight.

"It means I can eat a lot; I like that," says Ben. "One time I was with my brother at my grandma's, doing the treadmill. I said, 'hey, I lost 10 calories!' and my brother said, 'Ben, that's not good!'"

Orkambi could treat a number of these problems for Ben and vastly improve his quality of life.

"It's corrective gene therapy; it's pretty incredible," says Mr. Nicholls. There is a newer drug than Orkambi called Symdeko that was just cleared by Health Canada in June 2018. That drug has the ability to reverse some of the effects of cystic fibrosis, but Mr. Nicholls says there is no push to get that drug covered publicly because of its high price point.

The review process is ongoing, but time is short: The Canadian Drug Expert Committee will make its final recommendation to Vertex and drug plans on September 26. Mr. Nicholls says he has reached out to a number of agencies and governments, and a recent government letter shows the estimated outcome leaning towards declining the drug coverage.

"The only thing that will push it over the top at this point is a large, public outcry," says Mr. Nicholls. He is trying to get Toronto lawyer Chris MacLeod to come give a talk at Ben's school in Little Current at an assembly where Ben will also speak. Mr. MacLeod has cystic fibrosis himself and is leading a class-action lawsuit in B.C. over this very drug.

As with all other Canadian provinces, Orkambi is not covered by B.C. but Mr. MacLeod says the high price point has been negotiated down in other countries by using bulk purchasing power to cut a better deal. Mr. Nicholls says provinces can still opt-in to publicly cover Orkambi at this point, but without national support, that purchasing power will be greatly reduced and the costs may become prohibitive.

Mr. Nicholls also says that as a result, Orkambi manufacturer Vertex would likely never reapply for public participation in Canada. This is the third time Orkambi has applied for that process—according to a Vancouver Sun report, the two past applications had been declined, citing insufficient medical benefits. Vertex has allegedly supplied more data with results over a longer period of time.

Orkambi is called a preventative drug, meaning it can slow down the progress of future lung disease, but cannot undo the damage caused by cystic fibrosis. Starting patients on the drug as early as possible is crucial in having the greatest impact—Orkambi is approved for people over the age of 12. But with the high price point, it remains out of reach of most families.

There are four private insurers in Canada that cover Orkambi, but there is no public drug coverage. Mr. Nicholls and others are pushing to have Orkambi covered like Kalydeco under the EAP. This is within the context of Ontario's new OHIP + program, begun in January 2018, that provides free drugs to people 24 years of age and under. They receive coverage regardless of their income levels or whether they already have private insurance coverage.

That age group will cost $465 million to cover, according to Cystic Fibrosis Canada. Adding in people aged 65 and over at $575 million means a total cost of $1.1 billion per year, which the organization says limits the government's ability to spend on rare disease medications because their funding priorities are elsewhere.

"I'd want (the minister) to know that it sucks they won't give me medication," says Ben.

The Ontario Ministry of Health and Long Term Care could not provide comment by press time.

number of activities including delivering water and messages for the MPPs in the chamber, taking classes in legislative process and mathematics and meeting with key legislative players such as the party leaders and the Speaker of the House."

The Legislative Page Program was open to students like Ms. Kuntsi who are in Grades 7 or 8. "I had to have an average of 80 percent or higher and get along well with my peers and adults," she said. "My application had to be submitted before June 15." For those seeking to serve in later segments of the legislative session, the due date is November 15.

"Getting into the program wasn't the hardest part," said Ms. Kuntsi. "I think that all of the studying was a lot more work leading up to September. I am very excited for the new experience and hope to make lots of connections with kids around Ontario, as well as some MPPs."

According to the Ontario government website, "each year approximately 150 young students from across Ontario are selected to participate in Ontario's Legislative Page Program. This unique educational experience for Ontario students in Grades 7 or 8 provides an opportunity to experience the provincial legislature in action and forge new lifelong friendships with peers from all over province."

The legislative page program is designed for outgoing, high-achieving, community-involved students who have demonstrated responsibility and leadership. Legislative Pages meet key parliamentary and political figures and learn first-hand about Ontario's Parliament and the legislative process.

Ms. Kuntsi's educational progress won't be in jeopardy. While at Queen's Park, legislative pages are under the direction of the Page Program Coordinator, a certified Ontario teacher. But the gig has a financial bonus. Pages receive an honorarium of $15 per day during their term of duty.

...Manitoulin Secondary student brawl leads to six charges

...continued from page 1 formed, one with white students facing another line of First Nation students. They watched in horror as the two sides flung insults at one another, hurling comments like “brown trash” and “white whore” at one another.

“Every insult you could think of,” one of the girls said. “It seemed to be M’Chigeeng against Little Current at first, and then it just went from there.”

Suddenly, one of the students threw a punch, and that’s when the melee ensued, the girls claim.

“They all started fist fighting, boys and girls,” one of the girls said. “Thirty to 50 kids fighting at once.”

The girls said everywhere they looked there were kids fighting—on cars, on the hill, in the bush.

“They were aggravated,” one of the girls said. “They were tired of race being put before anything else.”

The fighting, they said, lasted for upwards of an hour before a threat posted to the social media platform Snapchat caused the school to enter into a hold and secure procedure.

The girls said that, by the time they returned to their homes later that day, they were incredibly upset at the scene they had witnessed. It was a scene of utter mayhem, they said. One of screaming, swearing, girls fighting girls, boys fighting boys, boys fighting girls and teachers in the middle, trying to break things up.

Members of the M’Chigeeng community, alerted by their children as to what was happening at the school, began to show up and also entered the fray. As a result, one adult is facing charges.

Following the incident, a letter was sent home with all the students and a pre-recorded message from Principal Jamie Mohamed was sent to all guardians’ phones.

“So many kids have (cell phone) footage, but don’t want to do something about it for fear of retribution,” one of the girls’ mothers said.

“One child has been charged, but what are the consequences for the rest and what are the preventative measures being put in place?” she questioned. (By press time Monday, five youths and one adult had been charged in connection with the event, but the OPP tells The Expositor that more charges would be laid.)

When asked if the girls planned to attend school on Monday, one of the girls said “I don’t want to go, man.”

“None of them feels safe,” the mother added.

“If someone comes at me, I will punch them,” another of the girls said candidly.

“This is on a level that’s beyond what MSS teachers can do,” the mother said.

“The Rainbow District School Board needs to step up. What is their plan? How does the school return from this?”

The race issue is of deep concern for her and many others, she said, and believes a multi-cultural school such as MSS should be teaching more about the shared cultures and the history of Indigenous peoples.

One mom told The Expositor that she believes there is racism on both sides, and bullying, which is probably a larger problem, she said.

“(My daughter) is really upset over the whole thing,” she said. “They really need to educate their teachers for sure.” The mom was referencing one of the videos (which has been seen by Expositor staff) where an MSS staff member can be heard calling a person “trash” while trying to break up a fight. It is not known if this person was an MSS student.

Her daughter, she said, is an academic, athletic straight-laced young woman who refused to go to school on Monday. “She shouldn’t have to miss school because of this.”

The mom said she was also upset with social media’s role in this as it served to ‘fan the flames.’

“Parents need to stop brushing it under the rug,” she added.

Another mother shared her email to MSS Principal Jamie Mohamed with The Expositor.

“I received your recorded message regarding the incident that occurred at lunch hour on Friday at MSS,” she writes. “I have also read the letter sent home with (student’s name) regarding this incident.”

“While your written statement and recorded voice message assured parents that the incident had been contained, as I’m sure you are aware, there is far more to this incident than what transpired Friday afternoon,” she continues. “It is my belief that the situation that took place Friday has not yet reached its conclusion and the environment at MSS is not yet conducive to the safety of my son.”

The Expositor has heard unconfirmed reports that upwards of 175 students were missing from school Monday.

Manitoulin-Espanola Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) Community Services Officer Constable Marie Ford wasn’t at the school at the time of the incident, but attended the school on Monday with two other officers from start to dismissal. Constable Ford also addressed the students during a special morning assembly to talk about the Friday incident.

“It was well attended and the students paid good attention,” Constable Ford said. “It’s still under investigation. We’re knee deep in statements.”

Constable Ford said that seven officers, from both OPP and UCCM Police, attended MSS on Friday.

Many of the charges stem from online threats on social media, she added.

“We are appealing to all those with videos to turn them over to police so we can have every view,” Constable Ford said. “This can be done anonymously, or through Crime Stoppers. We’re not looking to create more of a problem.”

“We want this to be a safe place,” she said of MSS.

Constable Ford urged the students to be careful of how they use social media. On Monday, September 17, Espanola schools also held hold and secure procedure following an online threat of a drive-by shooting that appeared to have been precipitated by the MSS event.

Constable Ford is a regular in the halls of MSS and can be found there on many a lunch hour, walking the halls or in the cafetorium. She says there was no lead-up to the event that she was aware of.

The constable said the mood seemed to be happy and upbeat on Monday, but with some nervousness. During the assembly, Principal Mohamed said the students were incredibly attentive. “You could hear a pin drop.”

Constable Ford said she will be at MSS all this week and tells students that “if anyone is receiving threats, call right away so we know what’s going on.”

Principal Jamie Mohamed confirmed that police were called to the school at noon on Friday and remained for the rest of the day while the school was under a hold and secure procedure. A hold and secure is not the same as a lockdown, as has often been stated. A hold and secure, the principal explained, means the doors to the school are locked, the classroom doors are locked, but it’s “business as usual inside the classroom.”

As a result of the Friday incident and subsequent online threats, it was decided to have a police presence at the school on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

When asked about the racist element to the student brawl, Mr. Mohamed said he didn’t believe it was the root cause of the problem, but later became the issue.

“In the heat of the moment, things were said,” Mr. Mohamed said.

He explained that the school was currently reaching out to all of its

First Nation partners, including chiefs and councils, “to find out how we can move forward in a positive way.”

Mr. Mohamed asks students that if they hear of any threats to one another or the school to report it to the office, or police, immediately.

“The actions of a few don’t define us as a school,” the principal said. “We, the Mustang family, need to move forward in a positive way. We are all different and we need to embrace those differences.”

As for Tuesday, “we plan to have a full house as usual.”

by Alicia McCutcheon

M’CHIGEENG—Manitoulin Rainbow District School Board (RDSB) trustee Larry Killens has serious concerns with the Friday, September 14 incident at Manitoulin Secondary School (MSS) where upwards of 50 students brawled until police were called and the school was placed under a ‘hold and secure.’ Firstly, he wasn’t informed.

“I’ve said several times in our meetings, we’re a board in crisis,” said Trustee Larry Killens when reached for comment at his home Monday.

“I’ve received 12 or so emails and 15 to 20 phone calls,” Mr. Killens said. “What initiated these phone calls was the robocall from the principal (Jamie Mohamed).” Following the Friday fights, the school issued a letter home and sent a pre-recorded message for parents and guardians, letting them know that something had transpired at MSS that day, police had been called and that hold and secure procedure had been used.

“The letter said ‘the incident was quickly brought under control.’ That’s not true,” Mr. Killens said. “The cops were there all day.”

Before, if anything happened at Island schools, be it a school bus accident or school closure, Trustee Killens would receive a head’s up from the board office. Now he’s left to find information on his own.

The trustee has been told he can no longer attend board meetings from now until the end of his tenure in October for alleged transgressions against the RDSB’s code of conduct. While the chair has told concerned Islanders that he remains the Island trustee, he feels he is being left out in the cold.

“They never gave me notice about this incident,” he said. “I called the board office and no one called me back.”

New D and N confectionary opens in Little Current

by Michael Erskine
LITTLE CURRENT—Donna Fortier and her partner Norman Abotossaway have opened a new confectionary/gift consignment store in Little Current. Located in the old Rolston offices on Worthington Street, the store represents a long held dream for the couple.

"I have always wanted to," said Ms. Fortier when asked what led her to open the store with her partner. "I have been in retail business all my life. I was standing at a till from when I was five-years-old."

That is hardly an exaggeration, as a five-year-old Ms. Fortier's job in her parents' store as a child was to gather the candy choices for her parents' customers from the several thousands of choices available under the glass counter. "I was short," she laughed, "and that was when you got several candies for a penny, so I was kept pretty busy."

While D and N currently offers up only 15 varieties of penny candy it has plenty else on offer for those who need to pop by for a convenient product.

"We have farm fresh eggs and bread, we sell Catch the Ace tickets and a little grocery store with all the necessities," she said. "Toiletries, shampoo, canned goods, pet food, bacon, butter, milk—if you find yourself out of something you need we probably have it."

But that is only half the story.

On the other side of the store is a gift shop featuring a wide selection of locally-made crafts and gifts, including Native artisan work and jewellery, courtesy of many of Norm's relatives in Aundeck Omni Kaning. "We try to carry local," said Ms. Fortier, "and we buy and sell, do custom orders and consignments."

One of the neat selections that might peak the interest of Island customers is a great selection of John Deere collectable toy tractors and other farm equipment—perfect for those young or old agriculturalists in your life.

A stroll through the store reveals a large number of Manitoulin themed items for sale. "They are all done locally," said Ms. Fortier. "We like to keep it all local."

Ms. Fortier and Mr. Abotossaway were holding court at their grand opening recently, complete with a free barbecue and face painting for the kids, welcoming their customers with their customary wide smiles.

Ms. Fortier said that she saw a need for a full service convenience store in downtown Little Current and took the leap of faith that her retail experience could make it work—and so far she has been proven right.

"It's our local people who have really been supporting us," she said. "Drop by and see what we have to offer, and if you don't see something that you think we should stock, let us know."

The same goes for the gift shop, she said. "For a lot of the Manitoulin themed products, if we don't have it on hand we can have it in for you within 48 hours."

One of the reasons that the couple decided to open the store is that they genuinely like people and the convenience store and gift shop offer up a lot of opportunities to meet new people and to connect with old friends.

The new store will be open from 10 am to 10 pm, Monday through Saturday, for now. "I am still thinking about Sundays," admitted Ms. Fortier. "Right now it is just getting off the ground so there is only so much one person can do. Norm comes in and spells me off for a bit, and I have someone else who comes in to help now and then, but it is pretty much me for right now."

"They became affiliated with the Doric Lodge," recalled Mr. Legge. "They had joined in Indiana and when they moved here they became affiliated with our lodge."

Asian carp electro-fishing on the Fox River in Illinois.

...manage invasive grass carp

Ms. Robinson disagrees with the linear description, and instead refers to the process as cyclical.

"You can loop back if things come up that you hadn't thought of," she says. "It does take some time to work through the process which I think is good in some ways because it's causing people to think more fully about ways of thinking through the process."

Becky Cudmore, Asian carp program manager at Fisheries and Oceans Canada (DFO) agrees that swift action is crucial; however, she concedes that managing the Great Lakes poses unique challenges.

"It's an interesting study in multiple jurisdictions co-managing a body of water," she says. "When the actions or inactions of one jurisdiction does influence the others, it obviously leads to the need for open communication and discussion. We definitely encourage that to continue in the future."

SDM does not appear to be addressing all issues equally, though. This summer, officials have demolished a dam on the Sandusky River in Ohio—a known grass carp breeding ground. To date, there are no finalized measures in place to stop Asian carp from moving upstream to breed.

Ballville Dam

The Ballville Dam was a 1913-built hydroelectric and water-supply dam for the city of Fremont, Ohio. The structure was in a state of "high disrepair" and beginning to pose a safety risk to residents, as well as acting as a barrier to native fish species like walleye that prevented them from spawning further upstream. The cost to remove it was much lower than repairing the structure, located 18 miles upstream of Lake Erie.

Rich Carter executive administrator for fish management and research with the Ohio DNR says the need to remove the dam has been discussed for 20 years, though its fate remained unclear until recently.

"There have been a number of delays in the removal of the dam so that the actual removal of the dam was not certain until about 18 months ago," he says.

The USFWS had completed its final environmental impact statement on the Ballville Dam removal on Aug. 1, 2014. The document is 689 pages long, with 407 of those being appendices. Appendix E, at the end of the document, is an invasive species risk assessment. It is seven pages in length.

The appendix notes the positions of a team of 11 researchers who have added their expertise on the project. Of the 10 who submitted enough information to be useful to the study, seven believe grass carp have not established self-sustaining populations in the Lake Erie basin. Their confidence in their own responses was mostly low, but six of the researchers had given their opinions on the impact of dam removal on Asian carp. Four researchers predicted no change, while the other two suggested an increase in risk.

At the end of the study, those results were interpreted to mean no increased risk potential to the presence of Asian carp in the Lake Erie basin.

Officials have known about the dam's impending demise for two decades and had finalized plans to remove it 18 months ago. Despite this knowledge, when the dam came down this summer, there were no measures in place to block invasive species like grass carp from moving upstream to spawn.

"We are basing our decisions for grass carp actions on the results of the structured decision-making and ongoing science and probability of success. Recommendations for barriers came about through the structured decision-making process," says Mr. Carter.

Ms. Robinson says weirs and other barriers to fish passage have been considered since early in the SDM process, but the dam removal had been "already slated to happen before our process started."

The SDM's final recommendations came out six months ago, relatively close to the dam's removal date. Mr. Carter says something will need to be done on the Sandusky River, however what it will entail or when it will be installed remains unknown.

"We recognize that that does increase available habitat for spawning. Part of our future plans are to conduct a barrier feasibility study or design to determine how and where hydrological barriers might be used to block movements of grass carp and support population reductions in the Sandusky and Maumee Rivers," he says.

Another aspect in favour of the dam's removal had been promoting native fish populations. Any barrier to fish movement in the river would also continue to disrupt their natural patterns, an issue that must also be considered in determining the next steps for Asian carp management in the Sandusky River.

Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder conference seeks to put an end to stigma

by Michael Erskine
WIJKWEMKOONG—When at age 47 BJ Formanek first learned that he was diagnosed with fetal alcohol spectrum disorder (FASD), it came as something of a relief to put a finger on why his world was so different to that of those around him—but when he asked the question “now what?” the silence that greeted him was deafening.

“There was no ‘now what,’” he recalled. When he was diagnosed, there was no path of treatment, no coping stratagems to adopt and most definitely no services available to help him deal with his condition.

Mr. Formanek discussed his experiences with FASD and how he found his own path forward in life during a keynote address to the ‘Stomping out the Stigma’ conference held September 9 at Wiikwemkoong’s

Thunderbird Park.

The day’s events included banner making, a community Red Shoes Rock Walk, a community barbecue and live music but it was Mr. Formanek’s talk that held those in attendance spellbound.

Mr. Formanek’s struggles with the consequences of FASD were related with great humour and pathos but his experiences would be very familiar to anyone struggling with the disorder.

Among those experiences is dealing with the stigma that is still attached to FASD, often very unfairly, considering the reality of advice coming from the medical community that is still not as uncommon as it should be.

people of Wiikwemkoong, as $1,286,163 will go to help support many needed services in the Wiikwemkoong Unceded Territory communities that will benefit from the proceeds of the draw.

“My phone was still blowing up when I got up this morning,” said Ms. Kaboni, “so I know it wasn’t all just a dream.” Nearly all of the calls she has been getting have been congratulatory in nature.

Ms. Kaboni hasn’t made any decisions about how she will spend her win, although there are some things that spring readily to mind. “My son is 17 and he is looking at where he will go to university,” she said. “He’s pretty excited. I told him that our gift to him will be leaving school debt free.” That’s something Ms. Kaboni can understand only too well. “It took me 10 years to pay off my student debt,” she said.

Meanwhile, she and her husband Danny have been building a cabin in Jocko Bay. Ms. Kaboni returns to Wiikwemkoong for her vacation each year and has been anticipating retiring to her home community. “This will help finish the cabin,” she said.

But she hasn’t made up her mind just yet about retirement. “That is definitely an option,” she said. “I started working for the City of Edmonton while I was going to school and then I thought I would try and get on permanent with the city.” That worked out well.

Ms. Kaboni hasn’t collected her cheque yet. “I am hoping to take a flight out soon,” she said.

In the Chase the Ace draw, players pay $5 a ticket and select a number between one and 52 for their choice of envelope. A deck of playing cards had been placed in envelopes also numbered from one to 52 and if the ace of spades were to be found in the envelope with the number on the drawn ticket the ticket holder receives both the weekly prize and a jackpot that accumulates over the length of the draw. If the ace is not “caught” then the winner just receives the weekly prize and the progressive pot grows for another week.

 I finally had to call the director of education.”

“Is it safe to send my kids to school?” I kept getting asked. I couldn’t get them an answer.”

“When it comes to the people of Manitoulin, I have more contacts and know more people than he does (Norm Blaseg),” Trustee Killens continued.

“I just can’t say it enough—we’re a board in crisis,” he reiterated.

The trustee said he is hearing from concerned parents from all over Manitoulin and has heard that some First Nation communities are considering having their children bused to Wiikwemkoong High School. “If that happens, that’s disastrous. I think our kids get along great.”

“I represent this whole island, First Nations and non-First Nations, along with Trustee Grace Fox,” he continued. “They elected me, and I’m not even allowed to be there for them. If there is a problem, I sure would like to be a part of the cure.”

RDSB Trustee Grace Fox of M’Chigeeng represents the aboriginal students, who attend Rainbow Board schools, as well as their families and communities.

Despite numerous calls to the trustee, she was not able to be contacted by the paper for comments.

Single mother speaks out on sexual assault of her young daughter

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the following story, names have been changed to protect the identity of the juvenile victim, who asked to have her story told, and because of the publication ban that remains in place.

by Alicia McCutcheon
MANITOULIN—Joanne moved back to Manitoulin with her two young children, a boy and a girl, while in her mid-20s. She was looking for a fresh start. Joanne had been following a dark path of opiate addiction, depression and mental health issues but she was ready to make the change for a better life for herself and her family.

Joanne succeeded with her goals, kicking her habit, seeking counselling and going back to school. She couldn't believe her good luck when she began chatting with a man, Dan, from her community via Facebook. She asked around. None of her friends knew him, but knew the family. 'He's from good people,' they told her. For three months, the two chatted online, and Joanne shared everything with him—her biggest hopes and starkest fears.

One day Dan appeared on her doorstep. He had been laid off from work and came to meet her in person.

"He basically never left after that," Joanne tells The Expositor. "I thought it was my destiny and I allowed myself to fall in love."

At first things were very good. Dan made an effort with the children and they in turn were very fond of him. Before long, Joanne found herself pregnant.

"Getting pregnant threw a wrench into things," Joanne says. "He didn't respond too well to the pregnancy. One day he had a meltdown and he showed me a side of him I'd never seen before."

When Joanne told Dan he had to leave, he responded by throwing a kitchen table. Joanne was no stranger to violent partners. "I enacted an emergency plan and sent the kids into the basement with a phone," she says.

The fight, which was all over a car, ended with him threatening suicide. Joanne was genuinely concerned for his well-being and called police, who later found him safe and sound at a family member's home.

Following the argument, Joanne told Dan he couldn't come back, not right away anyway. The children were now frightened of him.

"Two weeks later he came back, and that's when everything changed," Joanne shares.

During their two-week break, Joanne noticed photos of him on Facebook with other girls. She assumed that he had likely slept with those girls so when Dan came back to live with her, "I put up a wall."

The couple split up again, this time for three weeks.

When Dan returned, he came back with her daughter's iPod, which she didn't know he had.

"On it were pictures of my daughter in her bathing suit," Joanne says.

Joanne says when Dan came back the second time, there was no intimacy between the couple. "Something just didn't feel right," she allows.

The baby was born soon after and the new child became Joanne's world.

"He took on more of a caregiver role," she says of her partner.

At this same time, her daughter was becoming more and more hesitant to go to bed.

On June 6 of last year, Joanne was tucking her daughter in, but for two hours the little girl would not stop crying. Joanne began peppering her with questions. 'Does something hurt?', 'are you being bullied?', and finally, 'Is it Dan?'

There, with her mom by her side, Joanne's daughter told her that Dan had been touching her in a bad way. 'What do you mean?' her mother asked. 'My privates,' the little girl responded.

The child went on to tell her mother that Dan would go into her room at night when he thought she was sleeping and touch her. She never moved, not even flinched, and pretended to sleep when it happened.

Joanne quickly found Dan in their living room and confronted him. His response, she says, was to stand up, shrug his shoulders and say, 'I guess I'll get going now.'

When Dan left, Joanne went to her daughter and the two cried and held each other the night through.

The next day Joanne woke in the throes of sickness. She was pale, weak and trembling. She thought it was likely from the news that had just rocked her world, but even her children knew something was terribly wrong and encouraged her to go to the hospital. Joanne did go, but first had to find someone to watch the children. Her ex-partner's mother looked after her grandchildren, but there was no one around to look after the baby. She says she had no choice but to call Dan.

Before Joanne knew it, she was in the hospital and told her liver was shutting down and she was sent to Sudbury for more tests. A blockage was causing the failure and this was quickly removed. Three days later, Joanne was discharged and returned home to collect her children.

Dan returned the baby to Joanne's house, but before he left he asked if he could have a shower as the shower wasn't working at the place he was staying. Joanne thought better of it, but relented. While he was in the shower she spied his phone lying on the table and picked it up and immediately went to his browser. There she made a startling discovery: three days of visits to

Ontario's only remaining school fair at Central Manitoulin Public School marks 106 years

by Betty Bardswich
MINDEMOYA—There is a tradition in Mindemoya that is 106 years-old. The year 1912 saw students and teachers involved in the first fall fair activities that Central Manitoulin Public School (CMPS) pupils, staff and volunteers continue to this day. This is the only school fall fair in Ontario and is a highly anticipated event every September.

The occasion is held mainly in the arena and the day before the fair opens to the public, the students and parents display artwork done by all grades, and judges carefully peruse this and every other entry on display while the helpers mark down the names of the winners and place stickers. Judges this year included Wilfred Holmes of Manitowaning, Aggie Cutherson of Providence Bay, Theresa Webb of Spring Bay, and Carol Gilmore of Mindemoya. Lending a helping hand was Bernice Lewis, Joan Ralph, Marg Elliot, and Eva Bond of Mindemoya as well as Carol Dewar of Providence Bay.

The success of the exhibition would not be complete without the work of the judges and the fair committee. Headed by Principal David Wiwihar, the team consists of Carol Gilmore,

RIGHT: Eric Wahl, a Grade 4 student at CMPS, took top honours in the homemade item from wood, not a kit, category with his beehive.

Nicholas Keller took first prize in the green tomato, large, section at the fair. He also had entries in decorated cupcakes and Rice Krispies.

Ellen Clarke-Zinke is pictured with her first prize entry in the vegetable creation, vehicle, category at the CMPS fall fair. She also entered her dog Luna in the dog competition.

Marie Kirk, Ellen Ferguson, Doreen Duncanson, Julie Byers and Irene Musquetier-Dewar. Some of the members have been involved with this yearly event for a long time, with Ms. Kirk starting in 1979, Ms. Byers in 2009, and Ms. Duncanson volunteering for many years. Lyle and Sharon Dewar of Providence Bay have volunteered for this event too for quite a long time, and their specialty is providing and decorating a large float for the annual parade. Mr. Dewar is also a member of The Islanders, a group that plays in many venues throughout the year. At the fair, these gentlemen are on hand to provide music, both in the arena and then again at the school for the close of fair activities. And no fair would be complete without the presence of the Rainbow District School Board (RDSB) trustee Larry Killens, who always has high praise for the teachers, volunteers, parents, and especially the students.

The entries in the fairs are many. There were vegetables, including beets, potatoes, kohlrabi, zucchini and a very large pumpkin grown by grade three student Spencer Johnston of Providence Bay. Other categories included sunflowers, cookies, items made of wood, candles, flowers, cupcakes, posters, handmade jewellery and more.

Many of the students had several entries in the fair. Autumn Davy of Mindemoya, who is in Grade 5, won first prize for her poster but had also won more prizes with her cookies, candle entry, homemade toy and apples. Nicholas Keller won first prize for the green tomato, large size, and also had decorated cupcakes and Rice Krispies entries. Madeline Keller took home a first for her leaf collection, and she too had cupcakes on display.

...fair at Central Manitoulin Public School

Dania Skippen, of Little Current, attends CMPS, and she took first prize for her handmade jewellery and had also entered chocolate chip cookies. Grade 4 student Eric Wahl entered the homemade from wood, not a kit, category and won first prize for his bee house.

Ellen Clarke-Zinkie, a Grade 4 student who lives in Mindemoya, also won a first prize for her vegetable creation, a vehicle, while Ellen Duncanson won for the family project with an object related to your heritage. She showed a painting from 1924 and mentioned that, at one time, her great-grandmother had taught school on the West End. Also entering an exhibit this year was Ava Corbiere of M'Chigeeng whose sunflower was by far the tallest of that particular entry.

Grade 3 student Spencer Johnston of Providence Bay won first prize with his entry in the grow a gigantic pumpkin category.

The second day of the fair always has a parade from the school with all the students from CMPS to the arena. Leading the procession this year was OPP Community Officer Marie Ford, followed by the Central Manitoulin fire truck and ambulance.

And a fitting end every year for the CMPS fall fair, after all the hard work, the presentation of entries, the dog and plane competitions and the judging of animals, is the feast, held back at the school for everyone.

Josiah and Micah Wilton of Mindemoya were winners in the plane competition, a new category for the CMPS fall fair.

Madeline Keller was a first place winner at the fall fair with prizes for cupcakes and a leaf collection.

...Single mother speaks out on sexual assault of her young daughter

Her daughter had told her that Dan was looking at his phone while he touched her.

"It was just an awful feeling," she says.

Joanne called her counsellor and told her she needed to see her right away. At that same time a forgotten appointment with the 'Healthy Babies, Healthy Children' caregiver also arrived. With the support of both women, Joanne called the police and reported Dan. The two women also escorted her to the police station where she gave a statement. The daughter's statement would follow the next day and would be taken by a female officer and taped. The molestation had taken place for about a year.

A warrant was immediately issued for Dan's arrest and he was taken in that day.

Joanne made the decision to move her family back to southern Ontario, where she was originally from, to enlist the support of her mother and remove her children from the situation that they had just endured.

Dan pleaded guilty to sexual assault of a minor, sexual exploitation of a minor and sexual interference of a minor after which Joanne and her daughter, surrounded by family and friends, read a victim impact statement to Dan and the court.

Last month, Dan was sentenced to six months in jail with three years of probation. He must register as a sex offender for 10 years, submit a blood sample for the DNA data bank, is not permitted to have or use firearms, he must seek counselling and must have no contact with Joanne or her daughter. He is also to have no contact with his baby without a court order for three years.

Joanne said he admitted to molesting her daughter in court and said he started therapy right away.

"I feel it's a bunch of bulls—t," Joanne says. "He told me he was on the same path of recovery as me."

Joanne says that since the sentencing, the family has been keeping very busy. Her daughter has also said she would like to go back into counselling, which Joanne is happy to accommodate.

"My greatest fear is that she'll self-harm, turn to drugs, become promiscuous or even violent," Joanne adds.

"If we had talked about this more, I feel we could have nipped it in the bud after the first time," the mother continues.

Joanne admits to having doubts from time to time and of lashing out at her daughter. "I have apologized to her repeatedly," she says, shame evident in her voice. "I thought he was a good guy."

Joanne says the children have transitioned quickly to their new surroundings, have made new friends and are enjoying programming at the local Friendship Centre.

"Listen to your children. Stay vigilant. Trust your instincts if people don't feel right," Joanne tells other parents. "In hindsight, after we had broken up, I felt repulsed by him. I feel now that it was my instincts."

"Did he prey on me?" she wonders. "A single mother in recovery?"

"I can only hope he gets the help he needs so he never hurts anyone again."

Joanne admits to being molested too as a young woman, which caused her to head down the path of addiction and depression and even thoughts of suicide.

"This stuff is still happening," she says of sexual abuse, urging young mothers to think long and hard before taking a partner in. "I took him in all too quick," she adds.

Joanne still has goals in mind for her and her family, and plans to re-enroll in school this January to become a social service worker.

"I hope to make big changes in this world."

If you or someone you know is in need of help, contact police by calling 1-800-310-1122 or by calling Manitoulin Family Resources' emergency shelter and counselling line at 705-377-5160.

...M'Chigeeng's Lakeview School

end of the third grade," said Ms. Payette. "The first four years of elementary school is a key period when students learn to read. Children who make the transition from learning to read to reading clear by the end of third grade are positioned to succeed in learning and in life."

"There is research to support this," added MFN Director of Education Robert Beaudin. "If a child is reading by the end of Grade 3, they will have success in high school and beyond. If they're not, they face many uphill struggles."

In 2012, a partnership between 32 First Nations schools and the University of New Brunswick's Canadian Research Institute for Social Policy (CRISP) set out with the vision to increase the capacity of teachers, parents and volunteers to help ensure all Indigenous children become confident readers and learners.

"The Confident Learners program is a direct result of support from Indigenous Affairs (INAC)," Ms. Payette said. "They have an advisory council and keep in touch through Kenjegin Teg (KTEI). We're part of a First Nations school support program that is hosted through KTEI. There are a number of First Nations schools that are part of this and it's a good collaboration. Confident Learners is the only program of its kind to be built with and for Indigenous educators and children."

"We had the opportunity to be one of the lead schools in jumping on board with that," said Ms. Payette. "Lakeview School is probably one of the first streamed schools that is taking a big lead on this in terms of professional development and the implementation of that program within our school."

"The big push on that part—and it's critical—is that the stronger our teachers are the stronger the program is," the principal continued. Lakeview School provides the opportunity for professional development through early dismissals on Wednesday. A teachers' study group, essentially a professional learning group, meets every Wednesday at 2:15 pm.

"The program includes code-related skills (concepts about print, phonetics, letter knowledge and reading fluency) and language skills (vocabulary, receptive language, expressive language and written language). We go through building capacity, informing instruction, fostering confidence in students and applying that theory as part of our professional development. We're talking about classroom management and skills, making higher yield thinking strategies for students," she continued. "We're talking about social development and emotional development for students, all of that so we can enhance that confidence in the students and give them that opportunity to be successful readers."

teacher (LRT) Connie Freeman is the driving force behind this program. Ms. Freeman has also initiated a book bag program for students where they can sign books out of her book barn. She encourages students to increase their reading levels. An assistant ensures everything is catalogued and instructs library classes one day per week. The LRT also presents an early reading readiness program where she withdraws students from the classroom to offer one-on-one support.

"It is also very unique that we have the opportunity to work with a numeracy teacher," said Ms. Payette. "She collaborates with the teachers and occasionally provides professional development as well. She uses a program called Leaps and Bounds to do math assessments and was instrumental in development to create this beading project that we do and have become quite famous for. The project incorporates math, culture and language – to see that in action, it's amazing! We're incorporating elders. We're incorporating community members. We're incorporating language, numbers, the Ojibwe language and specifically the math. We're getting them to know specific vocabulary and to explain their thinking. Why is that pattern like that? How do you get that pattern? What if we change that? To get the students to explain their math through beading in a way they couldn't before is pretty amazing."

The numeracy teacher also oversees a maker's space which is designed for students to expand on artistic or creative ideas. This year they'll be incorporating robotics. They usually host an annual art show as well.

Lakeview's unique core Ojibwe program is run by Eria Bebonang and uses sign language as well as Ojibwe language flash cards to help students develop more confidence in using the language in the classroom.

A wellness worker provides daily intervention as needed. "Sometimes a student just needs to take a break and they go to see her," Ms. Payette explained. The wellness worker coordinates and laises for interventions from outside agencies such as mental health and family services. She can also arrange transportation for students to and from appointments. Having a school-based wellness worker provides students with a safe place to vent and helps them to learn coping strategies. There has been an impact in that the number of refer-als to the principal's office have gone down.

The ARP program is built on a 'scaffolding' concept. "The approach is different than the traditional method," said Ms. Payette. "With scaffolding you introduce one concept and then you build on it. The school also utilizes an online program called Quizlet. It's beginner level and syllable based. Right now it's supported on iPads and iPhones but we're hoping to have it available for Android devices soon."

"We also utilize a land-based approach to learning," said Mr. Beaudin. "Students spend more time out and about. An elder once told me, 'this is not our classroom, this (the outdoors) is our classroom.' So we're incorporating more land-based. The NARPS (National Archery in the Schools) program will also be implemented this school year."

"We have our own tipi for cultural teachings," Ms. Payette added. "We'd really like to have the whole first week of school as culture week."

Community engagement is an important component of their 'think outside the box' programming. There is a fall feast that provides the opportunity to see harvesting in action. Neil Debassige of Fuel the Fire TV sets up three different stations: one for harvesting deer, one for demonstrating different animal calls and a fishing station. Pam Roy sets up an apple station and does a presentation on honeybees, demonstrating the different aspects of harvesting within local communities.

Lakeview has implemented an adult caregiver engagement strategy (ACES) to get parents more involved. "Our parental engagement numbers continue to climb," said Mr. Beaudin. At the last parent night the turnout was almost 80 percent, and more parents are interacting with the school on Facebook. Other initiatives include starting the day with a happy thought to encourage positive engagement and a daily email for parents and community members with an Anishinabe phrase of the day that includes an audio file. On Aboriginal Day the school served up a free pancake breakfast to 184 people. "We want to demonstrate that Lakeview School is a part of the community," said Ms. Payette.

Teachers are encouraged to learn the Anishinabe language and to use it as much as possible within the classroom. The normally lethargic Grade 7 class was given 15 minutes of gym first thing in the morning. "It's made a big difference and changed the rest of the day," Ms. Payette said.

Other small steps forward include positive partnerships with various health services and the UCCM Police Service. Community Services Officer Murray Still visits Lakeview regularly, talking about bullying and other issues. Police also participate in activities such as winter carnival. Other partnerships include Laurentian University and Queens University for student teacher placements and Manitoulin Streams for experiential learning about water, environment and fish habitats. Every year Grade 8 students from Lakeview School work with Manitoulin Streams on restoring M'Chigeeng Creek by improving stream habitat, planting trees and picking up garbage.

"The word we're using is 'partnerships'," Mr. Beaudin explained. "The real word is relationships. What we're building is relationships so they last longer. We are seeing a change in behaviour. This has all been driven by our leadership, by chief and council past and present who provided the vision. We've borrowed from that. All the events are geared to that vision and are being implemented by good people that care in a manner that is responsive to community wants and needs."

...conference seeks to put an end to stigma

...continued from page 13 wine a night isn't so bad," said Mr. Formanek. But that advice flies heavily in the face of what we now know about alcohol consumption and pregnancy. How many mothers-in-law would still suggest that a beer a day helps build a mother's milk? "As a truck driver, I had to requalify every five years," noted Mr. Formanek. "Doctors don't have any such requirement."

Melanie Francis, who until very recently was the FASD worker at Noojmowin Teg, organized the event over the past few months. She noted how few of her clients even knew that they were pregnant until they were entering their second trimester.

FASD and Canadian Prenatal Nutrition worker Amanda Mishibinijima said that she believes that there are many conversations that need to happen, despite their taboo subject matter. "We need to be talking about contraception," she said. "We need to have these conversations in the community."

FASD tends to be an invisible affliction and, as the term 'spectrum' suggests, it manifests itself in different ways in different.

"The facial features that are associated with some come about in the first 17 to 21 days of a pregnancy," said Ms. Francis. "The majority of the time it is the brain that is affected."

The result is that many of those impacted with FASD "look fine to me." Because the condition is invisible, those who have it are labelled "difficult" or "troublemakers," and not individuals who are in need of special help or services. When the issue is physiological, how does telling someone to 'sit still' help?

"Someone with FASD might be 16, but have the mental capacity of someone who is 10," said Ms. Francis. "So when they are told 'why don't you act your age?' how does that help anyone?" Mr. Formanek noted the divisions and conflict that FASD can bring to a family but he advised everyone to just let it go. "I love my mom," he said. "I can't tell what her circumstances were when she was having me. She is dead now but there is no room in my life for 'blame and shame'."

The invisibility of FASD goes far beyond physical appearances. "Because I speak well, people assume I can catch a bus," said Mr. Formanek. "If I don't have my partner with me, I still can't catch a bus to save my life. I just can't seem to do it. Luckily, I have support."

The isolation of FASD was the worst part of the condition, noted Mr. Formanek. "I went to Czechoslovakia," he said. "I didn't speak a word of the language. They didn't understand me. I realized that nothing had changed. Back home in Canada they didn't understand me either."

Mr. Formanek set up an incredibly successful Facebook site 'Flying With Broken Wings' to help support those dealing with FASD and it has gone a tremendous way toward breaking down that isolation. The site currently has 4,621 members.

SHEGUIANDAH—The high heat made the event feel more like a summer fair, but it did not stop crowds in the hundreds from attending the annual Sheguiandah Fall Fair, held Saturday, September 15 at the Centennial Museum.

"The biggest thing we want to see is smiles," said Norma Hughson, who co-organized the fair alongside Lisa Hallaert, museum curator.

"Lots of friendship happens," added Ms. Hallaert. "Lots of people run into old friends and family at this event."

With a wide variety of activities, it was little wonder that so many people turned out for the annual fair, which was in its eighth year. This year's theme was 'something fishy'; Ms. Hughson said the theme was chosen by accident.

"We were throwing ideas out at a meeting," she said. "Someone made a comment and we didn't hear them correctly. We thought they said 'something fishy' and everyone jumped on it. I think it might have been Pat Julig."

That fishy theme was best seen in the exhibit hall, where individuals had submitted photographs, artwork and sculptures both on-theme and in general categories.

Cole Hughson was a big winner at this year's fair. All of his entries received some rank of ribbon, except one. The young Manitowaning student had a lot of competition from his peers; this year, the genealogy club reached out to schools to promote the fair. That drew a number of students to enter their crafts.

Lyn Valiquette and Marjorie Collie, co-convenors for the school program in the genealogy club, said 14 students entered the competition. They always try to get as many kids from around the Island as possible to increase the competition. They give out four trophies for the various age groups, along with a plaque for the highest number of points.

Next to the exhibit hall were a few indoor vendors and people showing off their artifacts around the halls of the museum. "Rock hound and prospector" Red Butler had a wide array of mineral samples on hand, along with a microscope to see the finer details of a few samples. There were more vendors outside, as well as a few situated inside the barn.

"When we first started there were no vendors, though we had some demos," said Ms. Hughson. "That really has helped with participation."

Marian Hester of Freshisle Fibers was one of the vendors on hand, along with her spouse Todd Bailey who was selling some of his photographs. All of their wool is made on Manitoulin and uses plant dyes for colour. This was their second time at the Sheg fair.

"We love it! There's just wonderful people, and what a fantastic place. They do a great job," said Ms. Hester.

George Williamson and Friends provided music throughout the day, with the 'friends' being Ed Landry and Tom Beamish. Live music and the popular barbecue have been fair staples since the first year, according to Ms. Hughson.

Reviews of the fair were positive. "I always come here because it's my hometown," said Elaine Peck, who still lives in the area. "You always meet people, friends, relatives that you haven't seen for months or years. It's just an awesome thing to do," she said.

Ms. Hallaert noted that the entire fair is wheelchair accessible, because all the buildings are at ground level and the organizers save some parking right by the fair entrance for handicapped parking.

Organizers say they have high hopes for the future of the fair. "We keep hoping it'll grow," said Ms. Hughson. "And it seems to be," adds Ms. Hallaert. "This is only my third year and we've already noticed a difference."

LITTLE CURRENT— The 2018 run of Little Current Cruiser's Net has come to a close, as host Roy Eaton hangs up the microphone to enjoy some well-deserved time off.

People had begun to file into the second-floor conference room at Little Current's downtown Anchor Inn starting around 8:40 am. They had gathered around the long banquet table adorned with freshly-baked muffins, fruit snacks and coffee.

While Mr. Eaton set up his station at the side of the room, the crowd began to grow in numbers and volume as old friends reunited and shared their stories from out on the big water.

Gary and Michelle Holtze volunteered to help transcribe the show's guest list and Mr. Eaton made sure his show notes were in order. Between sips of coffee, Mr. Eaton kept a close eye on his watch as the time ticked ever closer to the top of the hour.

When only 15 seconds remained, Mr. Eaton called the room to order, and the audience fell to a hush. This was the moment for which boaters across the North Channel had been waiting.

The clock struck nine and Mr. Eaton's hand immediately jumped to the voice key on the microphone situated in front of him.

"It's 9 am, and welcome, boaters, to the last Cruiser's Net broadcast for the 2018 season," he said.

Well over 60 people in various locations around the North Channel heard those words—that was the number of boats who had participated in the roll call, but Mr. Eaton knows there are many more listeners who do not participate. Visitors to the studio included Bob and Phyllis Jernstadt from Muskegon, Michigan, Keith Holtze, Kathy Anderson and Michael Coombs, Margaret and Jim Van Camp, Don Mickalko and Anne Westlund.

Mr. Eaton began by acknowledging the boat crews that had joined him in his studio for the show, which included Escape, Gabriel and Slow Motion among several more. Then, he sent out the usual call for any emergency medical or priority traffic, for anyone in need of any assistance. Although nobody on the water called in with any problems, Mr. Eaton raised one final warning about the Heywood Island bear on which The Expositor has previously reported. Next, Mr. Eaton ran through a weather forecast for Little Current and the Environment Canada marine forecast for Georgian Bay. He noted that when the show started this year's run in July, there were two more hours of daylight available.

Mr. Eaton then ran through the major Canadian and international news for the day, with sports updates added at the end. He followed that by looking back at major events that happened that day in years gone past, from the 1994 Irish Republican Army ceasefire to former U.S. President Barack Obama's 2015 proclamation that Mount McKinley, North America's highest peak in Alaska, would be referred to by its traditional Indigenous name, Denali.

Mr. Eaton's Friday program usually includes a local history question in partnership with Turner's general store, with a prize for the first boat with the correct answer. However, that segment wrapped up the previous week.

In commemoration of the end of the season, Mr. Eaton reviewed the history of how Little Current Cruiser's Net host Roy Eaton signed off for another season on August 31.

Cruiser's Net came to be. He heard and participated in sharing Canadian news on a similar station in the Bahamas, when he visited there in 2001 with his wife. In 2003, the Little Current Yacht Club opened, becoming the first yacht club on Manitoulin. The following year, Mr. Eaton started Cruiser's Net, partly as an incentive to encourage people to join the club. He did not keep formal records until the following year, 2005.

Mr. Eaton made note of the 155 burgees hanging around the room, all mementos from the home yacht clubs of visiting boaters who had given them

A Mindemoya evening with concert organist Ian Sadler

by Holly Scott
MINDEMOYA—Those who attended the organ concert with world-renowned musician, Ian Sadler, at St. Francis of Assisi Anglican Church in Mindemoya last month found themselves at a wonderfully satisfying evening of music making.

"That was incredible!" said Jack Varieur, after the concert. "I've never heard anything like this."

Juno award winning organist Ian Sadler began his musical training as a child at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, UK. Before moving to Canada, his final engagement in the UK was to play the organ in the movie, 'Chariots of Fire.'

Mr. Sadler roused the village with the dramatic opening of J.S. Bach's famous 'Tocatta & Fugue in d minor, BWV 565.' The familiar low, growling pedal note was held beneath a huge, rolling chord that blended in with the thunder outside.

Next on the programme was a delightful Baroque Suite, a set of pieces by three masters of the period: 'Finale' (from 'Organ Concerto No. 1 in G') by G.F. Handel; 'Rondeau' (from

Rev. Doug Prebble, rector at St. Francis of Assisi Anglican Church in Mindemoya, speaks with Juno Award winning organist Ian Saddle following Mr. Saddle's organ recital at the church last month at St. Francis church. A capacity crowd enjoyed the program of, largely, music composed for the organ by classical composers.

'Abdelazer') by H. Purcell; and 'Vivace' (from 'Trio Sonata in c minor', BWV 526) by J.S. Bach. These works featured the flute, trumpet and mutation stops, along with rarely heard soft whistles and pedal sounds that were exquisite.

The 'Fantasia in f minor, K. 608' by Mozart was a fantastically complex piece of music, written for a mechanical clock. This lovely piece explored the device of fugue—a reminder that Mozart had studied the music of Bach.

When the performer's two hands and two feet were insufficient, Catharine Sadler assisted with changing the stops at just the right time.

The recital continued with 'Sonata No. 2 in c minor, Op. 65' by F. Mendelssohn, a lyrical work that started with a hint of liveliness in spite of its weighty tempo marking. The music, sometimes minor and sometimes major, moved into bold, big sounds with filigree footwork, through the four movements without stopping between. It closed with a wonderful Fugue, during which I pinched myself for losing track of the entries.

Following the intermission, the audience was treated with the opportunity to sing 'Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah,' the hymn which was chosen twenty years ago when the new Rodgers organ at St. Francis Church was dedicated.

The second half of the program opened with the ceremonial 'Imperial March Op 32,' by Sir Elgar, which was composed for the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria. This grand piece used the full range of the instrument, bold one minute, playful the next and then back to finish with grand dignity.

A lovely contrasting work, the gentle 'Andante Sostenuto' by C.M. Widor followed. This lyrical piece featured the string and flute stops. The complex harmony was performed with full organ and a double pedal melody that was most pleasing. The audience graciously allowed the sounds to hang in the air as the music faded away to end in silence.

The next piece, 'Carillon de Longponts' was composed by Louis Vierne after hearing the bells of the namesake church in France. In this energetic work, we heard the bells first in the driving pedals, then tossed between the hands and feet to finish in a great flourish of virtuosity with full organ.

The 'Elegiac Prelude' by the Canadian composer and teacher Gerald Bales was a delicate miniature with a lovely, singable melody that ended on the softest stops of the organ and lingered on the final chord.

The audience had a great chuckle from hearing Noel Rawsthorne's 'Hornpipe Humoresque,' a collection of 8 or 9 little melodies strung together which sounded like a score from a Popeye cartoon. The audience had its work cut out, trying to keep up with the melodic lines, which became more complex as they were layered over multiple instrumentation. This nautical extravaganza was totally enjoyable, bubbly music that simply whizzed along.

Mr. Sadler ended the concert with a difficult Tocatta, 'The Russian Roundabout' by Georgi Mushel, a suitable flourish to close a fantastic evening. This was a lovingly crafted recital, and evening of exceptional music with an organ virtuoso.

Author Max Arthur interviewed the last 21 British veterans of WWI. They vividly described and reported in their own words the terror, dread and hollowness of combat. These brave men saw many changes throughout their lifetime but their experience in that terrible war always took centre stage. 'Last Post: The Final Word From Our First World War Soldiers' is a remarkable chronicle of the men who were there in the trenches and the heart of battle in the 'war to end all wars.' It is an enduring document and legacy of memory, friendships, bravery and the feeling of general helplessness of ordinary enlisted men caught up in the grinding mechanism of war and the politics that fuel it.

Five hundred years ago the 'book' was one of the greatest creations in the history of human achievement. The 'book' has been harangued and harassed, banned and burned—it's glorious works often sullied by film interpretations. Now a digital tidal wave is threatening even as it finishes steamrolling the music industry beyond recognition. American humorist, Joe Queenan, an avid reader since childhood is on the defence for the written word. 'One For the Books' is his ode to 'books.'

It is a passionate, funny and heartfelt tale that all true book lovers will enjoy.

'Coffin Road' by Scottish novelist Peter May is once again set on the Isle of Harris in the Outer Hebrides Islands. When a man washes up on the beach in bad shape and with amnesia the authorities are hard-pressed for clues to his or history. It is up to local homicide detective, George Gunn to get to the bottom of the mystery. This thriller is complex, fast-paced and looks at the issues of sacrifice and identity.

An unusual marriage proposal by a young, reclusive British lady catches a cash-strapped Earl off guard. The question is, can they make it work for both of them? 'Someone to Wed' by author Mary Balogh is a sweet romantic treat with a cast of appealing characters and some very witty conversations. It was a pleasure to read!

Providence Bay News and Notes

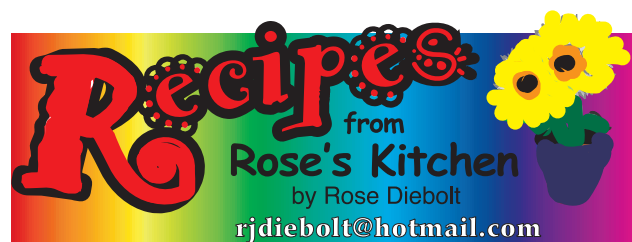

We were blessed with beautiful weekend weather. Many people took advantage of this time to enjoy possibly one last swim of the summer. There were also many fisher people out hoping to land a big salmon as they come in to spawn in the Mindemoya River. Hunting season for waterfowl has opened on the 15th so you may see hunters out in fields looking for geese as they migrate south.

Cheryl Sheppard and Alex Daroczi attended the play 'Come From Away' that has been playing at the Royal Alexandra theatre in Toronto. It is set in the week following the September 11 attacks and tells the true story of what transpired when 38 planes were ordered to land unexpectedly in the small town of Gander, Newfoundland. At one point, one of the Americans commented on the fact that all of the residents of Gander participated in the USA moment of silence following the attacks. I think that many of us remember this moment in history and that not only Gander but many Canadian residents stood in a moment of silence and solidarity with our American neighbours.

If you are looking for activities for your children to participate in this fall and winter, don't forget about curling. Junior curling will be occurring in Providence Bay every Saturday morning from November until March for kids in Junior Kindergarten and up. The cost is only $20 per child. The only equipment required is a helmet (for new curlers) and clean running shoes. They can have fun learning a new sport that they can play for life. The Providence Bay Youth and Junior Curling Club can be contacted on Facebook or by calling 705-377-4647.

Birthday wishes go out to Anna Orford and Morgan Moggy (nee McDermid) who celebrate on Saturday, September 22 and to Crystal Lentir on Tuesday, September 25.

The monthly euchre tournament is being held at the Twilight Seniors Club on Tuesday, September 25. The Summer doesn't seem to want to leave and the gardens are enjoying the extra warmth for growing and ripening. In the cooking department I am not interested in making soup, stews or any kind of casseroles. Simple, at the moment, seems the best. Maybe next week it will be soup weather!!!

Avocado Beet Hummus

The combination sounds iffy but yes it does taste great! Avocados are loaded with heart-healthy fat, the chickpeas are a good protein and the beets are for your liver. If you don't have pickled beets cook up a beet and add a bit of vinegar or extra lime juice at the end.

- 1 (15oz) can chickpeas, well drained
- 2 medium ripe avocados, cored and peeled
- 3 Tbsp each of olive oil, fresh lime juice and tahini or your favourite seed or nut butter
- 1/2 tsp lime zest

- 3 cloves garlic, peeled
- 1/2 tsp each of sea salt, cumin, cayenne pepper
- 1 medium sized pickle beet

Put everything into the food processor and blend until smooth. If it is too thick add a bit of water. Adjust the spices if needed by adding more. Taste and taste again.

Ratatouille

I love making this Mediterranean dish because I get to use the fall vegetables that are in their glory right now. I also don't have to measure—exactly—I just go by the size of the my pot. This recipe freezes very well and it's always worth making more—just a little bit more time on the chopping!!!

1. Vegetables that can be used are: onions, garlic, eggplant, red peppers, zucchini, fresh or canned tomatoes, tomato paste, fresh basil.
2. Use whatever size of pot that you like.
3. Start by sautéing chopped onions and garlic in olive oil until soft; with salt and pepper
4. Add cubed eggplant along with a little more oil and continue to sauté until the eggplant starts to color slightly. Season again.
5. Chop the peppers and add to the pot, stirring regularly.
6. Chop zucchini (a little larger than the other vegetables since it will cook down more quickly). Add to the pot and check seasoning.
7. Add tomatoes, fresh or canned. Add a little tomato paste for a deeper flavour.
8. Add a dash of Worcestershire sauce and Tabasco for extra flavour.
9. Put the lid on and continue to cook on a medium-low heat on top of the stove or in a 325F oven for 45 minutes to an hour.
10. Add chopped fresh basil a few minutes before serving.

play starts at 8 pm and costs $5 per person. All are welcome but you need a partner to join. Enjoy a light lunch after the entertaining card tournament.

Come on out on Tuesday, September 25 and help decorate the community hydro poles. All the materials will be supplied, but if you've got a pumpkin or two and/or some artificial flowers, please bring them along. Let's all pull together and win for the small community again this year.

If you're decorating your home for the Harvest Glory Days, be sure to register by either contacting the Expositor office at 705-368-2744 or by email: expositor@manitoulin.ca or you can fill out the form in the newspaper and mail it in. Our theme this year is "Pajamas in the Pumpkin Patch." If you require some PJs for decorating you can contact Ingrid at 705-377-7800.

Judging will take place the week following Thanksgiving and the deadline for entries is September 29.

Did you remember to mark down the Halloween dance?

If not, do it now. Providence Bay/Spring Bay Lions Club will be hosting the dance on Saturday, October 27. DJ John Roy, light lunch, best dressed prizes, starts at 8 pm to 1 am. Contact Matt Young for more information at 705-377-7149.

If you have something that you would like to contribute to the Providence Bay News and Notes, please let us know. We know the amazing people and things that happen in our community but let's allow everyone to know. If there is an upcoming birthday, anniversary, fundraiser or celebration, please let us know. If there is someone that you would love to give a shout-out to because of the things they do for, in or around our community let us know. You can email Cheryl at prov_chick@hotmail.com or call her at 705-862-1613. Submissions must be received by each Sunday at 3 pm for submission in the following Wednesday publication of the paper. We look forward to hearing from you as gifts during the season.

...Roy Eaton and his Cruiser's Net

Next, it was time for the boater check-ins. Mr. Eaton read a number of text messages he had received, then opened the lines for boaters to call in. He particularly enjoyed hearing from Endorphin in Spider Bay—young Lily handled the radio duties, and Roy said he was pleased to have met them at the Anchor Inn earlier in the summer. He wished her whole family a good year at school—Lily's parents are both teachers.

Mr. Eaton then called out in case anyone had any questions or assistance needed before he began to conclude his show. Since nobody needed any assistance, he gave a brief recap of some of the numbers his show has garnered through the years. In 2005, 342 boats submitted a total of 1,024 calls. Traffic peaked in 2012 with 6,844 calls from 1,022 boats. 2018 numbers were 5,914 calls—Mr. Eaton no longer keeps track of the number of individual boats.

In his usual captivating way, Mr. Eaton drew his show—and the 2018 season—to a close.

"In the Ojibwe language there is no word for goodbye," he began. "And so I say, to old friends and new, to those who have dropped in for a broadcast or two, to those who have helped taking names down, to those who call in but whom I've never met. To those who don't call but regularly listen. To those who have helped their fellow boaters in so many ways this summer. To powerboaters, to sailboaters and to no-boaters at all: Those who listen in on land. To each and every one of you, here's to a lifetime of voyages filled with memorable times and enriching moments. And to each and every one of you, I say for the last time this summer: Fair winds, safe harbours; 73."

As his finger lifted off the transmit key, the room burst into applause and waves of thanks. In a remote setting where interacting with the outside world can be difficult at times, Mr. Eaton is more than just a resource to share key information to keep everyone on the water safe and sound. He is a friend, a member of their crew, and somebody who they know will check on them every morning, right on time.

Tehkummah Talk and Times

Two lovely ladies called in today, Julia and Amy. Their mission spreading the good word. (Monday)

I went with Pauline to Lynda Garness' home for our U.C.W. meeting. We always have such a great time together and of course the food was delicious. We called Bev Lynch. It was her birthday on Tuesday and sang to her. We are missing her from our group and area. Norma checked us out. She may join us?

Back on fall/regular schedule just like the school kids. Doesn't feel like fall yet?

Happy 94th birthday this week, Monday 17th to Raymond Chatwell.

Dorothy Cronk spent a few days visiting Bev and Richard Lynch at their new home in Wilberton. Wednesday evening at the Tehkummah Hall is meet the candidates night.

Glad to hear Gib Pyette is feeling better.

There is no euchre at Sandfield tonight, Wednesday, September 19, will resume next week.

There are so many birds in my back yard and they are hungry! Have the trees ever started since last week, their amazing colour transformation.

Jacob was home for his birthday on Tuesday with girlfriend.

Tomato year, or what? My plot has really produced, about one or more a day since August 1. And still going strong. The jelly beans are amazing, there are four plants in Tara's garden.

Our cribbage had seven tables of fun: high hand, Dorothy Allard, 24; first, Pat and Laura, perfect score, 968; second, Brad and Dorothy, 941; third, Cal and I, 937; low, Hugh and Marilyn, 794; door, Betty Jean, Cal and Brad. And the amazing lunches continue. Thank you all for all help in anyway.

A "run away from home day", Thursday. Started with breakfast at Mum's in Mindemoya. Anita was using the laundromat washing 100? hockey sweaters and socks, so I came back just as she was rounding up! Came home, emptied the van, had a 15-minute nap, headed for Manitowaning, stopped for coffee and bagel at Loco Beanz. Hugh and Barb joined me and we had a great visit. They had gone back home for home repairs. To Freshmart for the smiles and carry out service. I like that store. Home, made a crispy square with pink marshmallows, headed for the Hall where a delicious potluck style buffet was served up prior to bid euchre, a load of fun. Nine and a half tables: first, Janet Knechtal, 232; second, Brad Parkinson, 224; third, Don, 221; low, Brian Sprack, 47; 50/50, Annette; special draws, Hugh Corbett, Barb Lawrence, Dave James and Joe Arnold.

Thanks Mary Case and friends.

Friday night car counting, at the ferry 85 off, but you give the big long truck at least 4 cars more, 27 on and then two cycles and the big green machine!

Dave and Jane are the kindest folk. They are good to me. Lynda and Justin are taking the weekend in Toronto to attend a wedding. Nice waitress, excellent fish and chips.

This was the last Market day for this year. It was quite busy. I just visited a lot and that is a fun thing to do. I did weaken and bought a pecan pie, and it is good. Have no idea what I'll do with the other five pieces.

Clarke was in at the Market, I asked him about his Mum and Dad. They have had a bad week, the loss of a pet and a fall. So, Marlene, hope you are feeling better by the time you read this.

Some thank yous were announced today for Joan and Bob's work in keeping the Market going. To Lori and the Islanders. Today's vendors, Kathleen, family (for Irene), Ken, Amy and of course Mary and her refreshment table, to all vendors of the season.

Of course, I'm in my Lazee Girl chair reflecting on the past hours, busy for me as I kind of got the Hall ready for our after-church pot luck. What a lovely bunch of folks and most wonderful pot-luck buffet to celebrate Barry and Mary's time with us here in Tehkummah. I've got a tear or two as I write. I said a few words about their time here and how we are going to miss them. Accompanied by castanets, my knees knocking. You'd think I'd be used to talking by now. I made notes, so I wouldn't cry? Anyway, is it every 24-years our lives change? Barry said they will take their time driving to their new home in Nova Scotia. We had a special presentation. A memory of Tehkummah Township.

The beautiful cake had "moving on" written on it. Joan and David Wood made it out in time for cake and coffee, they had had their lunch. It was good to see David doing so well. I so had planned to go in to the benefit supper Knox and St. Paul's put-on Saturday evening. I heard it was wonderful. Robbie and Friends music as always was just great. I intended to go after supper here. Turkey for Jacobs 18th birthday. But, I was too tired by then.

We sang happy anniversary to Noreen and Reg, today in church. It was only their 62nd! And wasn't our sermon on perseverance and musically on "Moving On."

Eileen calls this Monday morning to remind me of the birthday party at the Hall tomorrow. She has the clearest voice.

She was telling me too about the wonderful event for Joan and David Wood and the lovely music. She said Debbie and Helen sang just beautifully together. (Sometimes I wish I was two people.)

Welcome back Mustangs! And welcome to any new Mustangs! For those of you that didn't notice there is a new writer of 'Kids In The Hall' this year. For anyone that doesn't know me, my name is Rachael Orford. Some may recognise me (and my jokes) from a previous column I wrote for The Recorder entitled, 'Colts Going Strong!'

There are a few new additions to the staff of Manitoulin Secondary School (MSS) this year including Mr. Lafleur who is the new vice-principal.

On Friday, September 7, the first meeting for anyone interested in Vocal Group was held. If you are interested in being a part of Vocal Group and didn't attend the meeting, please speaking to Mr. Theijsmeijer. Speaking of music.... Why did the music teacher need a ladder? To reach the high notes.

On Monday, September 10, an assembly was held in the cafeteria. All the staff of MSS were introduced to students. Two guest speakers, Danny Lamb and Em Jordan were present for the assembly. Danny Lamb sang for the students and staff before speaking about inclusivity, accessibility and how words have power. Em Jordan sang a few songs including her latest single, 'House of Cards.'

On Thursday, September 13, staff and students were pink to stand up against bullying. A sea of pink could be seen throughout the school in support to those who have been or are being affected by bullying.

Also on Thursday, September 13, a video was played during lunch period for students. The video was advertising the Full Value Fitness Challenge fundraiser that is going to be held on September 29 at MSS. Proceeds will go to support local Pee-Wee and Atom Panther Hockey. If anyone one is interested in participating, first runs are at 9:30 am. If you have any questions please contact Mr. Balfe.

Friday, September 14 was Freeze Friday! Free freezies were available in the cafeteria at lunch.

Monday, September 17 was Picture Day! Everyone came to school ready to smile for the camera!

On Thursday, September 20, a handful of students will be attending We Day in Toronto. We Day is an unparalleled celebration of young people committed to making a difference.

The Mustangs have been very busy over the last couple of weeks. Many teams and clubs are starting up. Boys' volleyball tryouts started the first week of school as well as girls' basketball tryouts. Practices have been running at lunch and after school.

Cross country practices have also started. Anyone that is interested, grab your running shoes and join! The first after school practice was on Monday, September 10.

SHARE/Go Green has started up for the year! Meetings are held Wednesdays with Mrs. Bauer.

Student council still has some positions to be filled. Forms for grade representatives were due on September 13. If you want to join student council and fill some remaining positions, please speak to a staff member or a member of student council.

Upcoming events include, We Day in Toronto, MHCC Headstrong, Full Value Fitness Challenge and a P.D. Day!

Until next time, "Dream and Believe. Learn and Achieve!"

...Tehkummah Talk and Times

...continued from page 10A my walking sticks led me to Lisa's door step where her Mum Elaine LePage was doing an overnight visit. She came over for the farewell for Mary and Barry.

There seems to be a lot of controversy and concerns with our upcoming elections. Hopefully common-sense rules and we do not have a lockdown like the school this past week. Does everything seem a little out of balance anymore? I sit here in my chair and don't even have a remote in my hand, look out the window, watch the birds calmly going about their business of eating and singing quite happily.

I must have left the lid off my garbage can and sunflower seed container. A dead mouse laying on top of the seed, did he overeat? How did he get in there? Did the cat go in and kill him? There are always mysteries. I would rather concern myself with trivial things like that, could old age have anything to do with it?

Two brothers once lived down this way,

One was Do and one was Say.

If streets were dirty, taxes high,

Or schools were crowded, Say would cry.

"Oh, what a town," But brother Do.

Would set to work to make things new.

And while Do worked, Say still would cry

He does it wrong, I know that I Could do it right! So, all the day.

Was heard the clack of brother Say

But this one fact from none was hid

Say, always talked, Do always did.
